ROOSEVELT WOULD BE LIFE PRESIDENT, SAYS THE CZAR OF RUSSIA

WOULD CENTRALIZE POWER

Monarch Tells Surprising Things in Talk With the Countess Tolstoy.

THE Czar of Russia in the most remarkable interview with Countess Sonnia Tolstoy, which follows, declares that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's intentions are imperialistic and that he means to gradually abolish the States of the Union and make of this country an imperialistic Republic. The Czar said that he had discussed Colonel Roosevelt with Kaiser Wilhelm and with the King of England, and that they regarded him to be imperialistic. The Czar decided to Countess Tolstoy that he had heard from people, who are Colonel Roosevelt intimately, that his ambition is to be elected a President for life.

By COUNTESS N. TOLSTOY.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 12.—Two years ago I was the guest of the Russian imperial family, and then I published my conversation with the Czar in some of the foreign newspapers. Since that I have been barred from the Russian court—this most isolated and mysterious home of the world. I have learned that His Majesty did not like the spirit of my interview, although he did not say anything against its detail. Only a few days ago I had again the opportunity to meet the imperial family in an informal way. The day before they took an excursion trip on board of their private yacht to Baltick.

While visiting a high functionary at the court of Peterhof I asked my host how I could meet the children of the Czar, and he at once telephoned to the Czarina to make an appointment for me.

Although I was persuaded that my host would not be able to make an appointment for me to see the royal children, I hoped that the new secretary might not know the reasons of my trouble with the court restrictions; therefore I was anxious to know the result. To my great surprise he replied to my host that I could meet the grandduchess Olga and the little Czarevitch between 3 and 4 o'clock the same afternoon in the park of the palace.

The Czar Seems Embarrassed.

I was triumphant and arrived at the appointed time at the gates of the palace, where an officer of the guard regiment received me politely, and conducted me into the magnificent park. Two nurse governess were playing lawn tennis with the imperial children. Having received me, the children left their play and ran toward me.

"Countess, how do you feel?" they shouted enthusiastically, frankly reaching me their hands. The young Czarevitch whispered in my ear: "The next time you go for a tour around the world let me know, I will secretly join you."

While I was chatting on a bench with the children the Czar and the Czarina came walking in my direction. They were talking in German.

Having noticed me, the Czar seemed to be embarrassed, and said something in a low voice to the Czarina. However, he realized that it would be offensive if they passed me without any attention, and thus they came directly toward me.

Inquires About Tour.

"Your majesty, I am happy to see you again," I said, nodding. "How do you do, Nastasia Ivanovana?" replied the Czar, conventionally glancing at me coolly.

"I heard you were on a trip to the Orient," began the Czar. "That's an interesting tour. I love the Orient, for I saw it during my long journey. It is the cradle of our civilization and art, isn't it?"

"Your majesty, it is fascinating," I replied—we were talking in German.

"Didn't you return through America? I owe one of your postal cards to our children dated from Salt Lake city. That's the home of the American polygamy."

"Yes, your majesty, I returned through America and was in New York when Mr. Roosevelt returned from Africa.

"Is that so?" said the Czar, with apparent interest.

"Did the crowd cheer him enthusiastically? I heard he was received with royal honors—I mean, received as a democratic people like the Americans never pretend to be disposed to receive their Presidents.

Children of the "400" Have a Gay Time Celebrating at Newport Villa.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—The eighth birthday of little James Henry Van Alen, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Van Alen, was celebrated by a host of children of the "Four Hundred" at the Van Alen estate, "Wakehurst Villa," to-day with a lawn party and amusements, costing at least $2,500. Games of all kinds and a grand march were enjoyed, followed by a circus, dogadow, magician performance, and a flag race, in which silver cups were given as prizes. Children of the following prominent families were present among others: Biddles of Philadelphia, Havemeyer's of New York, the Gerry's, Henry Clews, 3d, and the Livermores. The grandfather of the boy, James J. Van Alen was present at the party.

FITZGERALD AT CAPE COD.

Mayor Sings "Sweet Adeline" at Woods Hole Clambake.

WOODS HOLE, Aug. 27.—The annual clambake of the Ram Island Clambake Association, a non-organization of the Woods Hole Yacht Club, was held here this evening. There were about two hundred guests at the feast of steamed clams and lobsters. There was speaking by United States Fish Commissioner George M. Bowers, Fish Culturist J. K. P. Purdum, Ex-Senator Walter O. Ilsworth, Judge Charles C. Paine of Ipswich, Capt. R. C. Johnson of the Revenue Cutter Acushnet, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston and others. Mayor Fitzgerald made a stirring speech in praise of Cape Cod as a Summer resort section. He urged all to assist in boosting New England for Summer tourists. He sang "Sweet Adeline" without accompaniment, the other guests joining in the chorus.

VANDERBILT IMPROVING.

Alarming Rumors of Illness Are Contradicted.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—Positive denial was made at Sandy Point Farm tonight that there was any truth in the report that Mrs. Vanderbilt and her daughters, Countess Szechenyi had been summoned from Hungary because of Reginald Vanderbilt's illness. It was stated that Mr. Vanderbilt had passed a comfortable day, and his condition was better and very satisfactory.

Mrs. Pembroke Jones, who is suffering from a mild attack of typhoid fever, was brighter to-day.

AMOS ON THE CAPE!

Amos Who? Why, A. Mosquito, and Many of Him.

PLEASANT LAKE, Aug. 27.—Mosquitoes have raided Cape Cod in such large swarms that during the last few days they have proved a great hindrance to work everywhere out of doors. The pests have not been so thick on the Cape before for several years. Millions upon millions now lurk about the woods and bushes, streams and ponds. They are very annoying to the cranberry pickers on the bogs. It is thought that as soon as a cool spell comes they will all disappear.

MENDOZA QUITS.

Leaves Race for President of Panama in Interest of Harmony.

PANAMA, Aug. 27.—Dr. Carlos Mendoza announced to-day his retirement as a candidate for the position of acting president of the Republic, for which he is considered constitutionally ineligible by the United States. Dr. Mendoza, who is a negro, and his friends had earlier determined to disregard the reported opposition of the American Government. With Dr. Mendoza out of the race, the candidates with the greatest chances for election are Samuel Lewis, Conservative, and Belisario Barrea, Liberal.

WILLARD MAKES FLIGHTS.

GREENFIELD, Aug. 27.—Charles F. Willard, the Boston aviator, made two successful flights in his Curtis biplane at Hockdam aviation field this afternoon before 3,000 spectators. During his first exhibition flight, the aviator rose to a height of a hundred feet, remaining in the air for about three and a half minutes. His second flight took him several hundred feet into the air, this time the machine soaring over the field for five minutes.

Boy, 7, Kills Cousin.

FRANKLIN, Aug. 27.—Pietro Longobardi, six, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Longobardi, of Chestnut street, was shot and almost instantly killed in front of his home to-day by his cousin, Anthony Longobardi, seven years old. Anthony was handling his father's shotgun, which something caught the trigger. The injured boy died in his mother's arms.

MOTHER APPEALS TO TAFT TO FREE HER SON

Poor Woman Says Boy Who Deserted Enlisted Without Her Knowledge.

JOINED ARMY AT SIXTEEN

Now He Is Serving a Sentence of Two and a Half Years at Fort Banks.

MRS. CELIA L. B. HUBBARD, of No. 10 Chester place, South End, the elated last night that she would make an appeal to President Taft to liberate her eighteen-year-old son, now serving a two and a half year sentence at Fort Warren for deserting from the regular army, in which his mother says he enlisted as a minor without her consent.

Behind the efforts of the poor woman to get her son's liberty is a pitiful story of fighting to keep a roof over the mother's head and those of her small children. Mrs. Hubbard also declares that the State Board of Charities, which had charge of the boy, allowed him to enlist in the army, knowing that he was not of legal age.

Son Her Sole Support.

"My my son Edwin was my sole support," declared the mother with a quiver of pain in her voice. "I am sick and the government can afford to give him to me. I need him to help take care of myself and these three other children.

"I am getting weaker and weaker and it is only a matter of a short time if I keep on until I break down, and then there will be no one to take care of the children. Edwin is a good boy. When he was arrested he was working and helping us.

"I have not been able even to see my boy in the military prison. I hope he will be liberated. I think that if President Taft knew the facts he would let him go.

"I really do not see how the boy ever was ever received as a soldier. I don't see how he could pass the physical test. He was a mere shadow of a boy. He is only 5 feet 3 inches in height. He weighed only about 100 pounds.

"Surely the big United States can give me back that little bit of a boy who was not of age—was nothing but a mere child when he was accepted as a soldier.

Enlisted at Sixteen.

"Edwin enlisted in Boston on November eleventh, 1907. He was then sixteen. He was sent to Fort Sheridan. That is in Illinois, near Chicago. He could not stand the life and deserted after he had been there a year.

"My son came home to Boston and secured work at a shoe factory in Everett where he was employed in the shipping department, at a salary of $6 a week. He received a raise to $8. He was arrested at the factory April 21, of this year, by the Everett police, charged with being a deserter from the army. He was sent to Fort Banks where he waited two months for the court-martial, which sentenced him to two and one-half years imprisonment. At the court-martial, which lasted two days I told my story to the officers of how the boy had been abused from childhood by his father and how as a minor he enlisted in the army at the suggestion of the State Board of Charities.

Sent to Fort Banks.

"Edwin was to be sent to Fort Leavenworth when Lawyer William A. Brade brought about a suspension of the transfer and he was sent to Fort Warren to await trial before the United States Circuit Court before which I have brought habeas corpus proceedings for the liberty of the boy. The court hearing is to come off on September 6.

"At the age of six Edwin was placed in the care of the State Board of Charities. He remained there until he was fifteen. He came home in April, 1907. His father came home from the House of Correction about this time, and he treated the boy so badly that the boy appealed to the State Board of Charities for protection.

"The Board, knowing the circumstances of the case, and having his birth record, allowed his enlistment in the army without my consent."

Body Found in Harbor.

The decomposed body of a man, supposed to be Edward N. Hanan, who was drowned off the fishing steamer King Philip on August 10, was found floating in the harbor off Green Island by the police of Division 8 yesterday afternoon.

MORGAN AND ALDRICH IN MYSTERIOUS CONFERENCE

MEET IN NEWPORT HARBOR

Neither Has a Word to Say Afterward as to What They Conferred on or Why.

NEWPORT, Aug. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan and Senator Nelson W. Aldrich had a mysterious conference in the cabin of the former's yacht, Corsair, this afternoon, in the harbor here.

This meeting of the financier, who has been called the Boss of the United States, and the representative of the United States Government who engineered the present tariff law, at this crucial time in the history of the Republican party, is regarded by business men and politicians as being momentous in character.

Both men refused absolutely to give out any information as to the nature of the talk between them. They did not even deign to deny that politics was touched upon. They simply turned down the reporters who tried to interview them with decisive curtness.

It was apparent that the meeting between the two giants in the financial and political world was the result of a prearrangement. It is believed that it was held out in the bay so that it might be kept secret if possible and if not that, that the two men could be secure from interruption or intrusion.

Meet Aboard the Corsair.

Senator Aldrich arrived here this afternoon in his yacht, the O-Wee-Ka. He had been spending some time along the coast to the north yachting, going as far as Bar Harbor, stopping at Beverly a week ago and having a talk with President Taft. He returned to Rhode Island by train.

So that if the two distinguished men talked politics, the Senator was in a position to tell Mr. Morgan how the President stands on matters that are being discussed very prominently at the present time.

The O-Wee-Ka steamed into the bay and sailed directly for the Corsair. It was only a few minutes until the Senator was seen in a small naphtha launch shooting across the intervening space between the two yachts. The Senator was welcomed aboard the Corsair by Mr. Morgan in person.

The meeting of the two men was plainly visible to those in the harbor. There was an eager, hearty handshake, as greetings were exchanged. Then Mr. Morgan was seen to slap the Senator familiarly on the back as though in hearty approval of something. For a few minutes the two men talked on the deck. Then they went below and sought the further privacy of the Corsair's luxurious cabin.

Morgan "Has Nothing to Say."

It was three hours later when the two men emerged. It is pretty safe to say that the two dyed-in-the-wool Republicans in the minds of the two men were fue things they talked about—business and politics.

Men who should know say that Mr. Morgan has wanted to have a talk with Mr. Aldrich for some time. It is believed that the financier sent word to the Senator that this afternoon would be a fine chance for them to talk things over.

Earlier in the day a throng of newspaper men tried to get an interview with Mr. Morgan. The reporters sailed out to the Corsair in launches. This is what they got:

"Mr. Morgan has nothing to say."

This meant that he had nothing to say to the newspaper men, but he apparently had a lot to say to Senator Aldrich.

There was much speculation here tonight about the meeting between the two men. Everybody who knows anything about them knows that they do not talk about social matters for three hours, three minutes being about all that either of them would require to dispose of anything of such a frivolous nature.

The arrival of Thomas Fortune Ryan, another New York financier, to-day added to the gossip among those who like to chat about the great world of money. Mr. Ryan was accompanied by his wife. They are stopping at the New Cliffs Hotel.

SHERMAN IN ILLINOIS.

Vice President Addresses 6,000 People at Weldon Springs.

CLINTON, Ill., Aug. 27.—Vice-President Sherman arrived here at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and was driven to Weldon Springs, where he addressed an audience of 6,000 people.

PATRIOTIC RUSSIAN WOMAN FIGHTING TO LIBERATE WEZOSOL

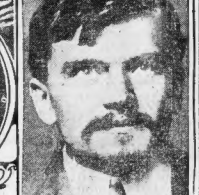
MRS. JOHN KUNDSIN

JOSEPH MICHELMAN



JULIUS WEZOSOL

Mrs. John Kundsin Declares Accused Man Will Never Be Taken to Russia.

THE love of liberty that glows in the heart of Mrs. John Kundsin was responsible for the liberation from the Charles Street Jail of Julius Wezosol, arrested at the instance of the Russian government for the alleged participation in the robbery of the Czar's treasure train at Tiflis, Russia, three years ago, and if he is prevented from being taken back to Russia it will be largely owing to the efforts of this woman.

In Faneuil Hall there is to be a mass meeting on the evening of September 8, when Wezosol will tell his story—a story in which he denies that he was in Russia at the time of the robbery at Tiflis. Mrs. Kundsin will make an appeal to her countrymen who live under the folds of the American flag to help her save Wezosol from the Czar's clutches, and others will participate in the meeting to formulate a plan to carry on the same kind of a fight for Wezosol that was made successfully in behalf of Jan Janoff Pouren in New York.

$250,000 Was Stolen.

The robbery in which it is charged Wezosol played a part took place in Russia in December, 1907. About $250,000 was stolen. Some of the stolen money was traced to Wezosol by Chief Wilkie of the Secret Service department at Washington. He declares that a friend sent him the money from Germany. He will not tell the name of the friend.

When arrested Wezosol lived in the family of Mrs. Kundsin at No. 42 Pratt road, Squantum. Modestly discussing her part in the work that has been done for Wezosol, yesterday, Mrs. Kundsin said:

"I did what every patriotic Russian woman would do in a similar situation. This young man came to our home, not a fugitive from justice, but a learned, high-minded Russian patriot. He came to our home as thousands of young Russians come to this country, fleeing the oppression and the tyranny of the Czar.

"He has not the instincts of a criminal, and surely he does not look to be one. He was far away from Tiflis when the money of the imperial treasury was confiscated. How, then, can Russia get him back?

"And how strange it is, too, that in this land of the free, United States officers and United States attorneys are striving to send him back to Russia and into the clutches of the Czar.

"We from Russia know, and the Amer-

WIRELESS MESSAGE FROM AN AEROPLANE

SHEEPSHEAD BAY RACE TRACK, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The first wireless message ever successfully sent from an aeroplane was transmitted late this afternoon by J. A. D. McCurdy, from a Curtiss biplane, 500 feet in the air and a mile from the receiving point, to Operator H. M. Morton and 2Mjor Samuel Reber, of the United States Signal Corps in the press stand. McCurdy, after two or three attempts, succeeded in transmitting he following:

"McCurdy."

The most spectacular of the ten flights made during the afternoon was the journey of Eugene Ely fromthe aviation grounds to Manhattan Beach, where he alighted, ate dinner and made a successful return.

FOR MORSE'S PARDON.

Wife on Way From Atlanta and May See Washington Officials.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Mrs. Charles W. Morse is supposed to be on her way North to-day from Atlanta, Ga., where she visited her husband at the Federal penitentiary, and she may stop in Washington to confer with the department of justice officials, regarding the application for the banker's pardon. Her activity has been such that hundreds have written letters to President Taft asking that Morse be given his freedom.

When the petition and letters will be submitted to the President has not yet been decided. The general impression here is that the President will not grant a pardon.

TWO TRAINMEN KILLED.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 27.—Two trainmen were killed today when a Grand Trunk immigrant train ran through an open switch and demolished a yard engine.

INCENDIARY IN BRIGHTON IS HUNTED BY POLICE

Property of A. J. Furbush, a Wealthy Horse Owner, Set Five Times in Month; Two More Fires Set Last Night

Rigid Investigation Started by State Officials to Solve the Strange Case; Two Suspects Make Escape in Darkness

TWO fires discovered in Brighton last night in property owned by A. J. Furbush, the rich horse man, and in a stable where some of his valuable horses were kept, and the chasing of two suspicious men from another stable where other horses of Mr. Furbush were housed, led the police to the belief that firebugs aiming vengence at the horse owner were not only responsible for the blazes but that they set three other fires in his property within a month.

One of these fires was on Thursday night when damage was done that amounted to about $25,000. That was in the large livery stable and barn of Mr. Furbush near his home. Many valuable horses were barely saved.

The fires started last night at 8:15 o'clock. The first one was in a one-story frame structure at No. 23 Snow street. The damage was small because of the promptness with which the firemen reached the scene.

Discovered by Police.

At 10:16 the second fire was discovered. It was in the stable owned by Michael O'Keefe and kept at No. 344 Market street. The stable is a two-story affair. It contained several of the horses of Mr. Furbush that had been taken there from the burning stable on Thursday night.

Policeman P. J. Quinn found the are blazing in O'Keefe's place, sent in an alarm and the firemen soon put it out. The policeman was convinced that this fire was the work of an incendiary.

It was about 10:45 when J. Savory, a chauffeur for Harold Goodnough, heard some suspicious sounds near Mr. Goodnough's automobile stable in Brighton. Near this building some of the most valuable of Mr. Furbush's horses were stabled. Savory suspected that some one was trying to fire the barn where the horses were, and he ran out just in time to see a man around a corner of the barn. He heard the man say in an undertone:

"Cheese it!"

This man was about thirty years of age, wore a slouch hat and a black coat. A smaller man soon joined him. Savory ran after the two men, but they jumped a fence and disappeared in the darkness.

The men were running toward Foster street when Savory lost saw them. Savory then ran back and got Goodnough and they jumped into his big touring car and hurried to the Brighton police station. They reached there at 11:30. The police sent out a force to look for the two men that had been seen about the Goodnough buildings.

On August 4, at 8 o'clock in the evening, another fire was discovered in the same wooden building in which flames were first found last night. Damage at this fire amounted to about $100.

At 3:20 o'clock yesterday morning fire was discovered in a section of the big Furbush stable that was partly destroyed on Thursday night. This fire was put out without much trouble.

The facts gathered soon after the investigation began last night have led the police to the belief that Mr. Furbush has been the victim of a firebug. The fires that had occurred previous to that of last night were thought to have been caused either by accident or by spontaneous combustion. It is thought now that all of them were set purposely.

Whether Mr. Furbush has an enemy who has been attempting to wreak vengence for some imaginary wrong upon him in this manner or whether the fires have been set by some person who is irresponsible the police were unable to determine as a result of last night's work.

Fire Started in Excelsior.

Last night's fire started at 8:15 o'clock. When the firemen reached the scene they found some excelsior had been ignited in the one-story wooden building which has been used as a machine shop, and the structure was burning brightly. The firemen soon quenched the flames. The damage was small.

Mr. Furbush was not home when the fire happened last night. Mrs. Furbush, who with her daughter Louise, had a most thrilling experience at the dangerous fire of Thursday night, made the following statement to a reporter of the Sunday American:

INCENDIARIES HUNTED BY BRIGHTON POLICE AS TORCH IS TWICE APPLIED

"I am convinced that the fire tonight was of incendiary origin. It seems very strange to me that so many fires have occurred in property owned by us within the past few weeks. Of course we cannot say positively as to whether these fires have been set or not.

"I entertain fears of no one who any person should want to injure us in this despicable manner. Fortunately tonight the fire was discovered so quickly and the firemen arrived upon the scene with such promptness that the blaze was extinguished before it had done any serious damage.

"But the fire of Thursday night was an entirely different matter. I never want to pass through any such trying experience again. My daughter and myself have hardly recovered yet from the great strain that resulted from that fearful ordeal.

"The fire tonight was in an wooden structure in the rear of the stable and was used as a machine shop. This same building was on fire on the night of August 4 in practically the same spot. At that time the fire was discovered a little earlier in the evening. We thought nothing of it at the time—that is, not the entertained no suspicion that any one had set the fire. But since that time we have had every reason to change our minds.

"We certainly will see to it that the proper authorities make a careful investigation of the fires that have occurred in our property."

JACK RYAN CAPTAIN OF DARTMOUTH TEAM

HANOVER, N. H., Aug. 27.—Jack Ryan, of Waterbury, end halfback of the Dartmouth football team, who has been elected captain of the team by a small vote. He takes the place of Jack Marks, who was attending college for his failure to take exams. Ryan is a fast man and has played for two years with the team, being in the Dartmouth-Princeton contests.

Ryan won out over Ralph Sherwin and Jack Fitzgerald, both popular stars of last year. Ryan was particularly good in basketball and his experience will stand him in good stead in the new football game. He has a good eye and is very active on his feet besides being a young man of cool judgment.

Holden, the former fullback who played brilliantly in the Princeton game two years ago, has returned to college, after a year's absence, and will come out for his old position. With "Dutch" Warrends, the kicking "phenom" of last year's freshman team, as new backfield material, the green will be very strong behind the line this Fall.

MISS HOOPER GETS HER $35,000 JEWEL

The recovery of her $35,000 diamond pendant and pearl chain made Miss Helen Hooper one of the happiest of women yesterday. Miss Hooper, who is one of the richest women in New England, lost the jewels when on a sleighing party between Manchester and Beverly Farms on January 25. The jewel found and offered for sale to Jeweler Fred Cutter of Somerville. Through whose information the treasure was recovered by the owner, Miss Hooper expressed that no action be taken against the man who offered it for sale.

For months detectives scurried for the pendant in vain. Finally Miss Hooper advertised, offering a reward of $5,000 for its return. It is not known whether Mr. Cutter will get the reward.

Edmund Scott Dead.

Edmund Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Scott, of No. 78 Medford street, Charlestown, died at his home when within a month of attaining his majority. The funeral will take place tomorrow with a solemn High mass of requiem in St. Catherine's Church. Mr. Scott, a young man, had been employed with the New England Telephone Company as a draftsman. He was a graduate of the Mechanic Arts High School.

Dying Child Cries "Mamma" in Hospital But Mamma is Lost

Woman Takes Baby Girl to Relief Station and Disappears Without Telling Her Address.

Dying three-year-old Louise Reppucci is sounding now crying in Dallas for her mamma down at the Relief Hospital, but her mamma has gone, and the doctors can't find her.

The little thing was evidently run over in one of the congested North End streets or fell from a building, but the people at the hospital don't know. Her mother brought Louise into the hospital yesterday, but after an ex, gave her name in broken English and then disappeared. She neglected to give her address, and did not again visit the hospital.

The child was unconscious when admitted to the hospital and has been delirious since. The physicians think she cannot recover.

THREE BOSTON BOATS TO RACE NEW YORKERS

Picked Yachts From Both Cities Meet at Gravesend Bay This Week.

Three of the fastest thirty-one rating boats, Class R, in Massachusetts waters will go over to New York and start Wednesday as a team against three of the pick of the New York fleet, to start in the open races to be sailed at Gravesend Bay during the race week of the Atlantic Yacht Club of New York.

These boats have been racing for the Lipton Trophy all this season and of the three the Amoret has shown the best form. All three are fast and will give the New Yorkers all the racing they want from the week is over.

Both the Amoret and Mavourneen are both new yachts this season. The latter thirty-one footer went over on New York a couple of weeks ago and held her own with the best of the class in that locality, losing the trophy by only one point.

ROYAL STOKERS ADRIFT.

Chief Engineer Cahill, tied at the ankles, a table cloth of red and white squares about their waists, and wearing turbans, two members of the royal family of Ceylon, Peter Fernandez, 29, and his aristocratic companion, Ranman, aged 17, after an involuntary eight-seeing tour of the city are held in the immigration station at desert, awaiting orders from the steamship Indramayo, where their highnesses were employed as stokers.

Peter Fernandez, C. E. coal passers, and Ranman, while their vessel was in port, went ashore to sell a necklace of shell. They got into their regalia and stayed ashore until their steamer had left for New York. Both are full-blooded Tamils and the first of their race to enter this port. Word was sent out to Captain Thirkelolf of the steamer to come after his men.

"COLD WAVE" OVER.

We Had It Bad, but It'll Be Warmer Today, Maybe.

So awful cold wave we had, wasn't it?

Mr. Forecaster said we were in for a spell of cool weather, and he got it. Gotham got it worse. Though the mercury slumped thirty degrees here, from eighty-four to fifty-four, only to climb right up yesterday in the teeth of a cool wind, New Yorkers had the coldest August 27th on record for forty years—except for four other similar occasions—why it was only fifty-seven degrees Fahrenheit on Manhattan Island yesterday, and the lowest temperature for the month ever recorded was fifty-one.

The chill, if you can call it such, is felt all over the Northeast. But a chill generally follows in a fever, and we've had enough fever to last us. The Weather Bureau promises fair, warmer Sunday, with light breezes.

DENIES KIDNAPPING.

Dr. Dorchester Explains Incident of Miss Sheppard of Scranton.

OAK BLUFFS, Mass., Aug. 27.—Dr. Dorchester on the piazza of his hotel said tonight with reference to the kidnapping of Miss Sheppard of Scranton:

"The stories in New York papers of Miss Sheppard's being kidnapped while at Oak Bluffs are nothing else. Nothing of the sort was even attempted. While in Boston en route to Oak Bluffs a suspicious man insulted Miss Sheppard and she was looking into store windows. The cold reception he received from the young lady, the refusal given by Mrs. Blackmar, the nurse of Mrs. Sheppard and other company aroused him to misery with threat of calling the police soon closed the incident."

BUILDING REST HOUSE.

An Episcopal Vacation Home Is Started at Swansea.

SWANSEA, Aug. 27.—Work has been begun on the "Rest House" for Episcopal ministers and their wives. It will be two and one-half stories high and the inside measurements will be 32x93. The cost of the building will be in the neighborhood of $25,000 and $5,000 will be spent for the furnishings. Bishop William Lawrence is president of the board of trustees. The home will open in the spring.

WOMAN IN DEFENSE OF THE ACCUSED RUSSIAN

lean people do not know just what it would mean for any politically active Russian to be carried back to the realms of the Czar. The circumstances in the case who offended simply in being patriotic are too awful even to think about. It was one of the happiest moments of my life when I was able to get Kundsin out of Wegland and have him safely in our home. And to think, too, that this said man secured in a few hours and from Russians eight here in Boston. Not from Bolsheviki or Jews, either, but ordinary laborers, working girls and poor men, who divested from their savings belonging in the Immigrant of the Imprisoned man.

"Shall I be at the mass meeting? The whole story of how the Czar became the police do things in Russia, as well as the terror of Russian oppression will be told and Mr. Wegood's story of his own particular case will appear."

Wegood, discussing his case, declared yesterday that he was never in difficulty in his life. He said that the Russian police agreed to him were paid to do his bidding by a friend to negotiate. He said he landed in New York from the other side last October. He came almost directly to Boston. He said he had been active in working for the Proletariat, a patriotic Russian paper. Mr. Kundsin was a friend of Mr. Wegood and, having charge of the paper, got the Russian the job. Continuing, Wegood said:

Says He Was Never in Tiflis.

"I am out there now with Mr. and Mrs. Kundsin, and I feel confident as can be that I will not be turned over to the Russian authorities. How can I be when I was never in Tiflis when the riding occurred but was far away in Zurich?

"The legal matters involved in my case due to the treaty between the United States and Russia will be amply taken care of by my counsel. I have no fear of being sent back to Russia, and I'll tell my whole story to the American people in Faneuil Hall. There liberty for America was founded and there I know I will have a responsive gathering of lovers of liberty. I am not a criminal.

"In connection with this affair at Tiflis there were made in Stockholm, Paris and London, but all of these countries refused to extradite the patriotic Russians asked for the Czar. I do not believe that I had any great republic with similar laws involved and similar reasons to offer, will do so. Sweden, France and England refused to do so.

Joseph Michelman, Wegood's counsel, said:

"Will Never Go Back

"Wegood will never go back to Russia. The treaty was proclaimed on June 5, 1893, gives him two defenses. He is not a fugitive from justice, because he was not in Russia at the time of the Tiflis affair, and the treaty provides on extradition for deportation proceedings for only fugitives and anarchists and there will be no claim made that Wegood was ever an anarchist. It would be necessary to get Wegood back to prove that he committed the crime in the territory of the Czar. This is hardly according to the treaty. Wegood committed any offence at all, it would be necessary to get the United States treaty provides that no surrender of a man will be made to the place if the offense is of a political character. No evidence has been presented from the other side which signs have been signed by a magistrate or judge detailing the evidence against a person held on the charge. The only affidavits cannot be truthfully forthcoming. It would be an outrage on justice as well as a violation of our treaty rights, if Wegood were sent back to Russia."

HONOR ROSE PITONOF.

She Awards Swimming Prizes at Dorchester.

Nearly 7,000 people attended the Rose Pitonof Day races held at Tenean Beach, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon. The contestants in the numerous swimming events were greatly cheered by their adherents and the principal figure at the affair was little Rose Pitonof, accompanied by her mother, Instructor George DeCost, who were met at the train at Neponset Hill station by a committee under Maurice Smith, the present instructor at the Tenean bathhouses, and nearly 5,000 people, who escorted her to the beach where she awarded eight handsome cups as first prizes for the other similar occasions—why it was only fifty-seven degrees Fahrenheit on Manhattan Island yesterday, and the lowest temperature for the month ever recorded was fifty-one.

The chill, if you can call it such, is felt all over the Northeast. But a chill generally follows in a fever, and we've had enough fever to last us. The Weather Bureau promises fair, warmer Sunday, with light breezes.

Following are the events and winners:

Junior diving for boys—William Waters, first; Edward Shea, second.

PENSION STOPS SUICIDE.

Widow Intended to End Life When Funds Were Gone.

DENVER, Aug. 27.—When a reporter visited the little cash room in the office of the home of Mrs. Mary du Vote and told her that the pensioning had awarded her $840 back pension and an allowance of $12 a month for the remainder of her life, Mrs. du Vote fainted. After recovering she aged woman went to a bureau and, taking up a small bottle, poured its contents, laudanum, upon the floor.

She said she had been struggling against poverty for years and two weeks ago purchased the poison and her life insurance last cent was gone.

"I don't need it now," she smiled as she emptied the vial.

PICKPOCKETS BUSY.

Brighton Man is Relieved of $9 in Tremont Street Theatre.

Pickpockets were busy last evening and as a result the police of the City Hall Avenue Station are looking for a number of the light-fingered gentry about twenty-five years old, who relieved Albert E. Cobb of No. 7 Lawrence place, Brighton, of a pocketbook containing $9, while he was watching the moving picture show in the Tremont Theatre at 40 Tremont street. Cobb said that he was jostled by several men and soon after missed his pocketbook.

Boy Bicyclist Hurt.

QUINCY, Aug. 28.—While riding on the front handle-bar of a bicycle driven by his chum, Henry Kasper, twelve-year-old son of George Kasper, was thrown to the ground. He was knocked unconscious and sustained a severe scalp wound. The boy was taken in an ambulance to the Quincy Hospital.

ROOSEVELT WOULD BE LIFE PRESIDENT, SAYS THE CZAR

have heard from Kaiser Wilhelm and the King of England that Roosevelt is a very interesting mon-aristocratic and imperialistic in one way, but very strange and democratic in his manners.

"I have heard from the people who are high in the confidence that Roosevelt's ambition is to be elected a President for life. He has a wonderful power to dominate the American people."

"Indeed he has," I admitted.

"Imperialistic in His Intentions."

"Well I will tell you," said the Czar. "Roosevelt has won the crowd because of his democratic air and he has the American upper class because of his conservative tendencies. I know that in his intentions Roosevelt is imperialistic, and his theory is to centralize the American Government in the manner of Germany.

"I have heard that he has said to Kaiser Wilhelm that, to prevent a social revolution between the capital and labor in America, the great movement is the only hope. His idea is that the States should be abolished little by little by the national government and the United States should become an imperialistic republic.

"Now, tell me, are the people in America for Roosevelt for President? What do the people have against Taft? I met Mr. Taft, you know—he is a very charming man. I suppose he is too gentle and conciliatory for a people like these bully Americans. The King of England has told me that an average American is the most superficial and the most inflated man he ever met."

"Your Majesty, the Americans I met were highly educated and men with good characters. I don't know that they are so particularly inflated. Certainly people are superficial everywhere," I objected.

"Lincoln and Emerson."

"That's true," replied the Czar, "but never so much as the Americans. Take for instance their interviews. I am stage, or look at their popular political leaders. Since Lincoln and Emerson there is nothing in all the American life which is higher or later may dominate the whole world. The American superficiality and sensationalism, avarice and other such factors are due to the north of the last century, but generations more and the new world will be the world.

"So you are an enthusiastic admirer of the American spirit?" I said to the Czar.

"Yes, I admire it. It is rebellious and democratic and tends to do away with every vestige of class. It ships ahead by a magnificent people, including the children of our rebels, criminals, I mean—escaped Russian exiles, and they had a very great career."

"If you like my dear, you should not mix politics with art and literature," interrupted the Czarina. "You know nobody has to be the best writers and artists have been criminals, practically."

I Dislike the American Spirit.

"I can't look at the work of criminals, even if it is a masterpiece. Anyhow, I dislike the American spirit. I find it becomes imperialistic," was the reply. "Did you meet Mark Twain? He was a wonderful writer. I have just finished one of his books, 'Innocents Abroad.' He only really became silent and pondered. I remember that I was told by Ambassador Hay that the great American humorists. Please tell me did you ever meet Jews in New York city," he went on. "I've heard that the powerful of the New York inhabitants are Jews. But a Jew in America becomes an American. In Russia a Jew remains a Jew."

It was apparent that the Czar was bitter against Roosevelt, and I recalled a few minutes some local subjects, I ventured the question: "Do you enjoy hunting in the Duma getting along?"

"No, I don't. I am now getting to be a desirable institution. There are a few tyrannical Czars, but the majority are loyal and good men. Just recently they slaughtered their pigtails. I am very glad that at last we got rid of a danger, and I think we have shown ourselves, recently, in a few years we shall be above the owners of Persia."

"Our Affairs with Japan."

"Insofar our aspects are bright. Only in Chinese affairs we are unsettled. I don't understand what is the idea of the Americans in their attempt to meddle in our politics in China. They should not interfere in Japan's affairs. That we can settle with Japan. I told some time to Mr. Taft, Ivesaky, the foreign minister."

"You don't know him, my sister is to marry Mr. Nagoy," said the Czarina. "She did not listen to me and has gone to Japan now she is sick of that simplicity. She will be glad to see you if you go to Moscow. There are new rumors in Germany that we have formed a league of Emperors in favor of sympathy with the woman suffrage movement. How silly and stupid."

"I shall be glad to see her," I said. "I'll call upon her." I recalled the fact that the American theatrical managers have signed for the next season many of our ballet dancers for an American tour? I cannot understand how an audience can enjoy one or two ballet dancers on the stage while their appearance has only form to a group. That shows how childish minded the Americans are. We have a dancer for his or her sensational novelty. I have seen the best of the dancers in Moscow in St. Petersburg."

"I don't need it now," she smiled as she emptied the vial.

"Good-bye."

DEER NUMEROUS FOR MAINE HUNT SEASON

BANGOR, Me., Aug. 27.—From all reports and indications the deer hunters are going to have a great time in the Maine woods this Fall. A Bangor sportsman who has just returned from a trip up North reports deer in numerous evergreens, even in localities where for several years they have been scarce.

"From my observations I believe that the deer more about to a much greater extent than is generally supposed. But their migrations are comparatively short and their movements always have been entirely within the limits of Maine. Whenever food is abundant they will increase and wherever they can feed to the best advantage, there they will be found. At one time they almost vanished from the more settled portions of the State and could be found only in the deep woods, but this year they are extremely numerous, not only in the forest country, but on the cleared lands as well.

"The reasons for the abundance of deer this season are various. Deer feed on young roots, shrubs and certain kinds of forest country, but on the cleared lands as well.

"The reasons for the abundance of deer this season are various. Deer feed on young roots, shrubs and certain kinds of forest growth and where new growth has sprung up in cutted land. In the unprecedentedly dry season of two years ago many of the forested counties of Maine were swept by fires. Since then a new growth has started. This year is in the most luxuriant stage for deer feeding.

"Last winter was an extraordinarily mild in northern Maine and so free from snow that the deer were able to roam the woods almost the same as in Summer. They were able to get all the food they wanted and to select the particular kind they preferred. The consequence was that the deer, being well nourished, suffered but little from disease. When Spring came most of them were fat and in prime condition.

CHARITY WORKER DEAD.

Mrs. Ellis L. Motte's Useful Life Ended.

This city has lost one of its most ardent charity workers by the death of Mrs. Anna Louise Motte, wife of Ellis L. Motte of Commonwealth avenue, who died at York Harbor, Maine. Mrs. Motte was the daughter of Thomas J. Lobdell and Sophia Prentiss Lobdell. She was for many years a member of the board of managers of the Free Hospital for Women, and was busily interested in the Children's Mission and also the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Long identified with the Unitarian denomination in this city, Mrs. Motte had taken great interest in the Unitarian church at York Harbor. The Lucia Home at York also enjoyed her sympathy and services.

GAYNOR TO QUIT HOSPITAL.

Will Go to Mountains or Home Early This Week.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Although nothing was decided to-day about the transferring of Mayor Gaynor from St. Mary's Hospital, to the mountains or his Summer home at St. James, L. I., it may be decided late that he will be removed Monday or on Tuesday. "It depends now on the Mayor's preference," it is said by his secretary, as to the time and destination. Everything in the sick room went splendidly to-day, full meals, walks around the room and readings. Only two of the family, with their secretary, were admitted.

'RED HAIRED BEAUTY SOLD OUT HEINZE, CAUSED PANIC'

Mrs. French Declares Copper Man Was Duped by Woman Hired by Oil Trust.

TOLD OF COPPER SECRETS.

Woman Declares Heinze Was Paid $12,000,000 to Get Out of Amalgamated.

NEW YORK Aug. 27.—That a Titian haired woman, hired as a detective by Standard Oil interests, revealed the secret plans of Fritz Augustus Heinze, the copper king, and thus caused the financial panic of 1907 was alleged by Mrs. Lillian Hobart French to-day. Heinze, according to Mrs. French, who is suing him for $20,000's worth of copper stock that she alleges she "loaned" him, proved an easy victim of the woman sleuth, who furnished her employers such valuable information that they were able to break the pool in United Copper and force Heinze, Morse and their associates to the wall.

Mrs. French's charges differ against Heinze to-day. His references to her as "that woman" and the intimation that he considered her suit "one brought for blackmailing purposes" has badly rolled her. She asserted that she intended to have satisfaction and would "follow Heinze to the ends of the earth" in order to square their accounts, should she lose her suit.

Heinze remained in seclusion to-day. At his office it was said that he was at his apartments and there it was said that he was at his office. It was denied that he has as yet been served with any papers in Mrs. French's suit.

Paid Heinze $12,000,000.

Mrs. Bernice Henderson, the actress, to whom Heinze is engaged, is reported to be under a doctor's care as the result of the excitement caused by Mrs. French's statements regarding her fiance.

It is stated by her friends that the engagement has not been broken and that the wedding will take place "soon."

Discussing freely her relations with Heinze, Mrs. French to-day told about the forcing the Standard Oil interests to pay him $12,000,000 to get out of Amalgamated, and it was in this connection that she described the artful manner in which the "red-headed beauty" pumped Heinze.

"At the time of the meeting," said Mrs. French, "when we were living in West Thirty-fifth street, where Lawrence Heinze, Morse and Charles T. Barney were rigging their United Copper deal, the Standard Oil crowd got wind of the deal and decided they wanted to know the inside. They figured that they knew Mr. Heinze's weak point. So they sent a beautiful, Titian-haired woman to the Walbert to make his acquaintance. She took rooms at the hotel and engineered her job so well that she caused him to make all the advances. Eventually, by using strategic ous efforts and using all of his ingenuity, he obtained an introduction to her. I have to say that when I think about it—

Pumped By Blonde Beauty.

"this red-headed beauty pumped the whole story of the pool out of Mr. Heinze and took it to her home in No. 26 Broadway, where they immediately began laying plans for fixing that fresh young fellow from Butte. When Morse turned tail and threw his United Copper stock on the market, the Standard Oil people knew all about it and helped the work along. They smashed the pool to pieces and made Heinze holler for help."

Mrs. French also told of a bridge game in which she played Heinze lost $60,000. It was played at Rector's, and according to Mrs. French and Sloane, Max Blumenthal and other well-known "Broadwayites" were players, but she did not know who got the money.

"It was one of the biggest games ever pulled off in New York," she said, "but it was all perfectly straight. Sloane, Fritz came home he was flushed and excited. He didn't tell me much about the game at the time, but I got the whole story by degrees. I remonstrated with him for being so foolish to play cards for so much big stakes."

SOCIETY AT HORSE SHOW.

Miss Sears and Miss Simpkins Win Praise on Judge Moore's Track.

BEVERLY, Aug. 27.—Leaders in North Shore society circles attended the annual horse show of Judge William F. Moore at his private driving park at Rockmarge, Pride's Crossing, to-day. President and Mrs. Taft, who attended last year, were unable to be present on account of their hurried trip to Dublin, N. H. The show brought out one of the finest private collection of show horses in the country.

There were no cups offered, the show simply an exhibition affair. Miss Eleonora Sears's string headed the ribbon list of prizes in several classes. Miss Faith Simpkins was also highly applauded as she drove.

Five single horses in harness, not exceeding fifteen hands, were first shown. One of these, Perfect Action, is a new acquisition. Another new one in this class was Soubrette. Pairs of horses exceeding 15.2 hands brought out three pairs. Notables among these were Burgomaster, who won three honors at the Richmond Horse Show, near London, and Robinhood, who has captured many prizes.

After the show the guests went to Judge Moore's home where dinner was served.

GIRL SWIMMERS TO RACE TO LIGHT

MISS MAY McDONOUGH

Dorchester and South Boston Fair Champions Plan for $1,000 Contest.

COMPETITION between Boston's girl swimmers has reached the high-water mark in the proposed race between May McDonough, the South Boston speed swimmer, and Rose Pitonof, the Dorchester girl who made a record by swimming to Boston Light. The stakes are the highest yet put up between two women, $1000 a side being the figure set. The girls are good friends, but their keenness for the championship has made them the most energetic rivals.

Rose Pitonof has the advantage of having already made the swim to the Light, while May McDonough has the decided advantage in speed, being capable of beating Miss Pitonof three minutes to the mile in short swims. Just what her endurance will prove is still a matter of conjecture, although a number of her backers are ready to lay down the desired sum, so great is their faith in her success.

Both Girls Marvels.

While Miss McDonough is a wonder to the speed line, Miss Pitonof is a marvel of endurance. Speed pitted against endurance promises the most exciting and interesting race of the year. Both girls have all the confidence in the world in their own victory.

May McDonough says:

Rose Pitonof says:

"In an endurance race I can beat May McDonough. She is a wonderful speed swimmer, but she has never demonstrated great endurance."

Big Difference in Ages.

Miss McDonough is twenty years old and Miss Pitonof slightly over fifteen. The former has been swimming for the last eight years, and for four years held the championship in New England. This championship, she claims, has been unfairly wrested from her by Elsie Ackroyd, the East Boston girl, now in England.

Miss Pitonof has been doing unusual swimming stunts for six years, and has many trophies and prizes.

Miss McDonough says she has been training for the endurance test for some time.

Ready for Match.

"I am confident of success. Rose is a marvellous swimmer and has demonstrated unusual gameness, but I have already swum the worst parts of the route to the Light and understand the currents perfectly. There is no one who has any greater regard for Rose's ability than I have, but I am sure I can beat her.

"Dr. W. F. Crockett of Shawmut avenue, offered to back me with $100, but Rose's manager demands $1,000, a side."

Miss Pitonof, who has been successfully week at Keith's, declares she will match herself against Miss McDonough any time after September 4.

CITY POINT ABLAZE.

Water Didn't Catch Fire, but It Was All Aglow Last Night.

Two thousand people attended the annual open house and illumination of the South Boston Yacht Club at City Point last night. The gathering was the most brilliant that the club has held. The water front on the clubhouse was decorated with colored electric bulbs. Others were strung along the two rafts and in the rigging of the yachts at their moorings. Prominent in the display were the flagship of Commodore Soule, the power boat Gazelle of Vice-Commodore Tobin, Rear Commodore Burke's power boat Torment and Captain McKee's sloop Flirt. Many visitors came to the club and aboard the yachts. A band concert and a dance were features.

WOMAN FALLS TO DEATH.

Malden Octogenarian Was Walking in Her Sleep.

Mrs. Isabel Ovler, eighty-eight years old, fell from a third story window and was instantly killed, early yesterday at the home of her son, William H. Owler, of No. 21 Oliver street, Malden. Mrs. F. A. Howland, a neighbor, who was attending a sick daughter, heard the sound when Mrs. Owler's body struck the ground. She called Dr. Herbert S. Johnson, who found Mrs. Owler dead. It is believed the aged woman rose in her death through walking in her sleep.

NEW CENSUS MAKES BASEBALL CHANGES

Reclassification of Leagues Follow the New Count of Population.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Census Director Durand has furnished the National Baseball Association a statement giving the approximate aggregate baseball population at the thirteenth census, represented by the various cities composing each of the forty-three leagues and associations in the national body.

This information is supplied for the purpose of enabling the National Baseball Association to classify its leagues and associations with reference to the draft price to be paid each other for their players, as the drafting season begins September 1.

In accordance with the 1910 census figures the reclassification will be as follows, showing the approximate population:

Class A—(approximate population)—Eastern League, 2,840,000; Southern Association and Pacific Coast League, 1,841,000; Pacific Coast League, 1,141,000; Southern Association, 1,000,000.

ALPHABETS ON PINHEAD.

Engraver Puts 113 Characters in Tiny Space.

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 27.—On the head of an ordinary pin Paul F. Wentz of this city, has engraved the alphabet four times and then added his name and the date. When he completed the work, nineteen 113 characters in all.

He was graduated from Bauman's Technical School, at Lancaster, about a year ago, and is now working for Fred Schaffer in this city. For the wonderful piece of work that he did he used an ordinary watchmaker's tool.

GANDER A PUBLIC MENACE.

Vicious One Pecks Boy, and Owner Is Fined Twenty-five Cents.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 27.—That geese are dangerous birds and should not be permitted to run at large was held by Judge Neelen in the District Court, when he imposed a fine of 25 cents upon John Kroenke for "permitting his goose to run at large to the danger of the populace." Kroenke keeps a large flock under a pen. The bird made his escape and meeting the seven year son of Frank Burns, a neighbor, pecked him on the leg. The father obtained a warrant for Kroenke, who pleaded guilty and paid his fine.

Oldest Fireman Present.

The annual reunion of Independent N. French Hose Association of Quincy was held yesterday afternoon and evening at Squantum, the members arriving in special cars from Quincy and participating in the big shore dinner to the number of ninety. Frederick W. French, president of the association, acted as toastmaster and introduced the speakers, including Mayor William T. Shea, ex-Mayor C. B. Potter, ex-Mayor Harriston H. Keith, and, finally, Mr. James T. Penniman, who, at the age of ninety-six, is presumed to be the oldest fireman in the United States.

AVIATOR SWEEPS OVER JERSEY SHORE

Asbury Park Meet Closes—Machines Will Be Sent Here for Harvard Contests.

ASBURY PARK, N. J. Aug. 27.—Undaunted by his limping motor, Ralph Johnstone made a cross-country flight over thirty miles at an elevation of 3,500 feet this afternoon, spurred on by his desire to outdo the twenty-mile flight made by his rival, Arch Hoxsey, to-day. Johnstone for forty-five minutes swept over all the Summer resorts on the seashore between Red Bank and Ocean Grove.

When Johnstone started on his spectacular flight, Hoxsey had just finished a brilliant flight over the track from Elberon to Ocean Grove, and stirred the crowd to hysterical enthusiasm by cutting figure eights and circles over the heads of hundreds along the Casino Pier, which divides Asbury Park from Ocean Grove. Hoxsey had calmly tried to get off the ground when he found that some loose covenant has hampered with his rudder wires. He had managed to get into the air with the wires crossed there would have been a catastrophe.

Brooklins closed the meet with a flight of spirals and dips. Monday the machines will be sent to Boston where Brooklins and Johnstone will fly at the big Harvard meet.

RAZING JAY COOKE BANK.

The Famous War-Time Financial Structure to Give Way.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The Jay Cooke bank building, No. 617 Fifteenth street, one of the landmarks of Washington, where the celebrated Philadelphian financed the United States during the trying days of the civil war, is soon to be demolished. The building is to be torn down September 1 as is to be replaced by a modern office building.

President Lincoln, Secretary Stanton and other high Government officials kept their private accounts with Jay Cooke & Co. and many officials of the government owed large sums to the financier.

SEEKS HERMIT'S TREASURE.

Neighbor of Late Recluse Will File Claims in Court.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 27.—The estate of Charles Kunath of Newport, Ky., a hermit, supposed to be a pauper, but under whose bed was found a bag of silver and gold amounting to $12,000 and valuable papers, will go into litigation. Henry Rabius, a neighbor, who was appointed the property, laid claim to the treasure. A bed judgment has been found for $200, and local people will seek to obtain the remainder of the estate on the ground that the man died a penalty in Germany.

9 Chinese to Pay Gambling Fines.

After pleading guilty to the charge of promoting a policy game, Ming Shu, of No. 82 Harrison avenue, paid a fine of $50 in the Municipal Court yesterday. Judge Ely imposed fines of $5 each in the cases of eight other Chinese who were charged with gambling. Sergeant Mosher of Station 4 secured the raid in our raid.

CRIPPEN MENACED BY BRITISH MOBS

Doctor and Miss Leneve Remanded to Cells After Formal Charge in Court.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Promptly charged with murder and mutilation, to which they entered no plea, Dr. H. H. Crippen and Miss Ethel Clare Leneve, were late this afternoon remanded to cells in the Bow Street police station.

Both were unnerved by the hostile demonstrations against them in both Liverpool and London. The detectives are maintained in Crippen's home but his capture disappointed the mobs in Liverpool when he fared an angry mob of several thousand persons, who heaped insults upon him.

Just as the pair, in charge of detectives, were brought off the Montrose a mob broke through the police lines and attempted to strike Crippen and Miss Leneve. He was hurried back by the police, who were too busy to make an arrest.

The prisoners were rushed to the London train, where a private compartment with blinds drawn, had been reserved for them. At every meeting, the mob was on hand waiting at the Euston station, and it was with difficulty that the police were able to force their way toward waiting carriages. The crowd seemed to curse Crippen, while Miss Leneve, in tears, was scolded by the women and climbed the boys' backs.

Throughout the carriage was rushed to the Bow street police station where the formal charge against the prisoners was read.

STEAMER KEELS OVER.

Fruit Vessel Soon Fills with Water.

The United Fruit Company's steamer Juan, keeled over on her side and lay helpless in the harbor yesterday after she struck shallow water in the process of being docked two days ago. Although the ship was not seriously damaged by the mishap, water was shipped and her pumps had to be kept busy constantly. The Juan is undergoing repairs to the propeller, which was broken by her contact with the sand.

Constable Hurt in Fall.

Constable Bertram Killian of Everett was severely injured by a fall from his horse on Eagle street, Malden, while riding down an incline when the fork of the front wheel snapped, throwing him and the rig with great force. His face was covered with lacerations, and he received a severe gash on the right hand.

Arrested in Old Forgery.

After an absence of three years W. H. waite, forty-five, of Reading, was surrendered at the office of District Attorney Pelletier yesterday to answer indictments for the crime of forging and uttering on two counts. The indictments were returned by the Grand Jury, July, 1907. The checks were uttered on Medford and Reading physicians.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—Miss Geraldine Farrar will open the Fall season of the Royal Opera House here on September 18 in the role of Manon. She is now recuperating at the Villa Sectional, Lake Como, her favorite Summer resort. She went to the villa when the Salzburg musical festival ended, motoring to Italy by way of the Alps. Miss Farrar will go to Paris September 1, and then come here. It has been arranged that she shall sing as usual at the celebration in the Imperial Palace in honor of Empress Augusta Victoria's birthday, October 22.

LEAPS FROM WINDOW.

Pole in Immigrants' Detention Room Makes Dash for Liberty.

To be a free man in the land of the free was the hope that urged Vincenzo Sobolousky to risk his life last night, in jumping through a window, glass and all, in his effort to escape from the immigrants' detention room on Long Wharf. Sobolousky fell thirty feet to the plank flooring. The glass slashed his body. His right leg was broken and his entire right side crushed and bruised. On his cot at the East Hospital, where he was removed in an ambulance, Sobolousky last night lay in agony for some time. The doctors told him he had small chance of escaping from death. Sobolousky is a Pole, twenty-eight years old.

ARREST FOR MAIL FRAUD.

Charlestown Man Said to Be Fugitive From New York.

United States Commissioner Hayes held James F. Fleming, who claims to reside in Charlestown, under $1,000 for a hearing to-morrow, on a charge of being a fugitive from justice from the southern district of New York. It is alleged that the accused advertised for compositors at a salary of $22 a week and demanded from each applicant $1 for investigating expenses. It was alleged that he agreed to return the money if the applicant failed to secure a position. He has already been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury for using the mails to defraud.

FINDS HOME ROBBED.

Burglars Busy While Family Is at Summer Resort.

F. E. Chapman returned from Damariscotta, Me., where he has been summering, to his home at No. 579 Dudley street, Roxbury, yesterday to find that the house had been ransacked in his absence. It is believed that at least $1,000 worth of valuables were taken. Entrance was effected through a rear window. Detectives from headquarters have recovered some of the stolen property.

BAGLEY POSED AS JUDGE IN WINTHROP

After passing worthless checks for several thousand dollars in Boston, John Bagley, known in New York also as Charles E. Knightly, is under arrest at Toronto, caught at the same trick. It is believed that he has left a trail of victims in various parts of this country.

From Richard Barton, a broker at No. 135 Congress street, Bagley obtained $1,000 on a check for $5,000 apparently indorsed by the cashier of the National Newsboy (New York) Bank, deposited an account with the Federal Trust Company, but did not get any money there, after depositing a check that was not good. But he caught the local office of the Canadian Pacific Railroad for $525, buying three tickets to Europe and getting $187.5 in cash in return.

When Bagley was in Boston he was accompanied by a frail little woman who was believed to be his wife and a child said to be their daughter. A few months ago, about eighteen also accompanied them and it was said that the man was Bagley's daughter by a former wife.

The party stopped at the New Winthrop Hotel in Winthrop. They registered there as Angelo Bagley and her daughter. Bagley registered as "John Bagley, wife and daughter." Bagley was about fifty years of age, six feet tall and has dark hair and a dark complexion. He was generally in a blue suit. He was crippled and walked with a slight limp.

Bagley volunteered that he had been a judge in Boise City, Idaho, and that he had charge of the Pinkerton Detective force. The second day he was at the hotel he took all the family pilling to Revere Beach. He tipped the help generously.

Bagley paid his hotel bill and said that he might return as he and his wife were going to Europe for their honeymoon. They carried no trunks. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Bagley, who is now on the charge of having committed a larceny in the sum of $1,187.15.

BIGGER and better steamships from Boston will be asked of the directors of the steamship lines running to this port by a committee of Boston business men in the near future. Directors of the Cunard line have declared their willingness to improve their Boston service if they can be shown that it will pay, and have even announced a new steamer for this port.

Hotel men, merchants and railroad officials are confident that the saloon passenger business of the port can be doubled if suitable steamships are placed in the local service, and they are prepared to demonstrate to the steamship officials how this can be done.

New England congressmen, headed by Kelliher and O'Connell, will ask the Post-office Department to make a new contract for mail service between Boston and Fishguard, Liverpool or Southampton, and it is up to the business men of Boston to persuade the directors of the big steamship lines that such a contract may be profitably accepted.

Demand Better Steamships.

The passenger business of Boston does not increase because of the character of the vessels now in service here. A great amount of business which does not now pass over any of the lines of the steamship companies with Boston service could be secured if new and better ships ran from Boston. There are statistics in plenty to bear out this statement and Boston merchants will be well provided.

There is not a modern steamer sailing from Boston at the present time. Every vessel of 10,000 tons or over leaving this port for Europe is ten years old, except the Zealand, which is nine years old. A steel steamer ten years old is as safe and seaworthy as though she were new, and she isn't anywhere nearly so comfortable.

The last ten years have revolutionized the steamship business and the care of passengers has developed into a science. The luxury and conveniences of the newest steamers were unknown ten years ago. When the Boston fleet was built passengers were crowded into staterooms accommodating three and four persons, public rooms were small, the dining room was ill-studded and poorly ventilated, while the seating arrangements were primitive.

Big New England Trade.

Elevators, gymnasiums, swimming pools, cafes, sun decks, game rooms and palm rooms had not been invented. The present sleeping rooms, private suites, telephones and single berth staterooms were not thought of when they were building steamers ten years ago. All these things are to be found on steamers sailing from New York and Montreal, but are not found on the vessels now carrying passengers from Boston.

Boston is the richest city per capital in the United States and the wealthy population of New England is among the best patrons of transatlantic steamship lines. It is estimated that 85,000 New Englanders went to Europe in the first and second cabins this Spring and will return during the Fall and Winter. Of these, only about 20,000 sailed from Boston, the remainder going from New York or Montreal.

Of the thousands who sailed from New York a very large proportion went on the steamers of the German, French and Italian lines, while probably two-thirds of the New Englanders who used Montreal went by the Canadian Pacific and Allan lines.

All this business could have been secured by the steamship lines sailing from Boston if their short-sighted policy had not left them without satisfactory patronage of wealthy Bostonians. The business which the German, French and Canadian lines pick up in Boston is secured because Boston steamers are so inferior to those of New York service of the Boston lines catches only a portion of this business.

Passenger Business Pays.

On board one of the big German steamers the other day there were 460 saloon passengers. By actual count there were 132 passengers from New England, 60 of them from Boston, on this steamer. Many of the Bostonians occupied the most expensive staterooms on the ship and they left Boston because they couldn't be made comfortable enough here.

The loss to the Cunard and White Star lines because of this policy of keeping the people of rival lines amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars, and if they could be saved if equally good steamers left Boston as leave New York.

There is no question of the ability and willingness of Boston travelers to pay as much for accommodation as people from other cities and there are a few who will not put up with poky staterooms and cramped quarters.

In addition there is the large population of the north-side who will go to Boston if their imaginations were excited by the sight of magnificent steamers in their harbor.

Freights are as poor in New York as in Boston, but there is money in passengers without freight, or more of business. The lines would be glad to have the big steamship lines are thankful to take up the passengers from there and get all except for a few months their saloons are filled. The profit gain is wrought, and there is no reason why they should expect Boston to keep their passenger quarters crowded all the time and fill them with freight only.

C. F. Bacon of the firm of Chandler & Co. has just returned from Europe. He went across on a Boston boat and returned on a steamer of the Cunard line to New York and thus had an excellent opportunity to compare the service of the two cities. He found that Boston had to put up with slower steamers and smaller boats, lacking the conveniences and advantages that New York lines offer. He said:

Chance to Increase Traffic.

"It is no use to scold the steamship lines and demand that they improve their Boston services. They are in business for money and we must show them that it will be profitable to do so. If the directors of these lines lived in the United States instead of England they would understand the situation soon. I think Boston can show them if they are reasonable that it would be very profitable to give us bigger, newer and better ships.

"There is a magnificent opportunity in this city to build up a great European passenger business. The steamship people tell us that they will increase and improve their service when business warrants it, but that is a mistaken attitude, for business will never increase while their service is poor. It is like a man running a mercantile business. If his facilities and service are not of the best he will not increase that business in the face of competitors. The steamship services from Boston are very much inferior to what is offered from New York and naturally people will go to New York until equally good ships sail from Boston.

"There we have a magnificent harbor, good docks, a great city preferred by Europeans to all others and a place which the majority of Americans like to visit. The people are well-to-do, they are more prosperous than any other city in the country, they are intelligent and they can easily be induced in travel more than they do.

No Inducements Offered Here.

"There is every reason why such a city should be sought by travelers and why steamship lines should strain every effort to give it the best possible service. Instead of this they leave Boston with old out of date boats and wonder why so many New Englanders prefer to sail from New York on rival lines.

"Boston people don't want to go to New York. They prefer to sail from Boston and have their friends see them off. They like to recognize their friends on the dock at the steamer returns. But unless they are looking for something inexpensive they will not put up with the inconveniences of the present Boston services.

"The Cunard liners Saxonia and Ivernia are good seaboats and the service aboard them is excellent, but they offer no inducements to travelers who wish comfort and luxury at sea. There is little deck room, tiny public rooms and cramped quarters in the dining saloon, while they herd people into tiny staterooms in threes and fours, and the boats are primarily freight boats. Yet even during the busiest season they are crowded to their limit and hundreds of applicants are turned away.

"The White Star boats coming here are no better. The steamers they take have no position.

"If I can see not satisfied, patronize one of our magnificent steamers from New York, I can't see how where they expect to lose business, for the passenger says: 'If I must go to New York I guess I will try one of the German or French or Italian boats.' Or else they go to Montreal, where new boats may be found with modern conveniences among them.

Would Encourage Rival Lines.

"Let them bring some of the magnificent steamers that are so talked about in New York to Boston and soon everybody in Boston will be talking about them and anxious to sail on them. I personally would rather sail from Boston than from New York, and the German lines to send good boats here. They would pick up a paying business in very quick time. There isn't a double bottom in the country of passenger traffic here, but the steamship lines that go to Europe in the old tubs won't get it.

"Of course the British directors of the steamship lines do not know that the sentiments of Western people demand for Europe to sail from Boston rather than New York. They have relatives and affiliations here, for New England built the West, and they like to combine pilgrimages to Boston with a trip to Europe. If the Boston service was not neglected and so alive to the fact that these Westerners are followed by thousands from Montreal by rival lines, they would strive to catch the Boston business.

Dominion Line Wins Success.

The truth of Mr. Bacon's argument has been demonstrated by the experience of the Dominion Line in Boston. Some fifteen years ago Boston was at a very low ebb as a passenger port. Service was maintained by the Cunard Line, which ran two slow and unattractive steamers called the Catalonia and Cephalonia, both long since relegated to the junk heap, and by the Leyland Line, which carried a few saloon passengers on their great freight boats.

Despite the predictions of local pessimists that there was no passenger business here, and that Boston like, a British steamship company, decided to make Boston its United States terminal. It had no connections with New York and had to stand on its own bottom if it did in Boston.

The steamer Canada, a 10,000-ton boat of 14 knots speed, was sent here and was advertised. Boston people of means were the best suffered steamer fit to cross the Atlantic in. The success of the Canada brought the New England, Commonwealth, Mayflower and Columbus, as well as the Dominion and Cambrensis, and except the last two were big 13,000-ton ships and created favorably in size with the steamers running from New York at the time.

These vessels left port crowded with passengers and the line made arrangements to extend the Cunard line, which placed the Saxonia and Ivernia, 14,000 gross tons on this service. These two steamers were the largest and fastest fleet at the time, which shows what was thought of Boston as a passenger port then.

The Allan line established the first service to the Mediterranean by a British line from Boston which, become so popular that all other lines quickly followed suit.

Depression Follows Merger.

This was the situation when J. P. Morgan formed the International Mercantile Marine Company and assorbed all the British lines except the Cunard, Allan and Anchor lines. Unfortunately, the American promoter did not have money enough at his command to swing the deal without borrowing everything to the White Star line.

Then came a period of depression, and the control of the White Star was such that it could not help the Dominion Line Boston service and compel the proper service of the two cities of that line began to fall off. The reason was that the White Star used its Boston service merely to supplement the New York lines, while the Dominion had concentrated in Boston.

The Mediterranean service, which was most popular, was at once partially transferred to New York. The Liverpool service was not kept up as well as formerly.

Of the Dominion Line fleet the Mayflower was renamed the Cretic, taken to New York and never brought back. The Canada was transferred to Montreal. The Valencer and Cambrensis went out of service, the Columbus renamed the Republic, was lost at sea last year when sailing from New York. The New England and Commonwealth, now called the Canopic and Romanic, run to the Mediterranean, and are sometimes to Boston and sometimes to New York.

The Cymric, one of the smallest and oldest of the White Star fleet, was sent to Boston and has remained here. She carries cattle as well as passengers. The Zeeland, a 15,000-gross ton White Star steamer, is in the Summer. The line thinks nothing of leaving Boston with 1,000 passengers service to Liverpool for six weeks or two months at a stretch.

An instance of how the business between Boston and Liverpool has fallen off since the Dominion line left Boston is shown by comparative figures. When the Dominion line was in the Liverpool service carried fully as many passengers as the Cunard and White Star steamers, which are twice as large. During the past year the Cunard carried 68,536 passengers to and from Liverpool, and the White Star, which has two steamers, carried 8,726.

The Cunard Line, on the other hand, has never left Boston except the Cunard Anchor line. It took the Ultonia away some years ago, but never replaced her. The Ivernia and Saxonia are now among the smallest of the Cunard fleet, being the oldest. At various times steamers have been announced as being built for Boston, but they either have not come at all, like the Caronia, or have been built for New York and put one trip, like the Carpathia.

Only the Best Will Do.

The Cunard has announced the Franconia for Boston, but has already scheduled her for a couple of trips to New York to keep her employed.

While the Dominion Line was actively getting business the Cunard was active, but since the Dominion has left Boston its activity has ceased.

The truth is that Boston people no longer wish to travel on antiquated boats. They have money enough to purchase good accommodation and they want it. There is more money per capita in Boston than there is in London, if Englishmen only knew it, but the steamship lines won't get it unless they go after it.

DUBLIN TURNS OUT TO WELCOME TAFT

DUBLIN, N. H., Aug. 27—All Dublin turned out to greet President and Mrs. Taft, tonight, in honor of the President, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh threw open the doors of their beautiful summer home, "Knollwood."

Every person in Dublin, whether transient or permanent resident, had been invited by special card. The entire population, men, women and children, took advantage of the opportunity to greet President Taft by the hand, and bask in the sunlight of the Taft smile.

The reception lasted from nine until eleven o'clock. The opening feature was the presentation to the President of an enormous bouquet of Dublin flowers, by fifty children. They were boys and girls in ages ranging from eleven to seventeen, the girls in white and the boys in becoming costume.

Addresses Little Ones.

President Taft made a little speech, thanking the little ones for their gift. His face beamed as the boys gave him the military salute while the girls curtsied.

President and Mrs. Taft motored up from Beverly, arriving here at 5:45 o'clock. With them were Mrs. Louisa S. Moore, Miss Helen and Master Robert Taft, with the President's second bodyguard Captain Butt. They were met by Secretary and Mrs. MacVeagh. Flags and bunting floated from the Town Hall and from many residences.

Some of those who attended the reception were Ambassador James Bryce, Sir Michael Innes, who will have charge of the British embassy during Mr. Bryce's trip to South America; Lord Charles Percy, Colonel B. R. James and Esmond Grey of the British embassy; governor and Mrs. Henry B. Quinby and the Governor's staff, Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana and Lieutenant Commander of the Navy and Mrs. F. M. Reeves.

Milford's Welcome.

The Presidential party were delighted with the reception that they received at Milford. They found the town gayly bedecked in honor of their passing, and fully 1,000 gathered in the street to greet them. The President ordered his chauffeur to stop his machine while he bowed right and left.

To-morrow morning the President and Mrs. Taft, with the children will worship at the Unitarian Church here. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. J. L. Seward will preach. The President and Mrs. Taft will occupy the first six pews. In the party will be Mrs. Taft, the children, Secretary and Mrs. MacVeagh, Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce, and Governor and Mrs. Quinby.

The president will motor back to Beverly to-morrow afternoon.

Ambassador Bryce to-day presented to the President a letter from King George V. formally notifying Mr. Taft of the death of King Edward VII. and the accession of the throne. The ambassador also presented his new credentials from King George.

GOING AFTER THE KAISER.

Radicals Preparing to Question His Koenigsburg Speech.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—Leading Radical members of the Reichstag Budget Committee plans to-day for an interpelation of the Kaiser on his Koenigsberg speech of August 25, in which he emphatically declared that, as King of Prussia, he was independent of public will and was ruler by "divine right."

The speech, in the opinion of a majority of the Reichstag members, marks a wider departure from the spirit of the British constitution than any of the past and the indications are that it will create a heavy opposition. The text of the famous interview in a London paper a few days ago, which created a sensation, forcing a promise of greater reserve from the Kaiser.

HEAD CRUSHED BY FALL.

$2,750 for Strikers.

A total of $2,750 has now been sent to the locked out clgarmakers at Tampa, Fla., by the officers of the Cigarmakers' Union, No. 97, of this city. $750 being sent Tuesday evening after a large-attended meeting of that organization. Seven thousand men are locked out in Tampa, where it is alleged that the manufacturers are making a desperate attempt to disrupt the union.

PRETTIEST CHILD WHOSE PARENTS WILL TAKE HER FROM PUBLIC WORK

MILLICENT GOWEN

TO MOULD CHARACTER IN PRETTIEST CHILD

WILL the prettiest child in America become the most perfect woman?

Will this beautiful little girl rival the perfections of Annette Kellerman and Maude Odell, proclaimed the most perfect women in England and America?

This is the question that is being agitated among the many doctors and artists who have become interested in little Millicent Gowen, of Everett, who has been heralded as the prettiest child in America. These men who have become so interested in her development and hope that she will become the model of womanhood as she has in childhood.

Physicians authorities say that the childish perfection will not necessarily result in fu ture perfection, and the fact that she is Mabelle Rollenman, now proclaimed a perfect woman was a deformed child. By the law of opposites, they assert little Millicent Gowen may become an ordinary woman as far as looks go.

The child's mother, Mrs. Willis Gowen of 148 Main street, Everett, is more interested in the development of her daughter's character and in the perfection of her features than she is in the child's features of physique.

On account of the great amount of publicity given to the child and the large amount of attention which has been called to her perfections, both mother and father have decided to withdraw little Millicent from all public work. She will not be allowed to pose for a few years at least and just as little as possible will he said to her about her beauty.

Her mother desires that the child shall develop into a sweet womanly girl, full of character and talent rather than an empty shell of beauty. It is to this end that her future training and education will be directed.

"I have tried to take Millicent out of public life entirely," said Mrs. Gowen, "for too much notoriety and publicity has come to her that we fear she will be spoiled and self-conscious. On that account we do not intend to allow her to pose or appear in public for some time to come.

"Personally I am more interested in the development of her character and mind than I am in her beauty. I would almost prefer that she lost her beauty than to have her unmannered or stupid.

"Her father and I intend that she shall have a good public school education, and if she is to go to High school and if possible to college. She is to begin the study of elocution and dramatic art at once. Whether or not she will become an actress depends on the child herself. Our present inclination is more toward public speaking.

"She is very bright at school and has a remarkable memory. She is also artistic also, and if we do the right thing from now on she will be a credit to us, if not merely a beauty. If she does become a beautiful woman it will be good, but I want her to be clever and accomplished above all.

"I have just had a letter offering a two years' engagement for the interpretation of poetic works, which will be more or less pending 1 imagine, but, of course, we will not even consider that.

"We do not intend to neglect her physical development or anything that pertains to health, but it is not our intention to strive for the development of mere beauty."

FRANK H. TULLY DEAD.

Young Dartmouth Man Was Ill Seven Weeks in Hospital.

Frank H. Tully, one of the most highly respected young men of Charlestown, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital yesterday after an illness of seven weeks, following an operation. He was twenty-seven years old, a graduate of Charlestown High School, and a Dartmouth man, being a member of the class of 1907. FIFTH EXPULSION FOR EAGLE GRAFT

John S. Dodsworth Shares Same Fate as High Officers He Exposed.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 27—The printed report of the trial committee of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, issued to-day, shows that in th egraft inquiry, John S. Dodsworth of Topeka, Kas., Aerie No. 58, was also found guilty of defrauding the order out of $9,100. It was recommended that he be expelled from Grand Aerie membership together with Martin G. Gray, Thomas C. Hayes, Edward Krause and B. J. Monaghan. The convention expelled him. The report gives the first public intimation that there was a fifth defendant.

Jointly with the four former officials expelled, Dodsworth was charged with influencing Grand Aerie officers in awarding contracts for the building for the Grand Aerie. The report says that committee's recommendation is based on sworn testimony of Dodsworth himself.

Conrad H. Mann was re-elected grand secretary, and Finley McKee grand treasurer, without opposition. Senator Thomas F. Grady, of New York, was advanced from vice-president to the presidency.

GEN. NICKERSON IS 84.

Civil War Commander Celebrates Birthday at Mt. Hope Home.

General Frank S. Nickerson, one of the few surviving generals of the civil war, observed his eighty-fourth birthday yesterday at the home of his son, Jesse F. Nickerson, No. 381 Hyde Park avenue, Mt. Hope. In the afternoon there were many callers, most of whom brought floral gifts. His children and grandchildren spent the day with him. General Nickerson was born at Swanville, Me. His grandfather fought in the Revolution and his father in the War of 1812. His ancestry dates back to 1628, when William Nickerson was a prominent member of the Provincetown colony. General Nickerson served throughout the war, having enlisted in the Fourth Maine Regiment.

JAPAN THROWS AWAY MASK, FORMALLY GRABS COREA

HASTENED BY ITO'S DEATH

Several Treaties Between United States and Corea Affected by the Move.

TOKIO, Aug. 27.—Japan to-day threw off her mask and formally announced the annexation of Korea, accomplished in violation of Japan's specific pledge.

The Hermit kingdom is no more; her 12,000,000 inhabitants now citizens of the Mikado and the Korean territory is but a Japanese province, officially to be known as "The Land of Morning Calm."

An independence of 4,245 years is ended. The convention by which this has been accomplished was arranged by Yi Wan Yen, the Corean Premier, and General Viscount Terauchi, who for several months has been the Japanese resident general at Seoul.

Expect Uprising in Korea.

While the announcement of the annexation is not unexpected, a nationalist uprising in Korea is expected. The censorship is close. Korea has surrendered absolutely her sovereign rights. The members of the Korean royal family, it is understood, become members of the Japanese imperial house.

The Korean emperor will be Prince Gi Wha; honors are bestowed on important Koreans, and the civil list of 1,500,000 yen will be continued. The amalgamation, it is announced, does not affect Korean officials or the vested rights of foreigners.

For years—for centuries—Korea was hereditary fee of Japan. Numerous wars were fought by the two nations, and at one time Korea was virtually the ruler of Japan.

Warships Control Coast.

Within the last sixth months the Japanese military force in Korea has been materially increased. To-day warships are patrolling the coast. Seoul and the other larger towns are so closely policed as to appear under martial law, and every Korean and Japanese official is closely guarded. Every precaution has been made to dangle an uprising.

The annexation of Korea at the time is due to the assassination of Prince Ito at Harbin, Manchuria, by a Korean fanatic last Winter. Ito, governing the peninsula, opposed annexation at this stage. Full within the last week the world at large though expecting this move ultimately did not look for immediate developments.

The annexation has been expected here for some time. Several Kokusai treaties with America are affected by this move. Among the more important is one preventing Korea from collecting over ten per cent ad valorem on imports from the United States save luxuries. On the latter the maximum duty is thirty per cent. These terms are much better than those given America by Japan.

By another treaty America has enjoyed extra territorial privileges. Korea now does not recognize the jurisdiction of the United States over Americans in her domains. These matters will have to be considered in new treaties with Japan.

CHILDREN'S DAY FETE.

Boston Woman Presents Play at Manchester Club.

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, Aug. 27.—A pleasing entertainment was provided by the Manchester Yacht Club at their clubhouse this afternoon on the occasion of its annual Children's Day. "La Grande Pandore" was presented by Mrs. John Collins Abbott of Boston, whose husband is the originator of the paper doll figure which is dressed in costumes of olden times and being of life size, gives a very good idea, indeed, of the styles of early days. Mrs. Abbott, who illustrated Martin Andelnette and some of the court dresses and headpieces were quite stunning. The speaker gave an original poem telling of the career of the famous queen and the whole was quite interesting and instructive. A Punch and Judy show was the closing feature of the entertainment.

SAILOR HELD IN SHOOTING.

Companion in Hospital with Bullet in Thigh.

August Burchard, a sailor, is under $2,000 bonds charged with shooting Oscar Peterson of No. 5, Vernon place. Peterson is now at the Relief Station with a bullet wound in his right thigh. The police claim that Burchard got into an argument with and duly aliased that the former shot him. Burchard then ran amuck on Commercial street, threatening to shoot everybody. Three men pounced on him and pinioned him to the ground. A police officer came along and placed the sailor under arrest.

HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVES; THE WORKING GIRL'S MEAGRE WAGE AND HOW SHE DRESSES

THIRD ARTICLE.

By REV. ALBERT E. GEORGE.

"HOW shall I make my next dress?" asked a working girl of another, who was sitting by her. They were holding their conversation in a small room in a tenement house.

It was after a hard day's work and this conference meant much to the girls. The small room was the kitchen and parlor. All day they had thought on this subject, but they could not discuss it, for they stood behind the counters of a store where they were employed. New hats and new dresses are of just as much importance to these girls as to their millionaire sisters.

They had a book of styles open on their laps and studied the designs closely.

"Oh, that will be too expensive, and I'd look like thirty cents in that share," said one after one kind of gown had been picked out for her.

"I can't afford that anyway. It's pretty, but it would cost too much," was the criticism of another shape.

So they went on that evening and discussed to their heart's content, until finally one particular type of dress was chosen for one of the girls. Then came the query, "But how can I make it?"

Another girl of the neighborhood chimed in the discussion.

"Why, we'll help you make it. You can buy the cloth, and then we'll meet some evening and cut it out," was the rejoinder that made this difficulty disappear.

WILLINGNESS TO HELP GREAT AID.

It is this willingness to help each other that means so much to the girls in the poorer districts. They do help one another.

I looked on one evening with delight at a demonstration of this. A girl who had worked hard all day long hurriedly cleared away the supper dishes and made the table ready for work on a new dress for another girl.

Other girls came in, and then the real work began.

All the training these girls had was what they had "picked up" when the opportunity had been afforded them, either from the mother of the family or some few points given by a more experienced dressmaker.

The patterns were all carefully studied. There were two of them, and finally one was decided upon, and this was reread carefully, and all sorts of explanations were given before the scissors were called into play. Then all watched and offered suggestions.

"This is the second dress that I have ever cut out, and I hope that it will be all right," said the girl who wielded the scissors.

It was all right. The girls came again. There was the old machine that ran by foot power, and stitch and get out of order, but it was worked with a will, and they all aided, and before the week was ended the dress was taking shape, all but the sewing on of the buttons and making a few buttonholes, which mother had a hand in finishing during the lull in her work during the day.

All this impresses the observer. The willingness of these girls to aid one another! How resourceful these girls are! What fun they do have over making a dress and now and then interlarding their conversation with the gossip which always goes with the sewing.

HARD SCHEMING TO MAKE ENDS MEET.

If poor girls dress well in the tenement districts do we always know what hard planning and scheming are back of the attirement. Sometimes it is an old suit to be ripped up and made serviceable with additions. But, whatever is done, it is largely done upon the co-operative plan. Several hands have had their share in it, and mother is always near to give her little bits of experience and put in those effective touches which tell.

These girls get small wages. They must do their share wisely in meeting the household expenses, and whatever they get to wear is purchased at the cost of many self-denials. They often stint themselves of even the necessaries of life that they may have something fit to wear.

The dress of a poor working girl represents more than the dress of a rich girl. Every stitch in that dress has been taken with special interest.

Sometimes a Summer dress is made at a very trifling expense, and one must wonder how it is done. They look well in their simplicity.

But how happy and willing they are to help each other! There's the lesson to be gathered from this incident, and there's, too, the joy of getting a dress under these circumstances.

THREW A PORK CHOP.

Aimed at Mother-in-Law, It Struck Wife and Cost Moran $10.

It cost William F. Moran, of No. 99 Preble street, South Boston just $10 to hit his wife on the side of her head with a pork chop, Associate Justice Dean imposing the fine yesterday in the South Boston District Court. It was hardly fair it might seem, since he intended to hit his mother-in-law, but his aim was poor, hence the fine.

Moran declared that his wife, who has been married to him for seven years, beat him each week, and his mother-in-law nagged him. It became so unbearable that he seized the chop as the handiest weapon at the table and let it fly, the intended victim dodging, and the wife getting the missle.

STRIKE MAY SPREAD.

Other Mills Threaten to Join Salem Shoe Workers.

SALEM, Aug. 27. — An official of the United Shoe Workers of America declared to-day that if there were any attempt on the part of the manufacturers to start up their shops next week with non-union labor, as it has been rumored would be done, there will be a general strike throughout all the mills in this district. It seems that the manufacturers believe that the cutters will return to wor kon Monday, but the cutters declare that such a belief is without foundation, and if any attempt is made by their organization to force them back they will withdraw from the Cutter's Union and Knights of Labor, and become affiliated with the rival body, the United Shoe Workers of America.

UP TO SCHOOL BOARD.

It Must Furnish Equipment for "Children's Corners."

Acting Corporation Counsel McLaughlin, in an opinion forwarded to Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday, sustains the latter's contention that the school committee should furnish the equipment for the "children's corners" or playground gymnasiums, under the jurisdiction of the school board. That school committee was of the opinion that while the Legislature had given the school department authority over the "children's corners," the park department should provide the necessary apparatus. The opinion was forwarded to Chairman Ellis of the school board, with a request that he equip the playgrounds under the jurisdiction of the school committee at once.

HELEN GOULD AIDS MISSION.

Missionary Gets Necessary $1,000 and Returns to India.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Aided by the gift of $1,000 from Helen Miller Gould, the Rev. Walter H. Scudder, with his wife and four children, sailed on the German Lloyder Berlin to-day for India, where he has charge of the Arcot industrial mission, Madras presidency, India. Mr. Scudder was born in India, and has been connected with the Mission Board of the American Reformed Church for many years. He came to New York a year ago to collect $30,000 and to study manual training, and on returns to impart the knowledge he has gained to the native students. When Helen Gould learned that he still wanted $1,000 she sent it to him.

JOY RIDES ON YACHT.

2 Youths Must Explain to Lynn Judge Where They Got Boat.

LYNN, Aug. 27.—The yacht joy rides in the latest. There are two of them in this city. One, Scott Cook, aged thirteen, of No. 20 Ellis street. The other, Wesley E. McArthur, aged seventeen, claiming to be the son of an owner of twelve New York dry goods stores, was up to a late hour to-night grumbling in a Lynn cell and demanding that an officer get his bathrobe from one of a pair of suitcases found in McArthur had with him on the yacht.

For the past few days the two boys have been cruising along the shore, according to the yacht owners, in a craft owned by Henry W. Barnes of this city. To-day they were arrested and on Monday morning McArthur will appear in the local court on the charge of breaking and entering and larceny of the yacht.

Fruit Man Badly Burned.

MISS CHRISTINA PRATT

DOCTOR BLAMES SUIT BY WIFE FOR ARREST

MIDDLEBORO, Aug. 27.—Dr. Manuel M. Sylvia of New Bedford, arrested at the home of Miss Christina Pratt, a pretty young school teacher of this town, early in the week and held under $1,000 bonds for appearance, the divorce suit he filed against his wife in March last inspired the allegations which resulted in his being taken into custody here.

This being at the home of the young woman, who is highly respected, when law officers called is very frankly explained by the accused physician and members of their family. He is not only the family physician, but a personal friend of the Pratts, and he was in Middleboro and at their house to spend the vacation as a guest. In the presence of her relatives Dr. Sylvia said:

"We will have this thing out in every court if necessary. I call upon the members of the family to bear me witness to what I say. I say before her mother and her sister. They will tell you I have fulthfully attended members of the family as a physician. The attempt to blast the career of Miss Pratt as a teacher and to blight her reputation would not have been made if I had not filed a divorce libel against my wife.

"I came to be in this house at the time the officers called because I was spending my vacation here upon the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Pratt. What is more, I propose to finish it here. My own home in New Bedford was broken up and I was glad to come here and spend my vacation in this farm.

"When the officers called Miss Pratt was suffering from what was symptomatic of diphtheria. I had sent my chauffeur to New Bedford for anti-toxin. I was asleep on the couch in the front room when the dog barked and then the next thing that happened was a flash light as the officers through which men peered. They forced an entrance and they searched the house. Why I was arrested charged with a crime is something I cannot understand. But am here to prevent this young lady and her family. I am here to fight.

"What Dr. Sylvia has said is true. He is my physician. We knew all about his troubles and that he was seeking a divorce. He came here to visit upon invitation from my parents. If I had not been ill I should have been at the seashore during the whole period of his visit to our house.

YACHT RUNS DOWN A MAN IN ROWBOAT

WOLLASTON, Aug. 27.—James Smith of this place, had a narrow escape from being crushed to death in view of hundreds of people at the yacht race at the Wollaston Yacht Club to-day when the big 25-foot sloop Idalia from Wollaston ran him down in his rowboat. Smith was a member of the crew of the racing boat Ilsamer of the Wollaston Club and was coming back to the clubhouse for a turnbuckle just before the races started.

He was greatly up to the front of the clubhouse when fulenders were noted with alarm. women and children, when the Idalia going out to the starting line bore down upon him.

The motorboat on the Idalia became fouled with the tiller, and before either the big sloop or Smith could change their course the rowboat was struck and carried far under the bow of the big boat.

The women on the clubhouse screamed with fright and men rushed to his assistance in small boats as soon as they realized his predicament. But with powerful strength, Smith worked himself to the stern of the powerful craft that was being carried forward by the rush of the oncoming sloop, jumped overboard and swam clear of the wreckage.

BOSTON & EASTERN FORCES REHEARING BY R. R. BOARD

Men Who Ask Permit to Build High Speed Road Bitter Against Commission.

THE friends and backers of the proposed Boston & Eastern Railroad won a strong point yesterday when they induced the Railroad Commission to grant them a hearing on the question of reopening the record of the original case, which was turned down by the commission by a vote of two to one.

The hearing is to take place next Tuesday and facts will be laid before the commission which it is believed will induce them to use their vote in favor of or against the road until next year.

What makes the friends of the railroad particularly bitter against Commissioners George L. Bishop and Clinton White is that, it is claimed, they have given out the word and then, after the Legislature of the State and the secretary of state have passed upon it, the two commissioners somersaulted artistically and turned the entire affair up in the air.

Like a bolt from the back after a handshake, was the way in which Representative John J. Cregan of Lowell described the action of the Railroad Commissioners.

Many others joined in the excitement with the exception of Chairman Hall, who discovered from the other two among these being Former Governor Guild, who in the Commercial Bulletin charged that commissioners Bishop and White were working in the interest of J. Pierpont Morgan and not in the interest of the thousands of people living along the line of the road.

Commissioner White and Bishop were afforded an opportunity yesterday by the Boston & American Club to speak over the grave charge of the former Governor, who while in office relegated them, but they declined to say anything.

Chairman Hall pointed out that the majority of the commissioners simply decided that it would be better to defer action until next year, and said that the question of who does and who does not favor the road had not come up yet.

People Want the Road.

"That reversal came in a slap in the face to the people of the North Shore," said Representative Cosgrove. "To the citizens who are desirous of getting a railway that will give us the proper service. In addition, it was like a man shaking your hand and then stabbing you in the back. It was a smile followed up with the commission's striking out its proper work.

"The cards have been juggled long enough. The people have been dealt the joker in the pack over too often. It is time that the Boston & Eastern Railroad's cause be strongly expressed. This adverse attitude of the commission has aroused the people. Why, suppose a man told you you were a good fellow and a friend and an honest, how would you feel?

"Through the Essex County delegation, with the exception of Chairman Hall, has created comment without end. Chairman Hall is praised. Two years ago the commission was granted the power to lay out legs solid. Now comes the turnover, and think the people know the value of trying to somersault and stand on their heads.

"Through Essex County delegation we had made up their minds that the Boston & Eastern would prove a benefit to what they wanted in the way of transportation.

"Just what the influence of Governor Guild will be is the question. The attitude of the people during the campaign that they will brook no interference. Essex County will have a word to say. The water dodgers of the commission. No technicality should be selized upon by any way of the Legislature, the Governor and also the people large.

"From everything that had come before the people the road through these localities & Eastern would be able to start at once on the road, and the operations on the petition. Of course, the other lines don't like the unwilling to see the Boston & Eastern get by, as they are to shortsighted to see that the ultimate result of the line will be the quickening of the growth of Boston, and of the country as far as Berlin. The result will be an increase in business for all roads.

Stifling Competition.

"The avowed policy of our courts where workingmen are concerned is that competition shall obtain where a man sells the power of his arm, and that competition ought to exist, even though, as one judge put it, competition is sharp enough sometimes selfish, and often deadly. Nevertheless, competition shall obtain.

"And yet, despite this legal authority, competition can be stifled when the incorporation of the people and railroads are concerned. WHY? A timid state seems to be asking himself that question. They are getting the know. They feel that there is competition in fair field is not going to be choked out of existence by corporations and squeal when a rival enters their midst.

"The keenest objection is being taken in the road and in the decision of the commission by residents of Lynn, Swampscott, but all along the North Shore where the project almost stands.

A letter of disapproval by one of the arch critics of Boston & Eastern is but one such surprise that on all sides is heard the public service corporations are not showing the public holds with the Boston & Eastern project. It is up to the press and other allied opponents.

"The Lynn Board of Trade, our leading manufacturers and mercants are mostly in favor of the road. Ample time for study has been proposed in years which will so add lymph to the Nation's growth in every way.

John H. Bickford of Boston and Salem, a well-known engineer, who is in charge of the promotion of the Boston & Eastern said yesterday

"Though we have been trying hard for more than four years to surmount the various obstacles that have been placed in our path, our courage is still as good as it was the day we began to get at the work. We have been and are still supported in our efforts to make new line a reality by the Boston & Maine, the New York, New Haven & Hartford, the Consolidated, the Boston & Northern, the Boston Albany, the Boston Revere Beach & Lynn railroads and the large financial interestsone of Boston affiliated with these roads."

WOMAN TEACHER ADVISES GIRLS TO MARRY WHEN YOUNG

MRS. MARY ELLARIE OBYRNE

MARRY YOUNG, GIRLS, IS TEACHER'S ADVICE

That's the gospel Mrs. Mary Ellarie Byrne is preaching here and practicing in the government service, preacher.

"Get yourselves husbands as quickly as possible. It's the only way to be happy and contented. Establish a home, and become the queen of the household.

Mrs. Byrne is a graduate Mrs. DeVere himself from far off Alaska to the coddlings of civilization. She says it represents the ideals of her sister experiences.

Mrs. DeVere is not only a queen of a home. She is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Osborne, wife of Lewis H. Osborne, the well-known lawyer, whose offices are in the Moore street, Washington Beach district.

Mrs. DeVere and Mrs. Byrne have not met before for twenty-one years. Her work has carried her over Alaska, Mexico and the U. S. She has taught through the West, and has been principal of Spring School in Sitka, Alaska, for four years.

arly Marriages the Best.

Girls should get married young. I was not married when I was twenty. My one regret is that I did not marry when I was eighteen, or eighteen and a half, preacher.

"There have been talk to claim that marriages late in life are more successful. I am convinced that the opposite is the case, and early marriages are the best. And, therefore, girls, you should get married young.

"There can be no fear that the judgment will be rash and hasty at youthful age. Girls are not children when they are choosing a husband, they are using a matured judgment. They are using a matured view on the age to marry. I will answer, for myself, I husband as quickly and soon as I have always noticed that the young brides are the happiest. If you get married it is never too late to marry. She can love at any age. But romance is a hero misfortune. She then learns what she has missed and is willing to make sacrifices at an early marriage.

"This brings me to another matter. I do not believe in woman's suffrage. The power sphere for our sex is the home, not politics. I don't believe in votes for women. I don't like the men of the parading of women through the streets, bannering banners to get the right to vote. It is unwomanly to parade in this manner.

No Time for Politics.

"Personally, I haven't time to enter politics. No woman has. There is other work for us to do. I can't see why any woman should care to descend from her pedestal for the turmoil of political life.

"Woman's sphere is the home. Many too the endurance to do what a man has to do. They are tired and frail. They are built different, and will remain so. I am not advocating that woman is not the intellectual equal of man. Very often she is of superior intellect. But she don't equal them in endurance.

"I've had all the rights I ever wanted, and have had thousands I never used. I believe in the American flag, and in the American man, too. But I don't believe in votes for women. The women suffragists are only heaping coals of fire on their own heads.

Mrs. DeVere was in Sitka, Alaska, for four years. While there she met the Duke of Abruzzi, whom she describes as a fine gentleman. The Duke was in Alaska to attempt the ascent of Mt. St. Elias, and while in Sitka was feasted by the mission school with which Mrs. DeVere was connected.

The school was about the only place in Sitka at that time where a visitor could stay," said Mrs. DeVere. "It had another advantage in being able to furnish guides who were civilized and thoroughly acquainted with the country, as well.

GARMENT WORKERS ELECT.

Old Officers Again Chosen at Detroit Convention.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 27.—The convention of United Garment Workers of America today re-elected officers as follows: President, T. A. Rickert, Chicago; secretary, A. A. Hangs Self in His Barn.

BROCKTON, Aug. 27.—Edward A. Esterbrook, thirty-four, of No. 53 Auburn street, hung himself in a barn in the rear of his home to-day. His body was discovered swinging from a beam by two children, who notified the police. They cut it down. Esterbrook was married and leaves four children. Despondency over money matters led him to commit suicide.

THIS MAN TELLS US HOW TO MANAGE WOMAN

Agree With Nagging Wife or Flee From Her Presence, Says Gallichan.

THE eternal problem is solved at last. Here comes a man who tells us how to manage women, not tender, pliant old-fashioned women, but how to manage MODERN women.

It is a well-known fact that no man should be without. It should be packed in the suit bumper, tucked away with your golf clubs, with the fish rods, in every conceivable place where you are sure to run into the modern woman.

The fortunate man is Walter M. Gallichan, author of his chapter devoted to wife-beating, is the perpetrator of this stunning little volume. Amazing! Yes, although that was scarcely Mr. Gallichan's intention.

Dissects Hearts and Souls.

To be truthful, his book will probably be of small value to downtrodden and baffled husbands. It will hardly prove the solution to all the problems and troubles of the modern existence alone. For every now and then, although the author is about to reveal the eternal secret, that expectation is disappointed.

Many modern woman—her foibles, her graces, her unfathomable depths—Gallichan mostly true, reflected the heart of Modern Woman with a mercilessness that is appalling. Like the surgeon who cuts and dissects the world all to save the life of some patient, Gallichan dissects the heart of Modern Woman with a merciless and unrelenting hand. He is cold and unappreciative of the pain he may take and administer, so long as he gets material for his book and some in particular.

Almost one might think the author was a woman, suddenly turned traitor to her sex, by revealing certain secrets for any woman to admit.

But the poor wretches of husbands will insist that what they need is a few more points on the secret of wife management in a series of brief and understanding talks by Walter M. Gallichan, by Johannes Sebastian Bach for playing. Anyway, that's what I find in the book, which has a harp, 2, borrow it; 3, pay it. Mr. Gallichan has a chapter devoted to "The Art of Nagging."

"Nagging, O man," says the author, "is another name for your own conscience." What a dull world it would be if we were all perfect!

"Do not nag," he says in another place, "but if you must nag, nag over the guineas pigs! The man of true efficiency solves the duel of the sexes by the simple device of a guineas pig.

Mr. Gallichan says things about the designs that no gentleman would be guilty of saying about a lady.

For instance:

"Two are the cases recorded of women who find exquisite satisfaction in the infliction of pain upon their husbands, and that their lovers. From this source springs the ghastly history of Bluebeard.

Many women revive, in the most coldblooded fashion, the sterile cruelty of Nero over the affections of men. Their treatment of their victims is a study in the refinement of torture. The spectacle of a man grovelling for her favor is a delight to the cruel woman.

Considering this coldness, and this cruelty, this unfeelingness directed by the female of the species, it is a wonder that woman towards an end, and a sensitive soul, quenite the delicacy of an amative nature. It is often employed to conceal, rather to cost a mask of devotion.

Many women are perfect mistresses of the modern art of sarcasm. They are trained periodically with cat-o'-nine-tails than to be whipped, and stung, and pricked in many ways. Sarcasm is the word of all.

The best way to manage a nagging woman is to agree with her that you are a perfect brute and wretch, and then to flee from her presence.

NORWOOD ELKS AT BATH.

Thirty-five members of Norwood Lodge of Elks left last night on the steamer City of Rockland for a day's outing at Bath, Me., as guests of the Bath Lodge of Elks. This is the first outing of the lodge since its formation about two years ago. The party arrives at Bath early this morning. After dinner at the New Meadows Inn, the party will take a trip on a chartered steamer among the islands of the Kennebec River, and later return to the clubhouse. They will return in the evening, arriving in Boston early Monday morning.

Kenneth McKenzie, the exalted ruler of the lodge of Norwood, was unable to take the trip. The chairman of the committee of arrangements for the outing is Parley B. Thompson.

MONPONSETT'S "HANS WAGNERS" GET A SET-BACK

Home Run Sluggers Are Barred From Game for Driving Balls Over Fence.

IT'S a case of no-ups-it-again with the lid down at Monponsett. One after another the good things in life have been allowed down there, then prohibited, then allowed again. First it was kissing at the picnic sideshow. Then it was the Saturday night dance. Next it was the pony express. Now it's baseball.

About a month ago Mr. Snow, who owns the baseball park and neighboring cranberry bog, hoisted the "Keep off" sign on the game that Hans Wagner and a few others made famous. Mr. Snow took this action because the heavy hitters of the Monponsett B. B. C. persisted in banging long flies into his cranberry bog. Instead of the ball being recovered it was lost in the vines, and the game was delayed while the ball was found.

Ban on Home Runs.

No player who hits two flies into Snow's bog during one game shall be allowed to bat again in the same game.

A total of five hits into the bog shall bar the player for the rest of the season on the home grounds.

Any fly into any part of the bog shall be considered a three-bagger, no matter how far it goes. Also the man who goes after the ball will, it is charged, be charged for it in baseball fashion and with due regard for the rules governing.

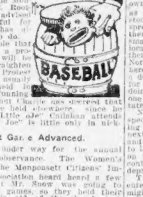
At the beginning of every game the referee will call out "Keep away, bog chaser," and he alone shall venture into the bog. He shall be lightweight and shall wear rubber-soled shoes.

There shall be no games on Sundays.

Sluggers Are Sore.

Of course, that lets the lid on baseball at Monponsett, but it is going to be enough to satisfy cranberry bog leaguers like Teddy Hayes, Freddie Willett, Hughie Hayes, George Lally, Arthur Lally, Bill Kennedy, Charley Adams, Charlie Hall, Harry Hall, Jimmy Hall, Jack Hall, Hooker Lynch and the Smallton boys. Some of these sluggers have shown that they can hit a ball so far that it is necessary to use a field glass to see it land.

Mr. Snow has got the upper hand for the present, but he has not won out. Some of the affected baseballers have threatened to form a new order of baseball. Others have suggested that the Monponsett first team and all the regular members of the second team go to Hanson and form a baseball team there. They have been talked to by baseball players and members of the Monponsett B. C. club, and advised to do so. They have also been told that baseball is a game that is played on a baseball field, and that it is probable that some sort of a baseball field could be straightened out for baseball meetings, would be found in Hanson. Charlie Cunningham, who is the baseball expert of the Monponsett baseball club, has advised them to go to Hanson and form a baseball team there. "Little Joe" is little only in size.



Whist Gar.e Advanced.

Plans are under way for the annual Labor Day whist party of the Women's Auxiliary of the Monponsett Citizens' Improvement Association, board heard a few days ago. Mr. Snow was asked to allow baseball games, so they held their party on the grounds of the church last Thursday. Big success, barring the fact that the ball players complained of the absence. It has been planned to hold the affair on Labor Day, but the futility of running a rival attraction to the baseball game was pointed out. Mrs. Donaldson is in charge.

Of course, there has to be a little scrap now over which of the baseball teams shall play on Labor Day. The first team and the second team contend that they are the real thing in baseball. There is another aggregation, headed by Jimmy Hall, known as the Lally Lally, that claims to know more about baseball than the first and second teams put together.

The Lally aggregation comprises two teams, respectively called the "Hooters" and the "Swingers." Dave says that they will play on the Snow grounds Labor Day. Other plans are pending. Looks as if there might be a baseball game, but it is to be played days, before Paul Rieln went on an auto trip through New York State.

SCORE SCHOOL OFFICIALS.

Roxbury Parents Complain Over Lack of Playground.

Roxbury parents are still complaining because there is no playground attached to the new Dearborn school, Dudley and Park. Dr. James A. Mansfield, of No. 242 Dudley street, a leader in the fight against the school, has called the committee attention to detail on the part of schoolhouse officials is detrimental to the welfare of Ward 17 children. Dr. Mansfield, who is a prominent member of the Roxbury Improvement Association, said:

"I find many pupils of this school suffering from adenoids and tonsilitis, and they invariably complain of too long confinement inside the schoolhouse. I wrote to have the association take up the matter at the next meeting. When the new schoolhouse was planned it was the intention of, I understand, to tear down the old one and use its site for a yard."

HIDING IN SWAMP.

Somersworth Murderer Believed to Be Near Saco, Me.

BIDDEFORD, Me., Aug. 27.—City Marshal Beatty of Saco received information from Somersworth, N. H., that Nicholas Capsalis, or Capsalakos, the alleged murderer, wanted at Somersworth, N. H., for the killing of Sam, is hiding in a place of swamp known as the Great Heath, in the northern part of Saco, about five miles from the city. A man corresponding to the description of the murderer has been seen in the vicinity of Saco. Frank Fox, a deputy sheriff of Saco, and by Henry A. Hayes, the rural mail carrier.

Marshal Beatty, Detective Louis Stratakos and Deputy Sheriff Cashe of Somersworth, with a posse, are searching the woods at North Saco.

3 Drown as Dredger Turns.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 27.—Rhipping was tied up here to-day by the overturning of a dredger. Three men were drowned and thirteen saved.

MONEY IN REAL ESTATE

HELPS FOR WOMEN WHO WOULD INVEST THEIR

This is the third in a series of articles on investments for women written specially for the Sunday American by a woman who has had much experience in the buying and selling of real estate and who is thoroughly familiar with the subject. While directed mainly toward women, these articles will prove valuable business lessons to all. "Real Estate as an Investment" is treated to-day.

By FLORENCE E. WATKINS.

PERHAPS the science, as we may call it, of real-estate investment is the most intricate of any to the category of investments to grasp, especially for a woman who is looking into these matters for the first time. For there are not a few simple and fixed principles on which to base one's judgment, as is the case in, naturally, one of prices. As I stated at first, you cannot say always definitely fixed price and expect to get what you want at just that figure. So keep in mind only the approximate amount which you wish to pay. You may not ask, "But how shall I know just what to pay for the property, perhaps they are asking for more than it is worth, or, unless you do, and not be aware of it, unless you have had preliminary figuring for yourself, and then stand by your decision.

But before taking up the matter of purchasing price let us consider the subject of rentals; for it is on these that we are going to base our conclusions as to the purchase price. As I have said the specialties in real estate passes by the $80 per suite property and selects that of more modest rental. Why should it be the same. You can easily see that it is much easier to stand the loss of, say, $25 or $30 monthly rental than it is $75 or $80. But, you say, $75 or $80 is considerably more while I am coming in. That is true in a way, but the little considerable sum of $25 or $30 a month that will likely be vacant only a short time, whereas your $75 apartment may remain idle for a number of months.

Take Rental as a Basis.

So, you see, we begin with the rentals as a basis. Having found these—and you must be sure that you get the true rentals, for sometimes the owner and the tenants "sticker" in matters and deliberately deceive the prospective purchaser—from the rentals you can go on to figure what the expenditures; heat of furnished, light for the halls, janitor service if furnished, interest on mortgage (if any), insurance, taxes, assessments, repairs, etc. All of these will be deduct, say, two months' rent in order to be liberal. If nothing is added to this it gives you the amount that your investment should net you.

Now, in real estate investments, you must allow 6 months' vacancy in each year per cent, on your money invested, certainly not more. Some say one month, but I say six per cent, and even 20 per cent, but of course a great deal depends upon the agent you go into the obtaining of these higher rates, and the locality. Also, if you are looking for a certain period of time, for we might say that the property is possibly fitted only for a special, certainly suitable, circumstances of Mortgage Only 50 Per Cent.

Sixty per cent of the value is generally loaned on improved real estate, but I advise you to secure a mortgage for only 50 per cent. or even less. Then you have the right to look for future renewals of your mortgage, especially if it be for a long term of years. It is best to have a bank mortgage, rather than a loan from a private individual, for a bank practically "goes on forever."

Now, I am sure that one can obtain a good-sized first mortgage loan if one cares to take back a second mortgage, provided that the party is responsible and above reproach. Such a mortgage would be considered the general locality, we will say, and the value of the land and of the neighborhood. In fact, you have to do this in many cases, for you will be asked to do it by the owner who is selling the property itself, for these are the contributing factors in determining the value of the property.

Then again, a number of other points before mentioned and which makes for a good investment. Let me say here that the first mortgage and perhaps leaves a surplus of enough to reduce the first mortgage somewhat, especially if it is too large a part of the value of the property.

Figure as to property itself. Note its condition carefully, from cellar to garret. If it needs painting and nowadays many have "mill improvements," making this class of work a very easy one, and I presume that a wooden building means quite an outlay for repairs in the years for outside painting. In some cases individual heating plants are being installed, and if this is the case and then again the arrangement may be that the tenants look after the fires in their building, and also janitor service. And then, too, the property may be in need of thorough repair.

A word as to the floor steps in acquiring the property. First be certain that a thorough title search is made, and that the attorney does not, of course, give you any such guarantee, when he comes to the "signing papers" be certain that you know what you are signing.

MICHIGAN 2,810,173.

Census Shows Population Increase of 16.1 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 27.—The population of the state of Michigan was announced to-day by the Census Bureau as 2,810,173; last census 2,420,982; increase 16.1.

ACTOR HODGE TO USE BEAR AS "MOUSER"

Expects to Install Marshfield Fair Prize in New York Apartment.

By winning the Thomas W. Lawson, honey bear, Bill Teddy, at the Marshfield Fair, William T. Hodge, the actor, findhis artistic senses in fearful conflict and is, if you can believe him. Mr. Hodge says it is going to take all of his will power to keep from breaking into "The Man From Home" and organize a one-ring, one-bear circus. Mr. Hodge has been for bears; they are the household pets of the discriminating few, he explained yesterday, and in his new possession, for the one thing, outside of immediate relatives, that most appeals to the heart and mind. "My admiration for bears," said Mr. Hodge, "has been growing for years, but I had never dared hope that I would someday own anything as interesting as a successful, exercise of dodging my own pet brickbats. On the hard and soft corners, Bears are much more to be desired around home than almost anything you can imagine, excepting possibly horses, automobiles, cows and other cattle. I am told, too, that bears are great mousers, and Marshfield Fair is free from mice in Coldwood I am already feeling pity for the mice in my Riverside Drive apartment in the City of York. Theirs' will be a rough life when Bill Teddy joins us there for the Winter

Hodge Has Doubts.

"Of course, Mrs. Hodge has her woman's doubts about Bill Teddy, but that can be explained by bringing to mind that women seldom have a broad view of things when a new bear is brought into the home. I don't realize that myself, but I was warned by my winning the Dreamwold bear at Marshfield. Of course, every well-informed man should first take auto himself a wife, and after that he should look around for a bear. While Mrs. Hodge does not care to bear, even in moderation, I am sure she will learn to appreciate Bill Teddy after the has driven the vacuum cleaner for a few times over New York apartment."

Mr. Hodge went on to explain that even the forge hands at his Summer home exhibit a deep feeling for the new bear, because the bear is the annual arrived from Marshfield and was installed in the stable every night. Bill Teddy has been given the run of the teeth and spent the day in careful admiration of the horses. Perhaps he was a mark of respect that even a bear could not fail to appreciate.

Hodge Boss Likes Bears.

Bill Teddy will have a splendid home with Mr. Hodge, sleeping with the autocrat of the family and looking for a second annual arrival from Marshfield. Miss Gwendolen Hodge, only daughter of the actor, has informed her father, it is said, that she would like a companion for Bill Teddy, as he is rank prejudice. She is strong for Bill Teddy.

EX-SENATOR BUTLER DEAD.

Had Served Several Terms in Bay State Legislature.

GEORGETOWN, Aug. 27.—Former State Senator William A. Butler is dead at his residence here.

Mr. Butler was born in Newbury, February 4, 1824. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1845, studied law, was admitted to the bar, graduating from its law school in 1878, and began the practice of his profession at Georgetown and Newburyport, complete the list of offices he held, which he was elected to the House of Representatives in 1858, and was a member of the Committee on Prisons. His election to the Senate was in 1859, and he served two terms in that body.

In the Senate he was chairman of the Committee on Cities and the Committee on Bills in the Third Reading. He also served as member of the Committee on Probate and Insolvency.

MISS ILLINGTON ON STAGE.

Is Given Warm Welcome on Return to Footlights.

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 27.—Margaret Illington, after an absence of two years from the stage, returned to it at the Tacoma Theatre to-night. She was given 60 flowers at the end of the big scenic play, the first presented here, and many of the largest audiences ever assembled here.

The play which marks the return is the old French drama, is a story of mother love. Miss Illington has not been cast in the story is one of intense interest. It is well suited to the star's talents, and has its climaxes. Edward Ellsner, who adapted the play and directed its production, has a prominent part in its presentation.

WARSHIPS BLOWN ASHORE.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Two British naval vessels, the torpedo boat destroyer Success and torpedo boat No. 5, were blown ashore on the Scotch coast by a gale. The Success is ashore on the Loch Gare, mouth of the Firth of Clyde, and it is hoped that she can be pulled off without damage, but the torpedo boat is driven hard on the rocks near Campbeltown, Argyleshire, near the entrance to the Clyde, and is in a dangerous position. The Success is a destroyer of 280 tons and carried a crew of 63 men. No. 5 is a 27-ton, 2-knot boat, and she carried thirty-five men.

An Apology

We desire to apologize for the noise, confusion and congested appearance in some of the departments. It is a condition that is unavoidable, due to the extensive alterations made necessary by the addition of an extensive annex. Every effort is being made to bring this work to rapid completion and we trust that the Boston public will overlook these temporary and unpleasant conditions.

DEMOCRATS OPEN THE CAMPAIGN IN WEST PART OF STATE

Leaders Urge Support of Candidate, Whoever He May Be.

CHICOPEE, Aug. 27.—The Democratic State campaign started to-day in Springfield, Westfield, this city and Northampton, a remarkable proceeding in almuch as nobody knows who will be candidate for Governor and the State convention is as far off as October 6. The campaign is begun, moreover, in the western part of Massachusetts, where Republicans have always held as their strongbold.

The Democratic leaders are starting an aggressive fight in the enemy's territory. They say they are going to elect the next Governor. At a recent state committee meeting a delegation was named to tour the State and get the party organization at work. The spellbinders will begin in Worcester to-day and included chairman of the State Committee Frederick L. Macleod; chairman of the Democratic caucus, John F. McDonald; chairman of the Legislative Committee, Representative Thomas F. Riley of Malden; Representative Timothy Callahan; ex-Senator David R. Shea and ex-Representative Carmody. Former ex-Representative Charles A. Dean of Wakefield will join the party tomorrow.

Welcomed at Springfield.

The delegation was welcomed at Springfield by State, legislative, city and town committeemen and there was a dinner and a conference of the State Committee. To-day and then an auto trip to Westfield. The party expects to cover Hampden County to-day, and Chairman Macleod, Riley and Mc-Donald, chairman of the Democratic caucus, John F. McDonald; chairman of the Legislative Committee, Representative Thomas F. Riley of Malden; Representative Timothy Callahan; ex-Senator David R. Shea and ex-Representative Carmody. Former ex-Representative Charles A. Dean of Wakefield will join the party tomorrow.

FISHERMAN OF 14 HOLDS SEA RECORD

Charlie Cahoon of Swampscott Is the Youngest on the Atlantic Coast.

SWAMPSCOTT, Aug. 27.—The youngest fisherman on the Atlantic coast—that is, the youngest one who follows it as a business and makes a big success of it—is, without doubt, Charlie Cahoon, who has just passed fourteen. Besides gathering the silvery inhabitants of the sea he has a silvery voice, which has been heard for some years regularly in a church choir of Swampscott.

All the past summer, as the dawn burned away the night and the sun crept above the horizon, Charlie piled his trawl tubs astraddle of the gunne at the fishing grounds six and one eight miles off Egg Rock. When he first appeared there, so far out to sea, fishermen hurried to his boat, thinking that a little boy had drifted to sea. But when they saw Charlie's catch the would-be-rescuers hustled back to their work realizing that they had found a youthful competitor worthy of their best skill.

Fate made Charlie a fisherman at fourteen. He has been singing in the choir of the Church of the Holy Name for a couple of years back and possesses a voice that bids fair to help him along in life if he elects a musical course; but instead of following the fisherman's job or trailing his voice for opera, Charlie says he is going to study engineering and when he enters the high school next month it is with the determination of going to the Institute of Technology in Boston to finish his education.

WATERBUGS, ROACHES, ANTS

Few people are aware of the reveal of disease by means of germs carried by different pests.

As a result of my own ignorance in seeking their hiding places, I have always found them in the coolest parts of dwellings, where germs are sure to thrive.

I have found food supplies tainted by them, partly by excrement, partly by a dark fluid exuded from their bodies, as they crawl about. Others have an unpleasant odor, like the spread of that from a decayed carcass.

Feeling, as I do, a certain sense of responsibility, I herewith call the attention of the Boards of Health of different cities and towns to the following facts:

Martin's Pest Exterminators for Waterbugs, Roaches and Ants is non-poisonous, non-greasy, non-sticky, clean, odorless, safe, sure, cheap. 50c, $1.00, $2.00 and $3.00 sizes. For powders, sense 2cst.

DOCTORS TO REPORT DREADED DISEASE

State Board of Health Issues a Bulletin on Infantile Paralysis.

A bulletin just issued by the State Board of Health brings to public attention that the dreaded infantile paralysis which has been so prevalent in this State is contagious, and under a regulation of the board physicians must report such cases immediately, so that prompt action may be taken to stamp it out. New York is also to have in effect a similar regulation requiring the reporting of such cases after September 1.

The promptness with which the State Board of Health took measures to fight this strange malady has caused Massachusetts to be looked upon as leading the country in probing this scourge.

Dr. William T. Hannan, assistant secretary of the State Board of Health, says that if the present time flies, the disease is fed and lifeyide each repeat from eight to ten cases. Springfield has over 100 cases and Fall River about fifty. Besides these there are a few scattered cases in various sections of the Bay State.

Statistics of the Disease.

In the bulletin of the State Board of Health, which has just come from the printers, the major portion of the pages are devoted to articles regarding infantile paralysis, statistics concerning its ravages and methods of treatment. Through an appropriation of $5,000 made by the Legislature last January, adequate inquiry—an inquiry, such as has attracted and received commendation from the Washington authorities now going on.

Some of the conclusions arrived at through the investigations are set forth by Dr. Robert W. Lovett of the State Board. His figures show there were 626 cases of it throughout the State last year and fifty-one deaths. In sixty-two children the paralysis entirely disappeared. In 404 others, partially still remained. Showing recovery from the disease itself. In sixty-one, paralysis partially remained. Fifty other cases give no record either way. Of the deaths, six children were under one year; twenty-two from one to ten years; sixteen over ten years, and in eight other fatalities the ages were not stated in the reports Dr. Lovett received.

Boston Had 299 Cases.

Boston had 200 cases. One hundred and fifty cases were particularly studied. Of this number 115 children had attended school. It was noted that no child fed on breast milk alone in these cases was affected by the disease.

Regarding the present campaign, Dr. Lovett says: "The report for 1910 will be what the profession makes it. The Board is making ready for the present and full report of typical cases, but also for sanitary cases. The object of the 1910 inquiry is twofold. First, the forestalling of the epidemic of early symptoms and types of the disease. Second, a study of the epidemic while in the contagion seems to occur, with a continued search for the mode of entry of the virus into the body."

A summary made by the Department of Orthopedic Surgery of the Harvard Medical School, embodying the work of E. H. Bradford, Dr. Lovett, Dr. J. Ridlon Bradford, Dr. Augustus Thorndike, Dr. Robert Soutter and Dr. Robert B. Osgood in the treatment of infantile paralysis, is printed in the bulletin, as a guide to practitioners. It places the malady as having three stages and describes various devices which may be used to correct deformities.

WOMAN IN GAMBLING RAID.

Boston Police Arrest Three and Get Policy Outfit.

When the police of the East Dedham street station swooped down on the premises at No. 84½ Berkeley street yesterday afternoon, two women and a complete gambling outfit were taken into the drag net. The two men, Frank Clark, formerly of No. 590 Tremont street, Roxbury, and Fred Smith, thirty-six, of No. 880 Broadway, Chelsea, were held on a charge of setting up and promoting a lottery scheme. Annie Brown, formerly of No. 880 Tremont street, Walpole, was held on a charge of being present where gaming implements were found. The police found sixty seven policy slips, seven policy slips, one carbon plate, and one carbon sheet, which were all confiscated.

BIG JUMP IN COTTON.

New High Record for Season at 16.90.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—A new high record was established for the season in the cotton market today when August reactions sold at 16.90 or 900 points above the closing figure of last night, and over 64 per cent above the low price of Saturday morning. This sensational rain was due to covering by belated shorts because of the issuance of notices yesterday which appeared to represent all the available long cotton for delivery in the hall tender, and which left the remaining short interest without protection.

Band Concert Tomorrow.

The Municipal Music Department has arranged for four free band concerts on Sunday afternoon. Kmrich's band will play on Boston Common, the Bands Roma at Jamaica Pond, Ivers Military Band at Wood Island Park, and another one at Marine Park.

HARVARD FOOTBALL SQUAD TO GET ONLY INVALID DIET

JUST why Harvard has not for years vanquished every football team with which it came in contact has just come out. No, it was not bad coaching or a failure to select the best men in the college—it has been bad kidneys. Sure!

But just wait until those Crimson Boys trot out on the gridiron this Fall! Tom Boston and New England will see a bunch of players with the finest allotment of kidneys ever added to anybody.

Dr. S. H. Blodgett of Boston and Lincoln is going to see to the production of all boys while doctors of other inclinations will perfect the boys in the intricacies of the game. Candidates for the football team go into camp at Oceanville, Me., the latter part of this week for a fortnight's stay. They step at Dr. Blodgett's camp, by the request of Head Coach Percy Haughton Dr. Blodgett, as kidney specialist, will take care of the diet of the candidates and they are to be treated just as though they were kidney patients.

Banish Meats and Pies.

The boys are to have very little meat. Meat contains proteids. When the boys leave this, it is pretty certain that the candidates themselves will attack meat. And they are to bar pastries, alcohol and draughts and cold drinks. All of these things are the undoing of football players.

But on the other hand they are to grab all the carbohydrates they can hang on the Maine bushes. Pine for the kidneys are carbohydrates. Every thing candidates must bear to know a carbohydrate when they meet it. After that things are pretty sure to go well.

It was publicly yesterday that the reason for this kidney treatment is that each year when the men first start to train the kidneys of many are laid up with intestinal troubles, the result of drinking any old thing in the line of drinking water, the men coming from all parts of the country. If the kidneys and digestive organs are kept in the best possible condition for the first few days during this change of diet these troubles can be avoided and the organs become accustomed, as it were, with no resulting indisposition.

To Feast on Cereals.

To go into a more exhaustive study of the question, it may be said that all food stuffs, like Caesar's Gaul, are divided into three parts—the proteids, carbohydrates and fats. Proteids act as an irritant to the kidneys and may bring on intestinal troubles, so they are to be avoided. The irritation resulting from a change of diet. If the kidneys are going to be thus irritated as possible no trouble is apt to ensue.

Dr. William T. Hannan, assistant secretary of the State Board of Health, says that if the present time flies, the disease is fed and lifeyide each repeat from eight to ten cases. Springfield has over 100 cases and Fall River about fifty. Besides these there are a few scattered cases in various sections of the Bay State.

Fats are to be very little used. Meat contains fats, so does milk. Fine for the kidneys are carbohydrates. Every thing candidates must bear to know a carbohydrate when they meet it. After that things are pretty sure to go well.

Must Avoid Draughts.

The men will be protected from draughts or sudden cold, as these are instrumental in bringing on the troubles from which they will be guarded.

The idea of taking the candidates in hand in this manner and looking after their diet is not entirely unique in the treatment of football players, but in this case it will doubtlessly be more thorough, and it will be interesting to the followers of the game to learn the results. The illnesses with which the men often are attacked on their return to college in the Fall, and suddenly going into practice, without any gradual change in food or exercise, simply by the change from one mode of living to another, has a decided weakening effect on the men, which means that much time is lost in getting them into condition, if, in fact, they may safely play the game.

Allowances Cut Down.

Thoroughly good condition is one preventative against injuries, and in taking the precautions which they are taking, the Harvard coaches are to be congratulated on this advance towards the safer playing of the game.

While meats should be eliminated in the case of a victim of kidney trouble, the Harvard squad will not be deprived of this description of food, the allowance being merely be cut down somewhat, as plenty of nourishment can be found in other foods. Their diet will probably be along these lines which are home cooked food, and the return of these quasi-afflicted-with-kidney-trouble football candidates will be eagerly anticipated.

FRENCH AERONAUT FALLS.

Legagneux Badly Injured at Havre Meet.

HAVRE, France, Aug. 27.—Aviator Legagneux was injured fatally, it is believed, when his biplane fell sixty feet with him here this afternoon, striking a tree and overturning, burying him in the wreckage. Legagneux was one of three who finished the endurance flight of seven hundred miles in the port of France last week. He was taking part in the aviation meet here.

SIBLEY MUST STAND TRIAL ON ELECTION BRIBE CHARGE

Standard Oil Books Demanded in Probe of Lavish Use of Money.

WARREN, Pa., Aug. 27.—Former Congressman Joseph C. Sibley has got to stand trial on the charge that he debauched voters in his district in his campaign for the Republican nomination for Congress, and that he is one of the most shameful corruptionists gifted to Standard Oil who ever figured in politics. He was arrested on the charge of conspiring to bribe voters and yesterday his lawyers failed in their attempt to quash the information on technicalities.

There was a stormy scene in court when Attorney Bell, counsel for the prosecution, offered to show the guilt of Sibley then and there.

Four Others Accused.

Justice H. S. Perry presided at the hearing and held Sibley for trial next month in $1,000. There are four other co-defendants. They are Frank H. Taylor, Sibley's private secretary; George B. Nunn, D. D. Crandall and D. M. Howard, who, it is charged, received $17,600 of Sibley's money during the campaign which resulted in his nomination.

After getting the nomination by, it is charged, the three wholesale bribers of the district ever knew, Sibley was exonerated for his methods and arrested. It is said he was too sick to continue in the duties and witness. He had disappeared to see. H. Wheeler, the present Congressman, for the nomination at the recent primaries. Pennsylvania, has been used to the hearing stories of political corruption ever since Standard Oil took a hand in its politics, but reports of what was done in Warren County in this fight were the limit.

Audit Campaign Expenditures.

Sibley led Wheeler by only 600 votes, after spending, it is claimed, $42,500. All the defendants in the case appeared before Justice Perry except Sibley, and he sent a certificate from Dr. H. F. Hammond stating he was unable to make the trip from Franklin to the city on account of illness. The defendants all waived a hearing when it was found impossible for the judge to quash the information on the ground that a wrong date had been given in regard to the primary election and that the residence of a certain person was misstated.

An audit of the campaign expenditures will begin on Monday, and evidence will be offered to show that the Standard Oil Company contributed largely to Sibley's campaign expenses. W. F. Brown, the Democratic candidate, has said subpoenas served upon the officers of the Standard Oil Company, a Standard Oil subsidiary, summoning them to bring to the court the books required and records of the executive board, which, it is said, cover the period when voters were being tempted to sell their votes.

Must Show Bank Books.

Sibley will have to show his bank books and everything else which will indicate how much money he received and deposited during the fight.

Sibley is one of the most prominent men in Western Pennsylvania, and is manufacturer and former partner of Senator Knox. He served in the Fifty-Third and Fifty-Fourth Congresses, and in the Fifty-Seventh and in the Fifty-Eighth. He was re-elected to the Fifty-Ninth.

Sibley is supported to be a rabid free silverite and was at one time boomed for the Vice-Presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket. But he turned Republican and became one of the State Committee's supporters when an attempt was made to remove the latter from the head of the State. People who thought him an advocate of their rights were fooled when he was shown up in the Archbold Standard Oil letters.

It is admitted, when exposure came, he had been a true friend of Archbold and had been for thirty years. He wanted to get back into the next Congress and Archbold would aid him there. That is why more than $40,000 was spent this Summer to get him the Republican nomination.

Amazed at Methods.

The campaign conducted in his behalf was scandalous, even to people who were used to rotten politics. One of the things which came to light was the method used to get about 1,200 votes in a settlement of Swedes. As each voter approached the polling place he was given a cigar. It was encased in a silk wrapper bearing the admonition, "Vote for Sibley." Inside the silk wrapper was a $2 bill.

In another district a hotel was hired for three days and everything within it was free to men who voted right. Veiled threats of loss of business were made to Sibley's opponents by Standard Oil agents. Returns were altered to suit the interests of Sibley and a settlement of the

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS TO THE PLAINSMEN

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 27.—Before hundreds of cowboys and plainsmen, The-odore Roosevelt today declared himself a progressive. In his speech delivered here he paid tribute to the West, old and new, and said:

"The West stands for growth, for progress. No man of the whole American people stand A great democracy must be progressive or it will soon cease to be either great or democratic. No nation, no State, no party can stand still. I greet you, men of the West and I stand for progress as all men must stand who are progressive.

"The man of the West, throughout the successive stages of Western growth, has always been one of the two or three most typical figures—indeed, I am tempted to say the most typical figure—in American life, and no man can really understand our country and appreciate what it really is and what it promises unless he has the fullest and closest sympathy with the deeds and aspirations of the West. The price to be paid for this is to be found in the fact that the Westerner is so good an American. He is an American first and foremost; for this is the great lesson, friends that all of us need to learn and to keep, the lesson that it is unimportant whether a man lives North or South, East or West, provided he is genuinely and in good faith an American, that he feels every part of the United States as his own, and that he is honestly desirous to uphold the interests of all other Americans in whatever sections of the country they may dwell.

ROOSEVELT SPEECH SCORED BY WOMAN

Mrs. Charlotte M. Smith, President of the Woman's Homestead Association, also President of the Boston Woman's Board of Trade, and a philanthropist of national reputation, has taken issue with former President Roosevelt.

She says that it is time he stopped preaching to women about race suicide, and the hand that rocks the cradle, and did something practical to better the industrial condition of women. She challenges the founder of "My Policies," to point out to one official act of his, while President, for the social or economic betterment of women.

The specific utterance of Roosevelt to which Mrs. Smith takes exceptions, is his speech last week at Ufica, N. Y., to the farmers. In it he said that the conditions of farm life must always be shaped with a view to the welfare of the farmer's wife and the farm laborer's wife quite as much as to the welfare of the farmer and the laborer.

"This is all very fine," says Mrs. Smith "but preaching will never bring about the condition. Discussion, publicity, organized and well directed action are needed. Mr. Roosevelt let his golden opportunity while in office slip away. He was busy with other things." Now let him show his goodhearted sincerity by hurling broadsides about women's rights, instead of harping so much on women's duties."

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETE SECRETLY MARRIES

After an acquaintance of five years, beginning when they met at dancing party, Peter McCha and Miss Carrie McCartney, both of Canada, slipped away from home on Monday last and journeying to Nashua, N. H., were united in marriage by the Rev. George W. Buzzell. They spent several days visiting summer resorts in the Granite State before returning to Cambridge. When Mr. McCha brought his bride home they were received with open arms. All their friends declared that the hero and heroine of a delightful romance.

Mr. McCha is twenty-four years old and a son of James B. McCha of No. 183 Auburn street, Cambridgeport, while the bride is eighteen and the daughter of David McCartney of No. 193 Hamilton street, in the same district of Cambridge. The groom is a prominent Boston Y. M. C. A. athlete and both he and his pretty wife have a host of friends.

The acquaintance were much surprised to hear of the wedding and he is being overwhelmed with congratulations. The reception which is being planned will be one of the social events of the autumn season in Cambridge.

Bottle Note Tells of Tragedy at Sea

Michael Drew, of the South End, Reported Lost on Schooner John D. of Portland.

Superintendent Pierce of police headquarters yesterday received from Stonington, Me., a telegram stating that a bottle found on the beach contained the following:

A boy found to-day a bottle on the shore near here, in which was the following note, "Scotty John Drew of the South End, Boston, that his brother Michael was lost on the Schooner John D. of Portland, in the fog. We can't get help. It is now Aug. 20."

Nobody could be found in Boston who knew the writer of the note, or his brother, John Drew. The John D. was a twelve ton schooner sailing from a New Jersey port, and built in 1885.

FAMINE IN SCOTLAND.

Threatened by Rains That Prevent the Harvest of Crops.

GLASGOW, Aug. 27.—Scotland is threatened with famine as the result of destruction of crops by storms. Continued rains have prevented the harvesting of such crops as potatoes, turnips and fodder have done immense damage. No betterment of conditions is forecasted in reports received today. The situation is already desperate.

CAUGHT 2,866,900 POUNDS OF FISH

The last week was a record breaker for T wharf, in the size of the catches of all ships reporting at the pier. During the week, there were eighty-three vessels that came in with fish weighing in the aggregate 2,866,900 pounds. Last year there were sixty-seven vessels with 1,913,400 pounds. Many of the offshore fishermen reported larger catches than have been the rule recently.

Lack of bait hampered the fishermen last week, so that under ordinary conditions the catches might have been even larger than recorded. There were more than a score of vessels at Provincetown yesterday waiting for bait. Some had been there several days.

Captain Ben Lansden of the schooner Helen reported the finding and burial of a body at sea. The body is supposed to have been that of a fisherman lost from the M. Madeline several weeks ago. Most of the flesh had disappeared, the body was clothed in dark blue trousers, thin red undershirt and coarse red sweater. No means of identification could be found.

CHECK FOREST FIRES IN THE NORTHWEST

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 27. — According to a despatch received by Adjutant General Ainsworth at the War Department today from General Walter Howe, commanding the Department of Dakota, forest fires in Montana and Idaho have been checked and others extinguished by United States soldiers. A report from Captain Kilbourne Tuller, of the Fourteenth United States Infantry, states that fires on Dutch Creek Mountain have been extinguished and the troops' camp moved to the fires at Glacier Park.

Snow and rain have been material factors in subduing fires. Captain Tuller adds that the temperature is below freezing point and the troops are suffering with cold. The situation, he says, can be handled by foresters and rangers.

Reports from Captain S. S. Hulley, near Ieeli, Idaho, states that the fires near there have been much reduced in size by rain and snow. Reports from troops elsewhere in that State indicate that fires are either out or under control. Four companies of troops are Arlee and Dixon, Idaho, will be available within a day or two for duty elsewhere.

Although a number of large fires are raging in portions of the West the situation generally is much improved according to a report from Chief Forester Graves of Missoula, Mont., received at the Forest Service to-day.

PLAN SETTLEMENT FOR MUSIC STUDY

A music school settlement for Boston, similar to the New York Music Settlement, at which poor boys and girls will have an opportunity to get a thorough musical training at 10 cents a lesson, is the latest activity of the Civic Service House.

Daniel Bloomfield is the organizer of the movement and the directors are Mrs. James J. Storrow, Frederick J. Allen of the Boston City History Club, John Orth, teacher and composer, and William J. Baltzell, editor of the Musician.

Mayor Fitzgerald has named the directors of his good will and co-operation.

The motive is to cultivate, not only a taste for the beautiful and best in life, but to make for better citizenship by introducing art into the homes of the poor.

The ultimate object is to have a larger music settlement house that will accommodate all in Boston and even in New England," said Daniel Bloomfield in explaining the project to the Sunday American.

"At present we shall have to be content with two rooms at the Civic Service House. Gradually we will work to the final object of having a house with choral and social clubs and regular concerts. We will have weekly meetings of parents and monthly and yearly recitals.

"The Webster club, one of the waggery clubs, will be in connection with the Civic Service House, is to give a dance October 21 in Court Hall, 200 Huntington avenue, in aid of the movement.

SCHOOLS & COLLEGES

COMER'S COMMERCIAL SCHOOL.

This school, which is one of the oldest, most successful and most popular in this part of the country, opens its fall term on September 6 in its fine quarters at 630 Washington street, corner of Essex.

A distinctive feature of this school is that each pupil is taught individually, and for that reason progresses more rapidly and more thoroughly than is possible in schools that adhere to the class or to the grouping methods.

The courses of study embrace the Commercial or Business Course, fitting for bookkeeping and general business; the Shorthand Course, fitting pupils for stenographic positions; the Combined Course, which includes the two previously named courses and makes the strongest course for a young man or woman to take as a preparation for business life, and the Short Business Course, which fits pupils for clerical positions in the shortest time possible.

This school makes a special feature in its bookkeeping instruction of introducing all the most modern and improved methods of accounting, including Safeguard Bookkeeping, Loose Leaf Bookkeeping, Manufacturing Accounts, Corporation Accounts, Voucher Systems and the use of Controlling Accounts, Analysis Posting, Trading and Profit Statements and Office Systems and Appliances.

In the Shorthand Department the pupil has the choice of either the Pitman, the Graham or the Chandler Systems of Shorthand, and the most modern touch system methods of typewriting. By the system of individual instruction used here in teaching shorthand and modern touch typewriting rapid and allows him to advance according to his own ability and application.

Good positions in business houses are secured for the pupils of this school and during the past year more than twice as many positions have been offered than could be filled by the school.

Day and evening sessions are held and young people should not rest content until they have attended either one or the other of these sessions for a practical preparation for their life's work.

COMMONWEALTH SCHOOL.

The policy of the Commonwealth School of Business and Shorthand is to advance each pupil as rapidly as his or her ability will warrant, and Mr. Shea, the principal, takes a personal pride in thoroughly fitting the students in the shortest possible time.

Every department is thoroughly fitted with the latest modern conveniences for business, and the sanitary arrangements are of the best. The ventilation is as near perfect as can be, and the light is perfectly directed, forming ideal conditions for the proper pursuit of knowledge.

Individual instruction is given in all departments of both day and evening sessions, there being no classes. Discipline is kind, but firm, and no one is allowed to spend their time in idleness. Shorthand and typewriting make up the course.

The shorthand and typewriting studies are carefully graded, the best systems to use, and comprise a course of from three to six months, much depending upon the ability of the pupil and the time spent in study outside of regular school hours.

FRANKLIN UNION.

Established two years ago from a bequest left by Benjamin Franklin, Franklin Union will open its doors for the second time Sept. 26. The building and equipment have been provided with the one aim of instructing men already employed in the industries, and, therefore, classes are held in the evening and on Saturday afternoons. These classes are in charge of experts selected from manufacturing plants and the technical schools.

Last year over 800 men availed themselves of the opportunity of obtaining training which would enable them to become more efficient in their present positions and to advance to positions of added responsibility. Instructors will meet applicants on Monday evening, Sept. 19.

NAUTICAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

The past year has been one of the most prosperous in the history of the Nautical Training School. The number of applicants has been much in excess of the capacity of the school. In this school, which is entirely self-supporting, only ambitious young men of good character are afforded an opportunity to fit themselves for a seafaring life. It puts them well on the road to advancement in the highest grades in the merchant marine. Instruction and subsistence are furnished free by the commonwealth, and cadets are expected to conform in all particulars to the rules and regulations established for the government of the school. Neatness, studiousness and prompt obedience to orders are expected of all.

Many improvements have been made recently to the equipment of the school. Metal lockers of the latest approved design have been installed for the use of the cadets and a new refrigerator has been built in the ship. A larger dynamo, a motor-driven steam windlass, submarine signaling apparatus and a wireless telegraph set have been added to the equipment.

During the stay in Boston, from November 1 to May 1, the Ranger is berthed at the Marine Park, Commercial street, Boston. Persons interested in the work of the school are cordially invited to visit and inspect the ship on any day except Saturday and Sunday, when the cadets are absent on home leave.

STATE STEAM ENGINEERING SCHOOL.

This school was established some fourteen years ago by James Coyne, M. E., for the purpose of assisting the engineers and firemen of the State of Massachusetts to comply with the requirements of the license law and to assist them in a better knowledge of their daily work. The school has been very successful, and the pupils have invariably obtained the license for which they sought. Mr. Coyne's seventy-five years' experience as an actual erecting and running engineer has enabled him to impart to his pupils the knowledge that has assisted them in satisfying the examiner.

I. C. S. METHODS.

By means of the I. C. S. plan men are taught the theory and practice of trades and professions. They are taught things that increase their earnings and put them on a higher pane in life.

In this book-mad age of little or no schooling perhaps men working every day and supporting families—there is no time better than now in use before 1891. The method devised by Thomas J. Foster in the I. C. S. plan of teaching, with improved textbooks for home study under skilled guidance and assistance by mail of special, expert instructors. The great reason for our remarkable success is the use of improved text books that are wonderfully clear and easy to understand.

As soon as a student enrolls with the I. C. S. he receives the first two instruction papers of his course. He also receives a complete outfitted "How to Proceed With Your Studies" and a certificate of membership that gives his class cutters and number, for the need for correspondence which relating to the schools.

A new of the principal courses of the International Correspondence schools are advertising, architecture, commerce, drawing, electrical engineering, English branches, French, locomotive running, mathematics and mechanics, mechanical engineering, sheet-metal work and boilermaking, shop and foundry practice, steam and marine engineering, textiles.

MODERN CORRESPONDENCE.

The object of the Modern Systems Correspondence School is to qualify men in the shortest possible time in manufacturing establishments requiring expert and practical knowledge of the most modern systems for planning, handling and machining work rapidly and economically, for accurately recording these operations and accounting for their detailed costs.

The courses include those for cost accountant, cost clerk, office manager, factory manager, foundry manager, expert foundry clerk, expert time clerk, mechanical draughtsman, factory systems expert, factory producing clerks, etc.

At the present time there are but few men to be found who are qualified for this class of work. Therefore the salaries are high and the opportunities excellent for good positions for recently qualified men.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY.

Within recent years exceptional strides have been made in the direction of musical education with the corresponding increase in institutions making a specialty of music.

The older colleges or conservatories have adopted improved methods and have kept pace with the changes in musical instruction. The modern recitals and musicales has come to a realization that the best results in manufacturing plants are obtained by the individual pupil, and that the most important feature is the ensemble work. It has every facility for giving the musical student, not only a technical but a thoroughly practical training.

Y. M. C. A. SCHOOL.

Private schools will soon open their doors to thousands of pupils from every quarter of the country and preparations for the coming season are now well under way.

One of the most prominent of these is the Boston Young Men's Christian Association, under the direction of Frank Palmer Speare, who has recently introduced an original and unique departure by a system of vocational training in connection with the advice of a trained expert in the work. A day school system interlocking the evening department is a serious and a part time school for boys who are wholly or partially self-supporting. In one of the numerous recent additions to the scope of this school.

The evening school work has been greatly enlarged in the existing departments and not only all the work that it has done heretofore, but also some forty courses of college grade, which count toward the degree of A. B. and B. S. in addition to the Associate's evening law school degree of L. B.

FAELTEN PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.

The Faelten Pianoforte School was founded in Boston by Carl Faelten and his associates, Reinhold Faelten and Marie Ewing Faelten. It has been the policy of the Faelten School to engage and retain only teachers who were in full sympathy with the method employed and who themselves have had the advantage of being thoroughly trained in the characteristic principles of the school. In consequence of this, the director has surrounded himself with a faculty of rare ability, with a spirit of purpose and consequent absence of friction, constituting ideal conditions for the permanent success of the school.

COMER'S BOSTON COMMERCIAL MASS SCHOOL

Do You Know About This School?

The difference between Comer's and other commercial schools is just the difference between individual instruction and class work. AT COMER'S you pay for the careful personal attention of the teachers and get it, and every minute of your time is used to the best advantage. Four carefully planned courses, requiring from 3 to 10 months to finish. COMER'S SHORTHAND COURSE gives beginners or advanced pupils the best instruction in either Graham, Pitman or Chandler system, and makes them expert typewriters. Comer's individual instruction in Book-keeping is most practical, modern and complete. No "dead and gone" methods taught, but right-up-to-the-minute ways of doing things—the ways that are in use to-day in the best business houses. COMER'S SCHOOL RECORD of 38,630 past pupils and 65 years of usefulness and reliability speaks for itself, and is the guarantee of success it offers prospective pupils. Tuition $13.50 per month. The right start in business is half the battle, and COMER'S SCHOOL STARTS ITS PUPILS RIGHT by placing them in positions where there is a future for them, as well as good pay at the outset. If interested in knowing more about this old and reliable school, call or send for latest prospectus. Telephone Oxford 769. COMER'S COMMERCIAL SCHOOL, 630 WASHINGTON ST., corner Essex St., BOSTON.

New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
Boston, Mass.
GEORGE W. CHADWICK, DIRECTOR

School Year Begins September 15, 1910

No school in this country can contribute as much toward a musical education as the New England Conservatory of Music. A steady growth of over fifty years has made it rich in experience, and it is everywhere recognized as the largest and best equipped school in America. Its complete organization, its imposing Conservatory building, and splendid equipment, and the new Residence building offer exceptional facilities for students. Situated in Boston, the acknowledged music centre of America, it affords pupils the environment and atmosphere so necessary to a musical education.

Every department under special masters. The student's capacity sets the only limitation to his progress. The reciprocal relations established with Harvard University afford pupils special advantages for literary study.

Owing to the practical training of students in our Normal Department, graduates are much in demand as teachers and musicians.

The privileges of lectures, concerts and recitals, the opportunities of ensemble practice and appearing before audiences, and the daily associations are invaluable advantages to the music student.

A number of free violin scholarships available for 1910.

CLOSE NEW BEDFORD PLANTS TO CHECK CONTINUED RIOTING

POLICE FINALLY GET REST

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 27. In response to a request [illegible] Mayor Wood today ordered the closing of all the [illegible] the plants on which work was being done. This was done at the request of the police. The members of the department have been [illegible] cessation for several days. The first request was given them this afternoon when a large [illegible] was dismissed to their homes.

Following the closing of the strike of the lace makers and building laborers has been under constant police guard. Two days ago the guard was doubled for each one. Since the work ceased this afternoon, and the strike-breakers [illegible]

Patrick [illegible] Alessandro, the strike leader who [illegible] today, refused [illegible] to try to effect a settlement. Mr. Converse of the H. P. Converse Company of Boston, and Messrs. Howland & Howland & Sons, of Boston, were present. The former contractor says he is now the lowest bidder [illegible] hour for a nine-hour day. It was granted after the conference.

Contractor Balks.

Mr. Converse however balked at the increase demanded for the helpers. Mr. Howland, it was stated, was willing to pay the helpers the $2 for a nine-hour day but was unwilling to give the lace makers the raise they desired. The three could come to no understanding. All attempts at settling the trouble have been futile. Strikers and contractors are as far apart now as on the first day of the strike.

Mayor Gleistenfeld was expressed today at the failure of the strike leaders to pay off the first strike benefits to-day, as planned. President d'Alessandro explained that the money would not arrive until early next week. The strikers are getting low on their resources, and in a few days will be going home, if help is not forthcoming.

Joseph Liebl, general organizer of the Building Laborers Union of Boston came here today to co-operate with d'Alessandro and to take charge while the International president is in Boston over Sunday. Before he left for Boston, President d'Alessandro said this afternoon:

Strikers Offer Compromise.

"I blame the contractors for the failure of the conferences. I made my compromise offering in good faith in order to bring about a settlement of the grievances of the union. In fact, a contractor asked me to bring about the conference. After the meeting the contractors ignored me. I am in control of the situation now. I have the strikers well in hand. I have told them they must control themselves or I will quit. I certainly deplore the rot here yesterday. I can assure the people there will not be a repetition."

William McLean, president of the local bricklayers' union, today denied that he had received censure from his union because of his activity in trying to settle the strike.

While the eighteen strikers arrested yesterday after a bloody clash with the police were being arraigned in the district court here to-day before Judge Milliken, it was necessary to lock the doors of the court room to keep out more than 200 of the friends of the prisoners who clamored for admission.

Chief of Police Mason charged all of the prisoners with having precipitated a riot Thursday, which they pleaded not guilty and their cases were continued until next Tuesday.

Many of the strike-breakers are in fear because of yesterday's outbreak and fifty of them failed to report for work today on the Sharp mills. Until the riot about 100 men had been at work on the Sharp mills. Many of the strikebreakers left town after today.

MAN KILLED IN DUEL.

Bystander Also Shot as Banker and Court Official Clash.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 27.—Boyd Thompson, a court stenographer, is dead today, and W. R. Snyder, teller of the Citizen's National Bank, is dying as the result of a duel. The men between whom there had been bad blood met on the street here unexpectedly and opened fire. Charles Henson, a bystander, was slightly hurt by a bullet fired by Thompson.

Late Prof. James' Friends Awaiting A Spirit Message

[illegible] Society for Psychical Research in England [illegible] Harvard professor [illegible] existence, since his sudden death from heart disease at his summer home on Chocorua Lake, New Hampshire.

The noted Harvard savant, the philosopher who was known as the "Apostle of Spiritism," will undoubtedly communicate to his friends from the World of the Unknown, if such a thing be possible, his friends said yesterday. Indeed, it was well known among his close acquaintances [illegible] prophesied [illegible] [illegible] Myers [illegible] [illegible] event of his passing [illegible] [illegible]

His death, in fact, was a shock to the [illegible] discovery that was waged after the demise of Dr. Richard Hodgson, who died from the same malady, in 1905. [illegible] were close friends, and both were students not only of psychology, but of metaphysics, including the possibility of communicating after the dead.

Professor James was to [illegible] the Society [illegible] magazine, that through Mrs. Leonora Piper, a medium, he might have held communication with the spirit of Dr. Hodgson. Despite the Harvard scholar's years of research he was, however, agnostic in the face of his tendency to believe in spirit after [illegible] In his writing on the Hodgson matter he said:

"I asked whether the will to communicate be Hodgson's or be some spirit's counterfeit of Hodgson. I remain uncertain, and [illegible] new facts; facts which may not point clearly to a conclusion for fifty or a hundred years."

The funeral will be held at Appleton Chapel, in Cambridge, Tuesday at 4 o'clock.

REFUSES DEATH DARE.

Ravenall Yachtsman Cancels Race at Niagara.

RAVENHILL, Aug. 27.—J. G. Hudson, [illegible] of this city, and one of the best known yachtsmen along the Metinnic River, entered in the 43-foot power boat HYC in the Niagara Gorge race that is scheduled for September 17, but now has withdrawn the entry.

Mr. Hudson was told by his friends when he entered that it was practically taking his life in his hands, but he said no.

"The HYC can live anywhere. I know because she was built by me and she is right and fast."

He changed his mind, however, after taking a little trip on the Niagara River and having a look at the course.

FOREST AREAS CHANGED.

New Classifications Materially Affect National Domain.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Proclamations by President Taft, making changes in the national forest areas, in accordance with the classification agreed on by the Interior and Agricultural departments, and affecting forests in Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico, were announced by the forest service today. In the Ronto reserve 100,000 acres were eliminated. In the Sitgraves reservation, Arizona, 68,000 acres were eliminated and 23,000 added.

In the Carson reserve, New Mexico, 110,000 acres were added and in the Pecos River reservation, New Mexico, 178,000 acres were eliminated and 264,000 added. To date over 3,000,000 acres have been eliminated and 1,300,000 added in the various forest reserves.

CANADA CHURCH UNION.

Methodist Coference Votes for a United Church in Dominion.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 27.—The Canadian general Methodist conference meeting here, by an over whelming majority declared in favor of a basis of church union whereby the Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists in the dominion of Canada may unite under one denomination, to be known as the "Union church."

The union has already been agreed upon by the other two churches.

CALL LONGWORTH INGRATE.

Predict Attack on Cannon Will Be Resented at Polls.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 27.—Congressman Nicholas Longworth was given one of the best committee appointment to be had in congress, at the direct request of President Taft, according to a bulletin received here to-day. The bulletin issued by the American Protective League of New York, accuses Longworth of being an ingrate because of his attack on Speaker Cannon, and in it the threat is made that the Speaker's friends may show resentment at the polls.

SCORN MONKEY DINNERS.

Families Now Turning Places into Palaces Rivalling Those of Europe.

It is estimated that the North Shore summer colony represents a total of two [illegible] dollars in wealth.

[illegible] territory. There are many square miles in the district, including Beverly, Pride's Crossing, Beverly Farms, Manchester, Prides Crossing, Beverly Farms, Manchester, West Manchester, Magnolia, Hamilton, Wenham, Ipswich, Topsfield, Swampscott, Phillips Beach, Beach Bluff, Clifton Heights, Marblehead, Marblehead Neck and Devereux.

The North Shore, unlike Newport and Narragansett Pier, is not spectacular and it is only of recent years that it has gained world wide attention as a Summer home for multi millionaires. Most of the enormously rich people who have gone there are averse to display, and [illegible] colony has not been advertised all over the land by scandals [illegible] society leaders played a prominent part.

No Wide Range Scandals.

The soberness of Essex County natives may have affected [illegible] the very character of the countryside is reflected in the people. It is one of the chief of the attractions which drew the possessors of great fortunes to the undulating interior of variegated coast when lordly heat hung heavy over the country.

It is one of the pleasantest regions in New England but there are no startling scenic attractions to exercise a charm over [illegible] Shore and [illegible] getting to be like some of the counties of Old England.

Millionaires are turning their lands into park-like estates. There many houses on the North Shore which would be called castles in Europe. They are much more comfortable than most castles and many estate owners in these places have royal incomes. But they spent their money in good taste.

The whole manner of North shore society is distinguished and reserved. It is a region where class is all pervading but never offensively intrust forward. A Monkey Dinner [illegible] on the North Shore would be impossible and if there were such a thing as a gambling club in existence there it could never be called "fashionable."

Of course when anybody says that if the combined wealth of all the Summer colonists on the North Shore could be computed it would amount to the colossal sum of $2,000,000,000 that statistics is mere conjecture. It is a hazard which can never be verified.

Mystery to Tax Assessor.

No tax assessor will ever learn just how much personal wealth there is. Short estimates possess in the aggregate. There are countless millions in stocks, bonds and other securities that will only come under his observation in the form of declarations. There are more than one thousand colonists on the North Shore who are rated as millionaires. Some of them have many millions, like Henry C. Frick, who is supposed to be worth $100,000,000, and Andrew Carnegie, who also came hitherward from Pittsburg, with a fortune rated as high as $200,000,000. They help out tremendously on the averages.

Many Homes of Beauty.

There are so many beauty houses on the North Shore it would not be feasible to attempt to enumerate them all. But among the many may be mentioned as typical in the best sense are the residence of L. Carteret Fenix at Rowley, of Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter at Beverly Farms, of John Lowell Devens at Manchester, of Dr. John C. Phillips at Wenham Lake, Johnson L. Walker of Topsfield, Eben D. Kelley at Beach Bluff, Aubrey T. Dunbar at Clifton, and that of Seth F. Low at Devereux. Among the many may be mentioned as typical in the best sense are the residence of L. Carteret Fenix at Rowley, of Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter at Beverly Farms, of John Lowell Devens at Manchester, of Dr. John C. Phillips at Wenham Lake, Johnson L. Walker of Topsfield, Eben D. Kelley at Beach Bluff, Aubrey T. Dunbar at Clifton, and that of Seth F. Low at Devereux. Among the many may be mentioned as typical in the best sense are the residence of L. Carteret Fenix at Rowley, of Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter at Beverly Farms, of John Lowell Devens at Manchester, of Dr. John C. Phillips at Wenham Lake, Johnson L. Walker of Topsfield, Eben D. Kelley at Beach Bluff, Aubrey T. Dunbar at Clifton, and that of Seth F. Low at Devereux.

The beauty of the North Shore is due to the fact that it has been left most natural. Boston is only a few miles away and the North Shore has ever known so far as growth of the colony is concerned. But the newcomers have not been drawn there by local sophistication. The old residents would consider such "booming." In fact the people who enjoy is one of the greatest charms of their country homes. After President Taft leaves the village of Burgess Point in Beverly, of course the region obtained more attention from the nation at large than ever before.

AVIATOR KILLED.

Maasdyk Dashed to Death at Amsterdam Flight.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 27.—Aviator Maasdyk was killed this afternoon at Arnheim, when his aeroplane was dashed to earth with him in the course of a cross-country flight. The accident was caused by the stoppage of the motor while Maasdyk was flying at an altitude of several hundred feet.

SOMERSET CLUBMEN, CLASSMATES, DIE ON SAME DAY AT 88

Graduated From Harvard in 1863 and Lived on Same Street Till Death.

No more remarkable coincidence is found outside the realms of fiction. In actual life [illegible] than that [illegible]

[illegible] in Massachusetts; they both died yesterday, at the age of 88½ each. They entered Harvard in the same year and graduated in the same class of [illegible].

Both men lived on Beacon street in Boston until their deaths, within a stone's throw of each other and they belonged to [illegible] Both were close friends till death parted them.

Members of Same Clubs.

Both were leaders in public life in Boston. Dr. Robert Amory was one of the leading physicians of the State, and Mr. Mixter was a prominent state street broker. They were members of many clubs, including the Somerset.

Dr. Amory died at his Summer home on Lilah street, Naushi. He was a direct descendant from the old colonial stock of this State. His Boston residence was at No. [illegible] Beacon street.

He graduated from Harvard in 1863, and three years later from the Medical School. He later studied at Dublin and Paris. The doctor [illegible] practice in Boston in 1868 he was appointed a lecturer at Harvard, and later was professor of physiology at the medical school at Bowdoin. He was the author of many medical books.

He was a member of the American and Massachusetts medical societies the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the County University, Eastern Yacht and Harvard clubs, besides the Somerset. In Brookline he served on the School Committee and as trustee of the Public Library.

One Married Twice; Other Bachelor.

Dr. Amory married twice. He is survived by a widow and five children. The funeral arrangements have not been made.

George Mixter, one of the leading note brokers of the country, died suddenly at his Summer home at Hardwick, Mass., this afternoon. His residence was at No. 219 Beacon street. He was in the best of health a short time before his death, but heart trouble caused his end.

Mr. Mixter was a native of Hardwick, [illegible] college in 1863 he worked in a mill at Barrington Plains. He later came to Boston, where he started in the note brokerage business. He had a national reputation as an expert in financial matters.

His pleasure came from farming. He was also an expert fisherman and hunter. His farm at Hardwick is one of the largest in the State. Mr. Mixter had a herd of 400 Guernsey cattle, his dairy was a model and supplied many Back Bay families with its products. He never married. The funeral will take place at his Summer home Monday, at 1:30 p. m. The remains will be cremated.

DEAD NUMBER SEVEN.

This Is the Latest Report on the Grand Trunk Wreck.

DURAND, Mich., Aug. 27.—That at least seven persons lost their lives in the Grand Trunk wreck near Durand, was established when H. I. Jeffers of Washington, D. C., identified the supposed body of Mrs. Catherine Squires as that of his wife. Coroner Schutchel believes that two or three others were killed beside those bodies now recovered. It is said that the bones contained in a sack which were tossed into a corner in the morgue and overlooked, are of varying sizes, indicating that they are not all those of one victim.

SPAIN WON'T RECEDE.

Premier Canalejas Will Not Yield to Vatican's Demands.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Aug. 27.—Spain and the Vatican are now in a deadlock, according to a statement to-day by Premier Canalejas. He reiterated that the bill increasing the establishment of further religious orders in Spain would not be withdrawn and could not be without violating the Spanish constitution. Premier Canalejas added that the matter was in the hands of the Spanish Senate, a majority of which approved of the bill introduced by the government. He reaffirmed that the introduction of this bill was intended neither as a provocation nor an offence to the Vatican.

AEROPLANES ASSEMBLE FOR THE GREAT HARVARD CONTESTS AT ATLANTIC

The white dotted line shows the ascending course in which the aeroplane travels to and fro, while the black line shows the direction followed in returning.

THE Harvard aviation meet, barring poor weather conditions, will eclipse any exhibition and demonstration of flying machines ever held in America. Not only will the contests for the $4,000 prizes be held on a field considered by every aviator to [illegible] as the best yet to be used in this country, but the largest number of aviators and the largest and most diversified collection of aeroplanes ever gathered together on one field will be on exhibition.

The meet starts next Saturday. By that time there will be at least twelve aviators and fourteen machines ready to [illegible] the fight against the air. The executive committee in charge of the affair has signed contracts with Walter Brookes, holder of the world's height record; Ralph Johnstone, who rose 1,000 feet in ten minutes; Glenn H. Curtiss, who flew from Albany to New York; Charles F. Willard, who has carried three passengers [illegible] and who has earned the title of Wizard of the Air; A. V. Roe, inventor and only driver of a triplane; Grahame-White, who lost to Paulhan in the great race from London to Manchester; Clifford B. Harmon, the millionaire amateur, who flew over Long Island Sound to meet his wife at dinner [illegible] Farnham; M. de Durler and [illegible] de Mason, drivers of the Voisinne one of the most successful drivers in [illegible] Horace F. Kearney, who will fly [illegible] the interest of which, Lieutenant Hilmer, took his life when he found he would never be able to fly a machine, and Greeley S. Curtis and John G. Stratton, New England aviators.

Passenger Kites.

Besides these men there are several aviators with whom the executive committee have no contracts, but who have given every evidence of their intention of competing. Among these men are such well-known ones as J. M. Allen, Dr. W. H. Christmas and Philip Wilcox, who, it now appears, will be the only man on the field with an Antoinette machine.

And these men will not be by any means the sole attractions. Samuel F. Perkins, a graduate of the Technical Arts High School and of Technology, will send up his kites. He has flown thirty times kites from the same man line, and will try to better his record. The record in lifting a man from the earth by such a string of kites was made at Gibbons, Penny Island, when a man was carried 1,000 feet into the air. This record will also be broken, if possible.

Mr. Perkins yesterday afternoon put up a string of seven big twelve-foot kites, which were flying in tandem formation, all being connected with the main line, a half-inch rope. The lifting bag was attached to the fifth kite. It is estimated that even with the air [illegible] there was a pulling power of about 600 pounds. Tomorrow [illegible] will be moved to the field and tests with sand bags be made and then the kites will be ready to carry passengers. It is believed that Mr. Perkins will allow a number of people to make the trip. They can go [illegible] as they like, according to Mr. Perkins, for he believes that he can send the kites over a thousand feet into the air.

Cromwell Dixon, the boy with the dirigible balloon, will also make daily flights. He will this week aid in the advertising [illegible] of the big meet in [illegible] flights over Boston. On Tuesday he is to sail from the field to Boston Common and return in the errand of delivering [illegible] invitations to the meet to Governor Draper and Mayor Fitzgerald.

The work on the aviation field is progressing at a rapid rate, and there is no reason to believe that it will not be complete in every feature by next Saturday. The fact that the meet was to be held at Atlantic gave the impression to a few that it would not be an easy matter to reach the grounds, and that the ordinary business man must leave the city early in the day if he was to see the professionals' flight during the afternoon.

But under the excellent arrangements which have been made it will be almost as easy to reach the field as it is to reach the ball grounds. The train service from the South Station will [illegible] the strain sure will add many cars and some effort may be made to give a motor boat service. At any rate it only takes fifteen minutes to reach Atlantic and then one can walk to the field in an equal time. But if he does not care to walk he can use the trolleys which will run out to five minutes.

The big roads leading to the field will of course be used by hundreds of automobilists, but they will be in the best of condition, and all will be well oiled several days before the big show starts.

Whole Course Visible.

At the field on the south side is a 1,000-foot grand stand, directly facing the long stretch down which the aviators sweep in their flights. Directly in front of the grand stand will be the judges' stand, and behind this [illegible] for many of Boston's best known society folk who are summering at nearby points will visit the meet each day.

Among those who have reserved automobile spaces are John F. Thayer, General William A. Bancroft, C. B. Rice, J. Leonard D. Ahl, John F. Spaulding, J. L. Richards, Robert Winsor, P. D. Converse, General C. H. Taylor, John Barry Ryan, Walter Hunnewell, H. K. Abbott, J. H. Thomas, Charles A. Loring, Dr. W. Blake, Charles Lawson, J. H. Lovell, S. L. Andrea, L. H. Treadway, Charles S. Bird, F. P. Reid, Jr., George S. Babcock, C. A. Whitney, Malcolm G. H. Hooper Lawrence, H. H. Stanley, A. Shuman, A. Sweetser, A. Rossland, Jasper Whiting, Commander Perkins, Dr. Roberts, C. H. Lane, Jr., Robert G. Shaw, S. [illegible] Lawrence.

Among those who have secured boxes for the season are Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald, Mrs. John L. Gardner and Eben Jordan.

Harvard 1 in Food.

To-day the many visitors to the field will see the big tent where many of the machines will be kept, the sun. A tent where the Pittsburg monoplane to be driven by Horace F. Kearney is all set up, and beneath the Harvard 1, which has never left the ground, but in which Ma[illegible] Harvard students have a deep love and respect. The Harvard 1 has a low tuft of bright tan, but as yet has no motor.

To-morrow Cromwell Dixon will begin work in the assembling of his dirigible

SOCIETY WOMEN AT PIER FLEE PROCESS SERVER

Secretly Leave Narragansett to Avoid Being Summoned to Tell About Gambling Raid at Club; Others Must Testify

Three Clubmen, Ordered to Be Planning Flight, Are Subpoenaed; Cross, Leader in Crusade, to Continue Fight

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 27.—Several of the society [illegible] who were prominent [illegible] season have skipped away from this resort, fearing that they would be subpoenaed in connection with the gambling raid made by Constable John J. Cross at the swell Narragansett club.

Constable Cross learned the fact to-day when he went in search of some of the women who were known to have been at the club on the night of the sensational raid three weeks ago.

But Constable Cross is not afraid that he will not have witnesses sufficient to establish his case now that there was gambling at the club. He has the names of other women here who he has reason to believe could throw a great deal of light on the [illegible] diversions of the [illegible] frequented [illegible]

To Make Sure of Others.

"Somehow are to be served quietly on those women who do not know that they await the constable's visitation.

"At least two or three women I was trying to get jumped out quick and have disappeared," said the constable to-day to a Sunday American reporter. "I am going to make sure of the others I am after and the rest will [illegible]

Aside to Philip S. P. Randolph, Richard M. Hoblen and Robert E. Strawbridge, I served the papers on them at the Point Judith Country Club, because I feared they were going to skip out. I wanted to hold them here to testify in court, and was not running any risk of losing my man."

Interest to-day was divided between the subpoena serving of Constable Cross and the decision that is to be given to-morrow by Judge Nathan B. Lewis in the Second District Court at Wakefield, on the demurrer to the complaint that was made against "Doc" William E. Arnold, vice-president of the raided club, who is charged with maintaining a gambling place.

Plans Further Action.

Arnold's lawyers are hopeful that the demurrer filed by them will be sustained and the case against Arnold dismissed. But Constable Cross is not in the least worried about this. Should the decision be against Arnold, Judge Lewis will set a date for the trial of the case.

Should the case against Arnold be dismissed it is the intention of Constable Cross to take further action that will bring the witnesses he has summoned into court. Cross is determined that all of his activities shall not go for naught and he has confided to his friends that he had several cards up his sleeve that he has not played yet that are calculated to disconcert the former followers of the Narragansett Club's diversions.

BIG OPPORTUNITIES FOR REALTY BUYERS

Suburban Land Rapidly Advancing in Prices; Great Chances for Investors.

Buy land near the city. Buy it now. The opportunities that now present itself will not come again. Several million have within a year been bought up in there is very little land left within the city limits. But there is vacant land that would be serviceable for the average buyer. He must go no further out from the city.

When and how shall we know that it is now the time to buy land? There is no mistake in buying anything at a time almost among a dozen others for in buying land for it is bought for investment.

Land is the only thing that is not rapidly as other assets, but it is a safe investment to own land and sell it. It is still better to own land and sell it, because land will appreciate in value. To own a piece of land with two or three thousand of modern conveniences adds to the value of the land.

Land Investment Safest.

But another buy land. You get several in any one will have given a quick return and then colonize after a while.

Land is always worth something and in nine cases out of ten it will sell for more than is paid for it. This has been demonstrated over and over again in the cases of this city.

If you can't buy now. But when the development of the city is going on. Do not wait for the land to develop as the price will then be higher. Buy land as soon as the land is developed.

What to Buy, Now.

Some people think that what is wanted is a piece of land where a few years ago there were only a few houses. But they are for development. They want to wait until for some house is covered with houses where the price considerably advanced.

FRUIT FARMS NEAR BOSTON IN DEMAND

Fruit farms within a short distance of Boston are being called for at many of the real estate offices.

Not a few people think they can make money out of the idea of buying a piece of land, with a small dwelling near this city, where they can live and go in and out to their business daily, and then spend their leisure time in fruit culture.

If we have not, we have heard inquiries for fruit farms within a few days, suggestion said to E. Rufus of Henry W. Savage & Co. "There are a number attempting to establish themselves in the business, some instead of starting in small pieces, are looking for farms of 10 acres or more. Until a few years ago the Boston people were content to go far from the city and have country homes, but now building is extending out to the suburbs. Women are taking up fruit culture.

If we could have a farm of from 5 to 10 acres, with a small house on it, we could sell it. The old idea of the fruit farm has passed away. Now it is a question of how many acres it will support a family. It is generally made a basis of 5 acres to a family. Then a small farm of 5 acres will be very active.

SALE BY H. W. BERRY ESTABLISHED 1870 PIANOS & ORGANS 646 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON

Biggest Sacrifice Piano Sale Ever Held in Boston

WE ARE FORCED OUT

OF OUR PRESENT LOCATION AT 646 WASHINGTON STREET

And Must Sacrifice Our Entire Stock in a Few Days

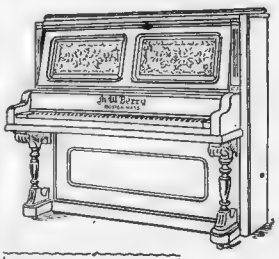
Over Pray's Carpet Store Opposite Boylston St.

(W. J. MERRILL, Manager)



Owing to alterations in our present location, we are obliged to vacate in a few days, and to save the enormous expense of moving our large stock of pianos, we have decided to sacrifice every instrument in our warerooms, and will make the price so low that the economical person desiring a piano cannot afford to overlook this unusual opportunity.

REMEMBER — Almost all of the pianos are new and all are the most reputable makes. The lower priced pianos have the reputation on the piano market of being the best for the price made in this country.

Some of the highest grade pianos on which we quote unusually low prices have been slightly used, but cannot be distinguished from the new and unused instruments.

To you who have been disappointed in the alleged bargains offered in many of the alleged Bargain sales—we have this to say—In our 40 years of business life we have never held a piano sale that was not strictly honest and above board—Any piano offered for sale in this announcement will be sold to you at the price quoted, and we will not endeavor to sell you anything of an inferior make. All our pianos are just what we say they are.

TERMS:
$10 Down
$5 Monthly Payments

We wish to call your especial attention to the H. W. Berry Piano. 40 of these excellent instruments will be sold at sacrifice prices.. $150 to $250

You Are NOT Too Old to Succeed

By Herbert Kaufman

—Copyright, 1910, by Herbert Kaufman

It's up to you to get your due. Success does not print a calendar nor publish a road-map. The pathfinder must forget how long he has been upon his way and only remember how very much time he still has in which to make his way.

Your age has no bearing upon your wage, nor what you can wage. There is no limit to the Game of Life except the limit of your life.

Franklin was 71 when he began his diplomatic career. Corot painted his greatest pictures at 79. Titian produced his immortal Pieta at 98. Spencer did not complete his master work until 84. JeMorgan was 65 years old before he wrote his first novel, and Morgan was almost 70 when he began his Brobdingnagian career of finance.

Vitality may lessen with age, but experience increases in compensating proportion. Youth squanders its splendid store of vigor, while Wisdom invests its force without waste. The wise conquer as often as the strong.

The supply of to-morrows will never be exhausted until Eternity has rounded out its course. Each daybreak dawns upon a changed universe. Something hopeful always happens overnight. Opportunity places new goods in stock each day.

Yesterday is your enemy.

Forget what you were. Consider what you are; and determine what you mean to be.

The past is a Lorelei—a voice which lures you to misery and weakness. It calls you to the Land of the Dead. You can only build unhappiness with the wreckage of regret.

Of course you have made mistakes. You're a man, not a god. Omnipotence is not a human characteristic. We have all failed, and no matter to what heights we mount, we fail and fail again.

All life is a try-out. You can keep on starting over and each time stand the same show.

If dishonor has not set its brand upon you, you are still unmarked and can yet make your mark. But until you demonstrate you're somebody, we won't notice you. We will not register you in advance.

That's why there is always sufficient room for arrivals.

Believe in yourself. Come back—don't go back. If you are capable, you are needed everywhere. We have added so many professions and trades and arts to our century that there is a crying want for earnest and sincere thinkers and doers.

If you know anything that will be helpful—if you possess a method which will quicken our advancement, emerge and let us see you.

If you can teach a philosophy that will lighten our cares—if you have a code that will make us better—if you can shorten a labor or simplify a process—if you can add to our prosperity, our happiness, or our sanity—LIFT UP YOUR HEAD AND PROCLAIM YOURSELF.

ROXBURY STORAGE
SALESROOMS
2418 Washington Street
DUDLEY STREET TERMINAL

WE have moved our business to its new home, 2418 Washington Street, at the Dudley Street Terminal. Here we occupy an entire block. We have proved to the business men of Boston that it is possible to stay in business even though a big Trust is fighting to put you out. We honestly believe that it was our fight with the Piano Trust that attracted the people to our business methods. We would enter into no agreement with the "Combine" to keep up the high prices on Pianos, and said so in our announcements in this paper. The people believed in us and supported us and we sold Pianos at prices that meant a loss for us in many cases, but we won out. COME THIS WEEK FOR BIG BARGAINS!

NOTICE
No matter what make of piano you are thinking of buying, get the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' price on the same instrument first.

AN OPEN LETTER

Boston, Mass., Aug. 27, 1910.

To the Parents of School Children:

With a strong desire to do everything in our power to assist you in giving your child a practical education in connection, with its public school education, we will, for the next 10 days, make special payments down and terms to parents of school children so as to enable them to give their children this addition, now practically conceded to be indispensable to an education. During this offer you have any piano in stock to choose from.

We would be very glad to have you call and talk it over, and we will explain how easily and at what small cost you can become the owner of an elegant piano.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES S. NORRIS,
181 Tremont St., Boston.

An Appeal to the Common Sense and Reason of the People Who Order Liquor by Mail

Use your brains in buying your liquors. Don't buy blended low proof whiskeys that are reduced in strength and lessened in value. If you want water in your whiskey, buy a good whiskey and put it in yourself, and don't pay your good money for blended, watered whiskeys.

REMEMBER—

THE TREMONT WINE COMPANY sells you only the best. No blended or adulterated whiskeys are sold under our label—straight goods only. All our goods are fully WARRANTED and can be returned (at our expense) and the money will be cheerfully refunded if not in every way as represented and perfectly satisfactory to the purchaser. To insure prompt shipment, please send all orders by mail.

BOSTON SEEKING POULTRY MEETING

Business Men Want the American Association Convention Next Year.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce is backing the efforts of the Massachusetts poultrymen in their endeavor to get the next convention of the American Association in Boston in 1911. The Chamber of Commerce, through Bernard J. Rothwell, its president, has sent a telegram to the convention now being held at St. Louis urging it to vote to come to Boston next year.

All the splendid fair exhibits were of a much higher standard than in the past. The Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes seemed to have the call.

An effort is being made to get up a big parade for the Boston Common on Friday morning next, at 10 o'clock. Besides prizes, to be devoted to the Columbian Waynadotes it is expected that at least $500 will be raised to be divided between the two shows.

Homing Club Schedule.

The schedule for the New Bedford Homing Club for next year is as follows: Nov. 12, 26; Dec. 10, 24; Jan. 7, 21; Feb. 4, 18; March 4, 18; April 1, 15, 29; May 13, 27; June 10, 24; July 8, 22; Aug. 5, 19; Sept. 2, 16, 30; Oct. 14, 28; Nov. 11, 25; Dec. 9, 23; Jan. 6, 20; Feb. 3, 17; March 3, 17; April 7, 21; May 5, 19; June 2, 16, 30; July 14, 28; Aug. 11, 25; Sept. 8, 22; Oct. 6, 20; Nov. 3, 17; Dec. 1, 15, 29.

At the annual meeting of breeds and breeders of Langshans it requires only five months to make a bird. Why not? Three days is long enough for live infected hen houses in burning sulphur. The house must be tightly closed, with ventilators and flues. Put a pound of sulphur on a stove five cents in the house for each 100 cubic feet. Let stand for an hour or more.

Belgian hares are being used extensively by breeders as an egg producing food. It is claimed that one pair will produce enough young to be raised to a business rabbit of 10 pounds in four months of age.

Lenox Dog Show.

Probably one of the dog exhibits that will attract a large coterie of society people will be the Lenox show, to be held the 5th and 6th of September.

The judges will be Dr. Hair, pointers, setters and beagles; James W. Spratt, airedales; Joseph Stewart, St. Bernards and mastiffs, and Dr. Lewis, Scotch terriers, Skye terriers, West Highlands, Wallie and Sealyhams.

The Pomeranian dog show will be a big one, as there are 50 entries.

Mrs. [illegible] of this city, who at this time will have a puppy for sale, has sent many farmers who can't afford to spend much money time to a show. The entries close September 5.

At the annual show of the American Thuringer Club held at Arlington recently there was a variety of birds shown on exhibition, in spite of the short notice, but not nearly as many as last season.

Every breeder in the country is taking steps to have a large exhibit at the Boston show next winter. Show [illegible] are expected to send over a number of birds.

POWER BOATING NEWS NOTES

THE Wessagusett Yacht Club of North Weymouth, the youngest organization on the South Shore, opened the past week one of the prettiest club houses to be found anywhere along the coast. It is a wooden structure, the cost being upwards of $3,000 and has all the accommodations that a yacht club ought to have.

The club is one of the liveliest organizations along the Quincy Bay and it now that it has a general upgrading place a race program is being talked of for the first part of September. Dr. R. O. Clark is the commodore of the club. At the dedication of this new clubhouse guests were present from kindred organizations at Quincy, Dorchester, South Boston and vicinity.

The Wollaston Club entertained a large number of yachtsmen Saturday at their open house. A chowder was served and in the evening a dance was held in the clubhouse. This affair was attended by many of the residents of Quincy and Wollaston. It was practically open house on the part of the Wollaston Club, the members of which extended a welcome to all comers.

Homing Club Schedule.

The schedule for the New Bedford Homing Club for next year is as follows: Nov. 12, 26; Dec. 10, 24; Jan. 7, 21; Feb. 4, 18; March 4, 18; April 1, 15, 29; May 13, 27; June 10, 24; July 8, 22; Aug. 5, 19; Sept. 2, 16, 30; Oct. 14, 28; Nov. 11, 25; Dec. 9, 23; Jan. 6, 20; Feb. 3, 17; March 3, 17; April 7, 21; May 5, 19; June 2, 16, 30; July 14, 28; Aug. 11, 25; Sept. 8, 22; Oct. 6, 20; Nov. 3, 17; Dec. 1, 15, 29.

A. P. Homer & Co. Boating for an extended cruise in their power boat Remon. The Remon has been in commission but a few days, but has attracted considerable attention from the boating and yachting people. She is equipped with a Sterling engine and is lighted with the latest electric lights. She is fitted out with her husband and many of the pleasant events that will be pulled off this season.

Work is being pushed on the new dem onstration boat of the Lozier Motor Company at the Lozier plant, Cleveland. This boat, when completed, will be sent South, and from there will travel over the inland waterways of the Southern coast. The boat is noted in its class as a fast one, and the Lozier engineers claim will stand a severe test.

The schooner yacht Vanity, Capt. Chase, is through the ice way of Joan Alden by Desmond Lloyd of Boston. Mr. Lloyd has had the boat built, the boat has sailed it all season in the races and cruises. Bridge will do good work. The new owner has entered the boat in the Brockton Fair races.

C. C. Haney, the Quincy boat builder, is having the yacht Ina completely overhauled at Commodore Tie is being fitted out with a new engine, the power will be increased to 40 horse power. Mr. Haney will have the boat in the channel a all-comer of 600 feet, making a channel 100 yards wide.

The motor enthusiasts are [illegible] and planning for a series of races on Labor Day on the Mystic lakes. Secretary Ed. Andrews of the club has the matter in charge and some of the fastest boats racing will be seen. Hatch's [illegible] will be there.

TWO MORE YEARS OF SCHOOLING TO BE COMPULSORY

Too Many Pupils Are Leaving School When 14-Year Limit Is Reached.

AGITATORS campaigning for a change in the compulsory education law will be launched within the next few months, and it is the hope of the supporters of the new movement that the coming session will be the last in which public school children will be allowed to leave school and go to work before they are sixteen years of age.

The present law forces all children to attend school until they are fourteen years of age. But the school authorities are today facing figures which show that every year a smaller percentage of school children are entering the high schools, being content with the compulsory school education and are laboring in the support of their families.

The public schools of Boston open to-day with [illegible] more pupils than on the first day of last year, but [illegible] of more than [illegible] per cent. [illegible] the elementary grades. Turf Flyers Here for Big Readville Meet

FAST HORSES TO RACE FOR $53,000 STAKES THIS WEEK

Billings' Mighty Trotter Is Expected to Shatter All Trotting Records.

BLUE RIBBON TURF MEET

The Harvester Also Goes Against Time; Notable Starters in the Derby and Other Stakes.

FEATURES OF BIG READVILLE MEET

TUESDAY - Uhlan 1.58¾, tries for a new world trotting record. Star trotters and pacers appear in $15,000 American Derby.

Wednesday -- The Harvester, 2.02, tries for a new world's trotting record. Cascade, 2., Native Belle and other remarkable youngsters meet in American Horse Breeders' Futurity.

Thursday—Hallworthy, Bertie Archdale and other sensational trotters of the year in $10,000 Massachusetts stake.

Friday—The Abbe and others of the season's pacers appear in the Norfolk stake. Uhlan may try again for a record.

THE beautiful two-minute track at Readville, out beneath the Blue Hills of Milton, entertains the Grand Circuit horses this week in what is surely destined to prove the blue ribbon race meeting of the year.

The programme offered for the annual gathering of the famous trotters and pacers is the best arranged by any racing association in the land, and history should repeat by nine at Readville will the racing of Tuesday's sort.

The track is in splendid condition, and Charles M. Jewett, the former popular secretary of the Lexington course, has given the street fair of turf an final preparation for the opening of the card.

Mr. Jewett, the master of Readville's new course, has worked hard and long to make the coming meeting the greatest in the history of Readville and he has visited all the leading race meetings of the year to personally engage the services of the sport that will be all seen the finest in the history of the two minute track.

The Great Uhlan to Race.

Uhlan, 1.58¾, the world's champion trotter without a wind shield, will start on Tuesday to lower his record. The famous pacer will be driven arrived at Readville after a record-shattering flight from Grand and is in splendid condition. He will be carefully prepared for his record flight over the five minute course and seems to have a full trotting record at his mercy.

The American Derby and $15,000 in auguries Tuesday, the opening day with the best open class of trotters that Readville has ever known. Upon the trotting side the gold ingots Allen Winner, Isaac Prince Alcyone, Iowa, Olga W. Baader, The Princess, Dixie Harrington, Joe Terry, Jr., D. Hickey Harry Romeo, Oxford Boy, Jr. Prince, Henry W. Oliver, Nonpareil Jerry, Ralph Brook, Jessie Constantine, Baron Bell, Laurice, Alice Roosevelt, Bernadine and Lelia Stone. No popular favorite has as yet been chosen and the Derby is going to depend upon its trotting side a very open race.

The general sentiment of racing men is that this year's Derby will afford a handsome purse to the horse owner. In the past it has been a contest with a lucky rabbit to win a few thousand dollars, but with the purse of twenty-two horses insures a handsome purse of splendid proportions.

The pacing division of the Derby has Anne Wise, Dan Del Chief Wilkes, Lockhorn Boy, Bill Vara Boy, Dillon Queen, Little Boy, Bonnie Boy, Lord King, Hele, Lulu Hurst, Louise Rashford, Oswald Maid, King Cole, Peter Stanton, Lopaar and Hallie Direct. The pacing Derby ranks with its opponent in that it is one to which the result is an open speculation, and in which no one has as yet forecasted a probable winner.

The 2.08 pace (Lodge all finished) will promise to be an exceptional race with the field quite matched, in which appeared famous Dewdrop, Lady Stately, Jack M. Kerton, Baron Nay and Soprano. The appearance of Soprano, 2.08¾, the winner of the American Horse Breeders' Futurity last year, will be warmly welcomed, but Lamar, the "Indian pony" will be the popular favorite for the event.

In the 2.10 pace, which closes the program upon the opening day, the Cox entry, Miner Lady Isle of Ass Wilkes, will be the popular choice.

The American Horse Breeders' Futurity, for $10,000, will be staged on Wednesday, the second day and a thrilling race is confidently looked for. The entries, better and classified, of the great event of the Readville season are Native Belle (2.07¾, the sweet daughter of Mike Direct mile and Silka Nora) are Louise Wilson Boy, Uhlan, Ina Tongway (2.08¾, Nan Bergen, Ruth Hal, Lady Green Goods, Bird L., Jr., Black Direct, Chesty Direct, Lady Lou, Dana, Kid Rebini, Concord Dewey, Kroh, Mc-Allie Sam Wakefield, Vivian, High Private and Uhlan. Chesty Direct and Our Another do not start by reason of sickness.

Colorado E. is the popular favorite for the pacing futurity by reason of his wonderful performance over the Grand Rapids track in June. It will be remembered that the world's record for consecutive heats in a race was equaled by stepping 2.07¼, 2.07¼, 2.07¼.

For the pacing futurity of the above named stake, Twinkling Dan, the boy son of the champion Dan Patch (1.55), seems to completely lay over his field and should be returned a winner. Among the other entries are Direction Regent, Dan Patch, Jeanette, Lucinda, Lefferds, Mary Thomas, Maud Miller, Nell Gentry, Oakland Boy, Dan Overhouse, Dandy Boy and Bine, Toddestill and a bay filly by Star Pointer.

The Harvester, 2.02, will also start on Wednesday, and if conditions are right weather and track permitting, is certain to take a new record mark. As Wilkes looks the best of the 2.06 pacers, and Myrtle Grenadier, Bonnie Hale and Bertie should have a battle royal in the 2.12 class.

The fifteenth renewal of the $10,000 Massachusetts stake for 2.14 trotters on Thursday has a great field for ailing Dolly Archdale, Willy Belle Horse, Cranford Rowers, Miss Hallworthy, Baron Peak, Miss Vincent, Capt. Lodge and Sir Hallworthy, 2.08¼, is the popular favorite.

Friday, the closing day, will bring together the 2.14 pacers in the Norfolk stake. Uhlan, 1.58¾, in the top picture made at Readville yesterday, is the world's champion trotter. He tries to lower that mark Tuesday. The Harvester, below, will try to lower his own world's trotting race record of 2.02, Wednesday. Geers is up behind The Harvester.

NOTED HORSEMEN COME TO READVILLE

"Doc" Tanner Jogs Uhlan; Pennock Arrives With English Horses.

It was busy at the Readville track, the noted campaigning horses of the Grand Circuit arriving and the final plans for the blue ribbon meeting of the fall harness turf completed.

Uhlan, 1.58¾, the world's champion trotter, arrived early for a meeting under the care of "Doc" Tanner, driver and driver of the great son of Bingen and Blonde, looked every inch the money in the turf as he paraded down the stretch. The glossy black coat revealed the perfect health and he responded with the famous mane and tail for speed in his every step about the track, the champion from Billings gave evidence of what he had in reserve, and filled the fans with the satisfying tribute of the rattlesnake as he rattled and whirred.

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 27.—New Bedford won two games from Brockton today and undoubtedly cinched the championship flag for the home city. The first game, which was called in the fifth on account of rain, was won by New Bedford, 2 to 1. Brockton's pitcher, Pape, was easy in the first game, where the locals made eleven hits including a home run by Cunningham and a three-bagger by Wilson. In the second game, Brockton got to Lee for ten hits and he steadily work in the first inning escaped two runs, getting in himself on a fine single to right field. Truitt and McGregor pitched a good third game for New Bedford, the former doing the most of the work, pitching the first seven innings. The score was 1 to 0. Attendance, 1,000.

Expert Describes the Game of 1910—Minor Elevens Will Be Better and Major Elevens Not So Formidable—Some of the Revisions Will Not Have the Results Intended—Players Must Study Hard.

By Harry L. Dadmun.

Official intercollegiate football referee

FOOTBALLS are rapping fast and will soon be right in season. Since the new rules appeared ten days ago, coaches, players, officials and many thousand football fans throughout the country have been studying them carefully to find out exactly what the rules committee have taken out of the good old gridiron game.

The coming season is going to be the most unique in the history of American college football. The changes are even more radical than when the forward pass was first introduced some five years ago. It is like wiping off the slate and starting all even again. While the important changes are few they involve such a nature as to keep everybody guessing.

THE VANDERBILT CUP AND GRAND PRIZE RACES NEXT ON LIST

Excellent List of Entries for These Events on Long Island Motor Parkway.

By J. C. KERRISON.

The glory of the Vanderbilt is to be revived. The blue ribbon event of the American automobile racing world is not to be permitted to die a death like unto that of the famous Gordon Bennett. The combat contest on the first of October will, like the original other Vanderbilts, be enacted on Long Island, adding to the contest of "daring-do" that all prerequisites which has in the past been so alluring and exciting to the thousands who journey there from the four points of the compass.

The course over which the race is to be held, known as the Long Island Parkway is recognized as one of the best and speediest racing surfaces in the world, and while many of the famous foreign drivers may be absent from the entry list, there is a strong likelihood of exceptionally good times and speeding records. The course is not only a wide [illegible] but likewise in the [illegible] roads [illegible] to be ridden that day.

The [illegible] interest [illegible] are many [illegible] known and recognized a little [illegible] down and recognized a little.

The work of preparing the course for the contests will begin in earnest tomorrow, under the supervision of the men who have prepared the circuits for previous Vanderbilt contests. Every detail of road construction that will insure safety to contestants and to the public is to be carefully carried out, and the course will be "smoothed" until it is in perfect form.

Complete [illegible] the Vanderbilt [illegible] the [illegible] Motor Car Company, [illegible] president of the Automobile Club of America, and [illegible] Herbert H. P. Morgan & Company, Edwin Gould, James Speyer, Murray Guggenheim, Harry Payne Whitney, Herbert Parsons, P. Pratt, Richmond Talbot, W. C. Dickerman and Howard Sheriff.

It is interesting to note that the reservations already received for the grand stand, never in the history of the Vanderbilt cup race has so many reservations been made at this early date and practically each mail brings requests for boxes and seats.

The Motor Cups Holding Company has arranged with the Long Island Motor Parkway to allow contestants and officials to be served on the course during the official stand. None of these cups will be for distant points on the Parkway line.

The official stand enclosure this year will have its own catering facilities and conveniences, water supply, etc.

CADILLAC FORECASTS UNUSUALLY BIG YEAR

The most impressive and important item in a statement made known a few days ago by the Cadillac Motor Car Company, [illegible] That item, meaning that 1,500 people were awaiting the receipt of Cadillac cars [illegible] various parts of the country, reflects a condition that is truly extraordinary. It shows a demand for Cadillac cars even greater than at the same time in 1909, a month after the announcement of the first Cadillac Thirty. At that time the call for the new Cadillac had attained proportions unprecedented in the history of the motor car industry. Two years later the call is here for practically the same record-breaking [illegible] reward.

Cadillac dealers all over the country have been supplied with their demonstrating cars, and the shipping [illegible] of cars, which are going directly into the possession of buyers.

BOTH GASOLENE AND ELECTRIC TRUCKS ARE ELIGIBLE

Trucks to Comply as Strictly as Possible to Conditions Experienced in Actual Work to Prove Economy and Efficiency.

With a desire to advance the motor truck industry and to prove to the commercial world at large that commercial motor vehicles are of real practical value, the Boston American has, with the sanction of the American Automobile Association and the approval of Leonoval of the Bay State Automobile Association, decided to run a commercial motor vehicle reliability contest from Boston to Newport and return on October 14 and 15. This run will give a wide demonstration of the adaptability of a motor vehicle delivery system, as compared to one drawn at will prove that motor vehicles can not only run extended distances with speed, certainty and small cost of operation.

The management of the run has been placed in the hands of a special contest board of the Bay State Automobile Association, comprising some of the best known and experienced men in this section, all of whom have had wide experience in the organization and the carrying out of motor contests. This committee will decide all mooted questions that will arise, handling entry blanks, of the run the Boston American simply making the necessary arrangements.

The head of the committee is President Louis B. Stearns of the Massachusetts Automobile Association, one of the pioneer motorists of the country and a man who has for years been interested in all that pertains to business. Henry W. Knowles, district representative for the Bay State Automobile Association, and a man who for years has been identified with all matters pertaining to motoring in this section, will also be a member of the committee. Joseph A. Lathrop, one of the pioneers of the Bay State Automobile Association, who has been identified with all matters pertaining to motoring in this section, will also be a member of the committee. Edward L. Hildreth, secretary of the Massachusetts Automobile Association, will be secretary of the contest board of the American. Other members will be announced later.

The route selected for the contest is one that will appeal strongly to manufacturers and agents as well as to the private owning and using of motor vehicles, as it can trace a direct route without a single mountain grade of any consequence on this regular business. The contest is to be open and under the auspices of the contest board of the American, no entrance fee being charged.

Ask Yourself This Question

"Would An Automobile that I Could Buy for $485.00 and Operate for Less than One Cent a Mile, be a Good Investment for Me?"

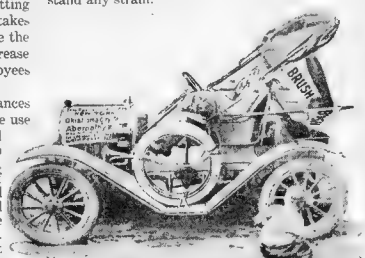
The way to arrive at a sensible conclusion as to whether or not you should buy an automobile is to talk it over with yourself. You know all about your own business. You know how you make your money. If you have much getting around to do you know how much time it takes and what it costs you to do it. So you are the best judge of whether or not you could increase your efficiency or that of some of your employees by the use of an automobile.

If time is worth anything to you, the chances are you would save a great deal of it by the use of any automobile. But its first cost would have to be so low and the up-keep of it so small that the result would show a net profit.

The BRUSH RUNABOUT, because of its first low cost, because of the very small amount of money necessary to operate and maintain it, is the logical car for you to use as a basis for making your investigation. If the BRUSH will not do the things that you want an automobile to do and show a profit, then no motor car built will. If you have much getting about to do, a BRUSH will do it for you cheaper than carfare. If you are now using a horse or horses, a BRUSH will enable you to cover twice the ground, and your gasoline and oil bills will be much less than you are now paying for feed and blacksmith's bills. This may sound to you like a strong statement. The proof is found in the testimony of thousands of BRUSH owners who are proving it to their satisfaction every day. It is a simple matter for you to prove it for yourself.

Think for a moment about the 2,500-mile trip of the Abernathy kids! After riding from Oklahoma City to New York on horseback to pay their respects to Colonel Roosevelt, these youngsters decided to make the return journey by automobile. Louie, the older of the two (and he is only nine years old), chose a Brush Runabout to make the long drive, because it is the only car which is so simple mechanically and so easy to handle that a boy of his age could run it as well as a professional driver operates a large machine. Louie Abernathy drove the BRUSH all the way himself. They "honked" up the main street of Oklahoma City just twenty-three days after they left New York. They stopped a day each in four of the larger cities to see the sights. So they were on the road nineteen days, averaging almost 140 miles a day.

Louie Abernathy demonstrated in a way that admits of no argument that the BRUSH features which we have been telling you about in our advertising are REAL features. He demonstrated that the BRUSH is simple to operate and easy to handle. He demonstrated its easy-riding qualities, both the boys arriving home feeling better than when they left New York. He demonstrated that a nine-year-old boy could crank it, and that the motor starts without fuss and trouble. He demonstrated that the BRUSH driver is practically free from mechanical worries. He demonstrated that the BRUSH can travel any road, can climb any hill, has the strength to stand any strain.



These are the things which should go a long way toward helping you solve the automobile question for yourself. The Abernathy boys attracted the attention of the whole country. Thousands greeted them and cheered them along the roads. The sight of seeing this youngster actually starting, driving and stopping his car was such proof of BRUSH simplicity that even the most skeptical could doubt no longer.

For every effect there must be a cause. We can make claims for the BRUSH that no other automobile manufacturer can make for his product—because no other automobile is like the BRUSH either in its mechanical or important construction features. The motor in the BRUSH is simplicity itself. You can learn all about it in five minutes. The BRUSH has a spiral-spring suspension, the like of which is found on no other motor car built. You can drive a BRUSH over rough, rutty roads at a speed impossible for any other automobile. It is so light you can lift one wheel and prop it up to make a tire repair without the aid of a jack. Weight, more than anything else, is responsible for tire trouble. The easiest car on tires is the lightest car. The lightest car, by wide margin, is the BRUSH.

We could go on enumerating BRUSH features which make the car loom up so big purely as an investment. The best we can do, however, in any piece of advertising, is to arouse your curiosity to the point of making a personal investigation of the BRUSH. The way to find out all about the BRUSH RUNABOUT, the way to prove to yourself that the things we say about it are true, the way to know just what it will do for you—is to examine it, ride in it, drive it. It will not take you long to go to the dealer nearest you who handles the BRUSH. He is more than willing to give you an actual BRUSH demonstration. And remember, the car that you can buy for $485 is an exact duplicate of the BRUSH car which the Abernathy boys drove almost 140 miles a day for nineteen days.

We have been taking advantage of the Abernathy trip to call your attention to the utility side of the BRUSH. This trip demonstrated, however, in just as big a way, the pleasure side of this wonderful car. No car offers more as a pleasure vehicle than the BRUSH, except size and carrying capacity. No car in the world offers as much, considered both from the standpoint of utility and pleasure, as the BRUSH.

Ask yourself the same question which you did at the beginning of this advertisement, and remember that there is a BRUSH dealer near you who will be glad to show you how to prove what the BRUSH will do for you. If you are busy, he will be glad to come to you if you will write or telephone him.

ROMANTIC DRAMA IS NOT DEAD, SAYS WRIGHT LORIMER, ROMANCER OF THE HOUR

Noted Actor Declares That Though Modernism Has Wrecked Ideals, There Will Be a Reaction in the Future.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

ROMANCE and poetry are not dead. They only appear to be in the [illegible] of the man moved into some dark alley. [illegible] from Wright Lorimer, the romancer of the hour, that the [illegible] of the future will be stuffed to the edges with glorious romance, and reams of poetry will dangle from every corner. The actor of the future will likewise be stuffed—with romance, of course.

It was I and not Mr. Lorimer to admit that romance is not common in these days of theatrical carnage, and he struggled hard to bring to mind some actor of the present time properly equipped to carry its banner to success. He couldn't even guess at [illegible]

[illegible] or Hackett would have a ghost of a show against the modern trend of the public in dramatic affairs. It is almost worked out it is true, that modern interest would be in romantic ideals. It is the rush for riches that counts now. Modern business—the methods and its men—and the passion for friendship doesn't amount to anything in business, as you are repeatedly told by men of affairs. "We know no friends in business," they tell you, and then prove it in every business action.

Is it any wonder that romance is floundering with these conditions prevailing in every-day life? Modernism has spoiled us for the real beauties of life—a man is now ashamed to admit that romance or poetry make any appeal to him.

SEES RETURN OF ROMANCE

Mr. Lorimer brushed his blond locks from his eyes to remark that the stage is one of the saddest victims of this unromantic thought. "But I must say," he declared, "I am quite optimistic in regard to the future of romance and poetry," he exclaimed with very decided emphasis, "and I shall go right along working for the return of the romantic drama. Life and happiness are more to me than an unrighteous display of money, and I do not believe real happiness can exist without romance and poetry.

"But better times are coming. The stage cannot thrive permanently without romance and poetry, although it may seem to be doing so. [illegible] realism and sordidness is happiness that before long there will be a return to [illegible] dry stuff found in many of our modern plays. Then we will get back to the [illegible] of the romantic drama."

The [illegible] and actor have their share in the making of the [illegible] manager will be known until [illegible] feeling is sincere. It will be a rough day for the fashion-plate actor, who knows [illegible] of romance [illegible]

It has been my exceedingly confessed Mr. Lorimer, "to see the decline of romance in our land and the world at large, and I feel a responsibility [illegible] for actors, who know how to read classic lines. You just cannot find the actors at all. Modernism has turned our actors into fashion models. The man with the best fitting salesroom is the best actor to-day."

WOULD MAKE THINGS OVER.

But Mr. Lorimer is going to make things all over. His new school for dramatic art in Rockaway, N. J., will produce the remedy for our artistic ills so far as they apply to the stage. Mr. Lorimer promises to become the insurgent of the drama. His scheme is completely serious, for he would not have purchased acres of land and built an immense open-air theatre. He will deal only in the classics and take thirty students. The limited number of students will keep his production of finished actors at a sufficiently low figure to prevent the market's becoming glutted. At the same time the [illegible] actors who are turned out need not worry for a few years.

The [illegible] that Mr. Lorimer injects into his project demands respect. And he backs his conviction with money, for he has already invested several thousands of dollars in the construction of a plant. By a curious twist of nature the spot selected for the open theatre is on the side of a hill that forms a perfect amphitheatre.

For, as Mr. Lorimer to continue: "I was led to enter upon this idea of building a school for acting because the present schools are about as efficient in their instruction as shoe factories would be. Players that have come to the front in my opinion have been at [illegible] in spite of the fact that they learned. The trouble with most schools is that they take everyone who applies for admission, regardless of the applicant's ability or talent.

WILL SELECT THE STUDENTS.

They may take students [illegible] but the [illegible] there is inborn talent, makes him an actor. In my school I shall select my students. As a matter of fact, I will be compelled to make distinctions, because I have already received more applications for instruction than I can possibly accommodate. And the school will not be opened for another year.

Whether my plan fails or succeeds I shall at least have the satisfaction of knowing that I have made an effort to give the stage players who are able to read lines correctly."

Mr. Lorimer, who pages romance with every breath, is something of a sentimentalist as well, if you can believe the story that is told of an old stage coach that a visitor at his Summer home discovered in the barn, freshly painted but evidently never used. An hour's conversation with the actor revealed when Mr. Lorimer was fourteen years old he lived in Dana, Mass., where his father had such rough sledding in life that his death left young Lorimer with a working capital of 25 cents. It cost a dollar to travel from Dana to Worcester, and young Lorimer's pluck in a career made it necessary for him to travel on foot to Worcester. As he walked along the country road he was overtaken by the stage coach and was left choking in the cloud of dust it raised. As Lorimer viewed the disappearing coach it dawned to him that as soon as he made enough money he would buy that coach and set it up in his own yard. He made good and now has the coach

MIGHT MEAN REJOICING.

The face of the great bulk of the one-night stand territory by the Syndicate should give the theatregoers in the large cities of the country much cause for rejoicing, for it will bring right up to their front yards the best that has been produced under Syndicate direction. The open door may have stripped the Syndicate of many of its theatres, but the old organization still has in the neighborhood of twenty active producers, whose output this season will fill with the 150 spots. While it is to be hoped, of course, that Boston will receive all of the exhibitions at some time before the close of the season, we may be sure of a generous allotment of the Six Little dramatic delicacies. Among the attractions that will leave New York are The Fortune Hunter, already announced for the Tremont Theatre, but temporarily withdrawn until the Gaiety Theatre in New York can be supplied with a play, "Seven Days," which will come to the Park. The title carols to the contrary, "The Arcadians," booked for the Colonial, beginning September 12; Sarah Bernhardt in a repertoire of previous plays, William Collier in a repertoire of his six plays, "Madame Sherry," "Arsene Lupin," Montgomery and Stone in "Oldtown," Francis Starr in "The Easiest Way," "The Lily," "Girlies," "The Spendthrift" and "Follies of 1910."

The first of last season's Syndicate successes to visit us will be "The Climax," which plays its first Boston performance at the Park Theatre to-morrow. This play ran an entire season in New York.

The most prolific producer in the Syndicate family this season is Charles Frohman, who will be responsible for thirty-seven plays. The producing activities of Henry B. Harris will put twenty-seven plays on the stage, and Klaw & Erlanger will come third in the list with twelve productions. Of the remaining Syndicate producers, David Belasco, Frederic Thompson and Cohan & Harris will each send out ten plays.

New plays will be seen at two theatres to-morrow evening, and one old play will reopen another house for the season, leaving two theatres dark for another week. The present season appears to have come to us on the installment plan. With "The Climax" at the Park and "My Man" at the Colonial plays that have never been seen in Boston before, will take chances with August weather and absent theatregoers, while "The Girl from Rector's" will do her best to coax life into the box office at the Boston Theatre. Upon the basis of past performances, she will probably succeed.

The new season at the Castle Square Theatre will open to-morrow, when John Craig and his players will give "The Squaw Man."

SOME STARS OF THE WEEK AT THEATRES OF BOSTON

Bills at the Theatres

Keith's Theatre.

[illegible] announcements have been made [illegible] of Keith's [illegible] [illegible] Joseph Hart's big company of "Hashing Girls," in one of the most novel musical and dancing productions seen [illegible]

Another feature will be the Four Readings, in their wonderful acrobatic exhibitions. Charles Sweet, the "narrow fellow," who has always been a favorite in Boston, Richards and Montrose, in their singing and dancing sketch, Al Haynes and Julia Redmond in a new comedy sketch called [illegible] and Frank Wilson, a comedian, [illegible] a monologue.

Castle Square Theatre

With the beginning of its third consecutive year at the Castle Square, the [illegible] Stock company will open on Monday [illegible] "The Squaw Man," one of the best and most widely known of American plays, dealing with life in the far West. Its hero is the heir to an English estate and title who comes to this country, and the plot has to do with his adventures among the rangers and his romance with an Indian wife [illegible] [illegible] for his coming season at the Castle Square Theatre, Manager [illegible] announces that the company will [illegible] country. All the old favorites will reappear, and there will be several new members who will be certain to find favor with Boston playgoers.

"The Squaw Man," Mr. Craig will himself play the [illegible] [illegible] Indian girl, and about what Mary Young can do [illegible] original and unusual characters, Miss Marie Curtis, who joins the company, will give [illegible] Richard Stark will appear as if the western, will [illegible] Hamilton Bush, one of the [illegible] Walter Wallace, Wilton Taylor and Mabel Taliaferro in other leading parts. The stage direction will be in charge of William Parke.

SMART SET YIELDS TO SUNRISE LURE OF SPARKLING DEW

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

SUNRISE is the signal for society—or the ultra advanced element of it—to be up and out to make the most of the vanishing dews, a la Kneipp, during these waning August days.

According to Mary Lehr and his fas lowers, [illegible] include a host of smart dames and debutantes—the revival of the barefoot [illegible] brings manifold blessings in its train.

That success—even in social leadership—is a matter of vitality, vigorously applied, the daughter "Harry" and his fair followers are agreed, a vibrant vitality is the reward they claim from Great Mother Nature for the matutinal worship at her dewy shrine.

A pretty Boston disciple of the Return to Nature creed—one of the barefoot brigade who trips the light fantastic over the dewy greensward at Newport as faithfully as each day dawns—declares that physical buoyancy mental brilliancy and even spiritual unfoldment are among the miracles that follow along the sparkling ways of dew-drenched feet.

Dew wading paves with a brisk stroll through dewy grass, followed by a dainty though meagre breakfast served on a vine-covered piazza, are counted to be the most enjoyable functions of the smart set.

MISS THAYER A DEW DISCIPLE.

Among the younger enthusiasts are Miss Sally Thayer, who is with her parents, the Nathaniel Thayers, at their Newport villa; Miss Rosamond Dixey, whose fine estate, "Tanglewood," Lenox, makes the best possible setting for these barefoot "stunts"; Miss Margaret Thomas, who is with her parents, the Washington B. Thomases, at their Pride s Crossing villa; the Misses Evelyn and Nora Thayer, Miss Helen Frick, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, and Miss Helen Hooper, a debutante of the coming Winter. Our prospective Autumn brides who are rushed at this season of the year, days preparing their trousseaux, attending the various entertainments being given for them and looking after the many details of their wedding plans are said to be among those who take this means of keeping up their strength and vitality. At any rate, wedding plans are rushing gayly along and weddings are again heading the list of events fashionable.

September days year seems to be the month chosen by the majority and is fast becoming October as a bridal month.

Among the notable September brides is pretty Leslie Knowles, whose marriage to Arthur Blake is to take place September 7th. The engagement was announced early in the Spring by the bride's only sister, Mrs. Charles W. Harding of Newport, at a delightful tea given at her suburban home. Miss Knowles is exceedingly winsome and will make a lovely bride. The wedding is to take place at the home of her sister in the late afternoon, but is to be confined to the members of the two families and the more intimate friends. Miss Knowles's brothers are John and Henry Appleton Knowles.

Mr. Blake is one of the five sons of Dr. John G. Blake of Beacon street. Three days after Mr. Blake's wedding a brother, Dr. Gerald Blake, is to wed Miss Edna Malone at Marlett, Pa. Another brother, Fulton Blake, will be his best man. Owing to the fact that the bride's family is in mourning, the latter wedding, too, will be a very quiet affair. The ceremony is to take place at "Riverside," the home of Mrs. James Duffy, Miss Malone's sister, with whom she lives.

COUPLE TO RESIDE IN BROOKLINE.

At the conclusion of their short honeymoon trip, Dr. Blake and his bride will make their home at No. 1236 Beacon street, Brookline.

And still [illegible] is also the date selected by Miss Ethel Ranney for her wedding to Malcolm Lang of Brimmer street. The ceremony will take place at high noon in King's Chapel, where the bridegroom succeeded his late father Benjamin Lang, as organist.

Miss Ranney is the daughter of Fletcher Ranney of Bay State road. The ceremony will be directly followed by a breakfast and reception at the Ranney home. Miss Ranney, who is a rarely beautiful girl with pure blonde coloring and a most charming personality, is predicted by many to be the prettiest bride of the Autumn.

Her last appearance in a bridal cortege was at the marriage of her friend, Pauline Webster, and Stephen Whitney in Emmanuel Church last Spring, when she attracted quite as much admiring attention as did the bride. Mr. Lang and his bride will reside on Bay State road.

Still another September wedding will be that the 20th, of Miss Leonore Cobb and Robert Amory Ayer, which will take place very quietly at the Church of the Messiah, in New York. It was first planned to have it a large affair at the Summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ives Cobb, in Brewster, N. Y., but owing to [illegible] the ceremony is to be confined to the members of the two families and a few intimates.

For the bride will have no attendants. Her brother, Cleveland Cobb, Harvard '06, will be best man. The other brothers, Candler and Elliott, who graduated from Harvard last June, will be ushers, with George Minot, Amory Leland and Arthur Hutchinson. Following the ceremony there will be a small reception at the home of Mrs. Appleton, which is on Riverside.

Pretty Madeline Appleton bears the distinction of leading the Autumn pageant of brides, for her wedding to Vincent Kidder is scheduled for September 6. It will take place at the pretty little Episcopal Church in Ipswich, in which town the Appletons of New York and Boston have their Summer home. The bride who is tall and slender with large blue eyes and light brown hair, is one of the beauties of her set. She was a debutante of last Winter and is the first of that coterie of girls to don bridal attire. Her two sisters, Miss Julia and Miss Sybil, will be among her attendants. Mr. Kidder, whose family formerly resided in Cambridge, but who now live in the West, is an instructor at Harvard.

MISS MINNA JONES SOON TO WED.

Miss Minna Twombley Jones is also on the list of September brides, and her marriage to Mr Martin is to take place on the 7th in Cambridge, where teh prospective bride and her sister have lived since giving up their Beacon street house after the death of their mother.

Another September wedding of interest will be that of Paymaster Littlefield, U. S. N., and Mrs. Kirk Armour of Kansas City, who is at present occupying a cottage at Magnolia. Paymaster Littlefield, who is one of the best known clubmen in the navy, has tendered his resignation.

He is a member in Boston of the Algonquin Eastern Yacht and Country clubs, and in New York of the Union League, the New York Yacht and the Army and Navy. In Washington he is identified with the Metropolitan and the Chevy Chase. When in Boston last Winter he made his home at the Algonquin.

Miss Edith Deacon's wedding to George Lee Peabody will also be a September event and by far the most brilliant of the season. Miss Deacon is at present with her grandmother, Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin, at her beautiful Newport estate and is busy with preparations, which were stopped for a while on account of the severe illness of Mr. Peabody's health. The wedding reception will be at the home of Mrs. Baldwin in Newport.

It is said, too, that the wedding of Miss Katherine S. Atterbury, daughter of John Turner Atterbury of New York, and John Appleton Tuckerman, son of Mrs. Charles S. Appleton of Bay State road, is also to be a September event. The Atterburys are spending the Summer at "Druimorar," their fine estate at Dark Harbor, and it was from there the engagement was announced several weeks ago. Miss Atterbury will make an attractive bride, as she is extremely youthful and very pretty. She is a sister of Mrs. Elphalet Nott Potter of New York.

Mr. Tuckerman is a prominent Boston clubman, being identified with the Myopia Hunt and Tennis and Racquet Clubs. He is a Harvard man, class of '05.

HORSE SHOWS LEAD EVENTS OF SOCIETY

[illegible] the all important events for smart society. The Bar Harbor show the past week and the Magnolia one the week previous, proved the interest the majority of Folkonside still take in horses, even though the automobile and air ship are apparently superseding them in popularity.

The Cohasset Horse Show, which takes place on Friday and Saturday afternoons, September 9 and 10, will be participated in by North Shore as well as South Shore fashionables, and judging from present indications it will be one of the biggest shows of the season. The show is to be held on the race track of Henry M. Whitney's farm at North Cohasset, and is to be given for the benefit of the Bonnie Babes, a summer hospital for sick babies of Boston and Cohasset, which was established by the Rev. Howard Ker Barton of St. Stephen's Episcopal church.

Among the well known men on the committee for the show are Clem [illegible] Boardman [illegible] Mr. Blagden, who is a prominent Boston [illegible] is one of the sons of Mr and Mrs. Joseph S. Bigelow, and Mr. Crocker is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Crocker, also of the Cohasset summer colony. Mr. Mason represents the Hingham Summer colony and Mr. Williams the Scituate.

There are numerous entries from Boston and Brookline stables, as well as from both the North and South shores. Miss Sears will undoubtedly be an exhibitor this year as in former years and the lawn [illegible] will also be in the ring. Twenty-two classes are to be shown the two afternoons and there will be the usual ribbons. In addition to the [illegible] horse, the winner will be given a cup. The cups have been donated by the committee as a whole by Mr. Bigelow, Mr. Chappell, Mr. Mandell, Mr. Mason and Mr. Williams, members of the committee, and by Edward B. Bayley, whose daughter, Miss Harriet Bayley, is of the New Ilding Club set and who will also be an exhibitor; Robert F. Bolles, the Hon George G. Crocker, his son, Courtenay Crocker, and Mr. Whitney, who has given the use of his grounds.

A novelty of this year's show will be the ladies' class which is for ladies [illegible] that have never taken a prize in any show. In addition to the regular classes for such horses. Besides there are to be two pony classes, one for a carriage horse to be driven by a lady, single for family use to be driven among "fourful objects," runabouts, high steppers, gentleman's roadsters, tandems, combination saddle and harness runners.

Further plans this week Friday with [illegible] S. Burns, New Riding Club, Hemenway street, Boston, or the Horse Show Committee, box 208, Cohasset. Numerous entries have been received and those in charge are hoping for a larger list than before. There are an unusually large number of horses in Cohasset this year, as all the cottages are occupied and Samuel S. Spaulding of Buffalo, who last season was at Rockbottom Springs, has brought out his full string, many of which will be exhibited. The race track is being put in perfect condition, and everyone is hoping for suitable weather, which was not the case last year. During the afternoons a band will play popular music on the lawn.

An interesting feature of the Bar Harbor Horse Show held the past week was the notable list of society folk who presented cups. Among them were: Mrs. John T. Pratt, Miss Edith Bowdoin, Mrs. D. C. Blair, Mrs. W. W. Selley, General Edward Morrell, Mrs. J. L. Ketteridge, Mrs. John I. Kane, Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. Thomas H. Hubbard, Charles Fey, H. C. Fahnestock, Miss Mary D. Sewall, Walter G. Ladd, Walter G. Rust, Mrs. Phillip Livingston, R. Hall McCormick, Mrs. John R. Henderson, Edward McLean, John Hone, Mrs. Henry Lee Like, Mrs. J. J. Emery, Mrs. Louise Dickson Bowen, Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. Forbes Reid, Dr. Robert Abbe, S. W. Feldman, Mrs. Edgar Scott, Frank B. Keech and Mrs. Peter Gerry and others.

The Newport Horse Show will naturally be the show par excellent and fashion [illegible] full of flower will be a feature. Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, September 3, 5 and 6, are the dates set and the fashionables have already secured their boxes. Among those are the Orlando Thayers, the Frederick Princes, Miss Martin Coleman, the F. Lothrop Amoses, Miss Mary Ames, the Prescott Lawrences, Reginald Vanderbilts, Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. H. Kuhlen Robbins and [illegible]

One of the features of the show will be Alfred Vanderbilt's first appearance this spring. Mrs. Vanderbilt's handsome coach of the Louis XIV period in imitation of the famous coach equipages in which the King drove through the streets of Versailles and Versailles, the two splendid palaces of Paris at that time. Hitherto Mr. Vanderbilt has been unable to find a suitable coach for the showing off of his English ponies. Unfortunately the Myopia horse show on Labor Day, September 5 conflicts with the Newport show, but it will nevertheless be well patronized. The Myopia show is the strongest attraction of the year for North Shore fashionables.

[illegible] Second girls and the Misses Rosamond and Leslie Bradley, Miss Margaret Thomas, Miss Katherine Jewed, Miss Mary Curtis and the Misses Carol and Olivia Thorndike.

Another notable Autumn wedding will be that of Miss Janet Russell and Harold Mason, which will, no doubt, be among the largest of October events. Miss Russell is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Russell of Sparks street, Cambridge. Her mother was Miss Jennie [illegible] sister. Miss Sarah Russell, married Robert Hude Nelson of New York, Harvard '96, a relative of J Pierpont Morgan. The wife of J B Russell, Jr. Harvard '97, the only son who also lives in Cambridge, was Jacqueline Kelley, daughter of Commander and Mrs. J B Jerrell Kelley of New York Mr Russell is a grandson of the Somerset, 1 thot and Constantinople.

Miss Russell is one of our recent debutantes and is a leader in the University set. Mr Mason is one of the sons of the late Mr. and Mrs Mortimer B Mason of Commonwealth avenue. His brothers are Dr N Phillips Mason, whose home is at Bryn Mawr; Austin B Mason, Herbert M Mason, who married Miss Furbush of Portland and Charles F. Mason who married Edith Andrew. Mr. Mason is of the Tennis and Racquet set and graduated from Harvard in '07.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M Thomas (Elizabeth Bissl, who recently returned from Europe, are now occupying their new home at Milton.

The Misses Fanny and Hannah Osgood, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Osgood and nieces of Governor Draper, have joined the Pradle Summer colony at the White Mountains. Both girls are accomplished golfers and are spending most of their time at that favored sport. Miss Fanny is at present the Boston women's and Eastern women's champion.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Livingston of New York (Agnes Meads) are at Magnolia for the rest of August. They have with them their daughter, Mrs. Prescott Bowes of Brookline and her family.

Mrs. John C. Gray is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Tudor, at her new country home Six Tree House Harpoot, N H.

The Isaac Thomases have been entertaining at their Buzzard's Bay home Mr. and Mrs. Percival Lombard of Beverly Cove. Mrs. Lombard, who was Isabel Fabyan, is a sister of Mrs. Thomas.

Mr. and Mrs Arthur E. Davis of Greystone farm, Dover, have sailed for Europe for a brief stay.

The Charles S. Birds have decided to [illegible] the Autumn [illegible] ridge [illegible] where they will participate in the Berkshire Hunt Races.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, have returned to Beverly Farms from a brief motor stay in New Hampshire.

Mr and Mrs. John S. Gittings of Baltimore and their daughter, Gladys, are at Manchester, the guest of Mrs. Gettings' brother, Henry May, who is a member of the Board of Governors of the Maryland club of Baltimore.

Mrs. William P. Fay of the "Hundreds," Wellesley Hills, with her brother Hollis Abbott, and their house guests, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel A. B. Abbott of Italy, who are spending the Summer here, have gone for a lengthy automobile tour with West Point as their destination. Dr. and Mrs. Abbott will return to their home, "Villa Lontano," on the Via Cassia in Rome, the latter part of September.

Judge and Mrs. William Caleb Loring, who have been spending the Summer in British Columbia and sightseeing territory, will arrive at their Pride's Crossing house about September 1. During their absence abroad their cottage has been occupied by the Frank Frasiers of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs Frederick H. Prince, who are at Newport and have been among the foremost entertainers of the season, are planning to close their villa there the first of September and return to Boston for a short stay before sailing for Europe. Ralph S. Bartlett of Beacon street, has sailed for a short stay in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, are planning to return to their Brookline estate near the Country Club early in September, and are now at their Beverly Farms estate. The Shaws have been for the greater part of the Summer in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater and her family are enjoying life in Germany, where there is quite a reunion. Mrs. Slater's second daughter, who is an accomplished musician, has been studying abroad for the past two years, while Miss Esther Slater and Morris Slater, with the aunt, Mrs. Paul Hunt, sailed from New York in June and Mrs. Slater joined them shortly after. Miss Esther Slater is one of the wealthiest and most beautiful of our future debutantes.

SMART SET SEEKS AUTUMN AMUSEMENT

SOCIETY, with the one hundred and one places looking, now is having a hand time deciding just what to do. It's time, or nearly time, for the closing of seaside villas and shelter to open country houses, return [illegible] early autumn or to spend the intervening season between now and the Winter, abroad, are the questions uppermost.

George A. Gardner and his son, John L. Gardner, who have been for the Summer at their Misquam Beach bungalow, have gone for the late season to Exmoor Farm on the Maine coast. The Gardners were at their Autumn villa in apple season the week-end their relative, Amherst P. Loring, Jr., who is making an extended cruise along the Maine coast on his yacht "Spitfire," [illegible] his great T. Jefferson Seybold and Stanton Burnham.

Mr and Mrs. James B. Higginson have decided to linger at their Wareham estate, "Bloodsey," until early October when they will open their country place, "Hilltop," Peterborough, N. H. Mrs. Charles Jackson, their daughter, who is one of the most popular young matrons in the [illegible] little colony at Dover, is now at West Chop.

Mrs. Robert D. Evans has returned to her Beverly estate, Dawson Hall, from a visit at the Red Lion Inn, Stockbridge. She will occupy the Edward Morse villa in Stockbridge for the Autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Lasell of Whitinsville have taken an apartment at the Pigwauth in Boston for the coming season. Next year they occupied the Charles E. Mason house on Exeter street, and it was there that their daughter, Miss Marion Powell, was to be married. But [illegible] Miss Hindegarde Lessel has just arrived from a several months tour of Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Lathrop of Whitney road, Cambridge, have started for the Pacific Coast, where they will remain for some time. For the first months of their stay they will be at San Francisco and will go from there to Seattle.

North Shore society is preparing a lavish welcome for Sir John and Lady Harington, who are about arriving from their home in England for a few weeks visit with Lady Harington's mother, Mrs. James McMillan, at Eaglehead, Manchester.

Mr and Mrs. Ralph Emerson Forbes are spending their season most delightfully at their picturesque cottage on Newbon Island, off Woods Hole, where they are entertaining some jolly house parties and doing considerable cruising on their schooner yacht "Medin," which flies the New York Yacht Club colors.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cummings Barr, who were married the first of June at Bluefield, W. Va., are making a round of visits among their friends at Magnolia and other North Shore resorts.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge and their children, who have been at their Beverly estate since May, have gone to Ashland, N. H., for the late season. Mr. and Mrs. A. Lawrence Rotch and their children are also at Weirhead Harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Wheeler, Jr., have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Beals at their summer place, Mulberry cottage, Barnstable. Mrs. Wheeler before her marriage was Molly Adams, one of our foremost golf champions and also an active member of the Vincent Club.

Miss Ethel Ranney, who is shortly to wed Malcolm Lang, has been the guest of her fiance's family at their farm near New Boston, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bigelow, Jr., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Francis King Carey of Baltimore at their Summer home at Nahant.

NOTABLE WEDDINGS SCHEDULED FOR OCTOBER

MISS FALL RIVER 1910

Miss Sally Pierce's Wedding.

Another [illegible] of note interest will be that on the 12th of Miss Sally Pierce, one of the [illegible] to Dr. Donald Dixon of Brookline, to Dr. Huntington, late of the Harvard Medical School. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at St. Paul's Church, Brookline, where the bride's sister, Barbara, was married some few years ago to Thomas Barbour. The sisters, Miss Mary and Miss Doorley, the latter the fiancee of Frederick Emery of Cambridge, Harvard '02, will be among her attendants.

Another wedding scheduled for the Autumn, though not necessarily for October is that of Miss Margaret Bradlee Bancroft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Benny of Chestnut hills, and Robert Hallowell Gardiner Jr., Harvard '05. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H Gardiner of Beacon street. The Gardiners are now at their handsome estate on Mount Desert, Seal Harbor, Me., where Miss Denny is among their house guests. Miss Denney, who is a talented young person, is among the younger members of the Vincent Club and won a prize on her debutante of last Winter. Mr. Gardiner is one of the best known of our younger clubmen, and it was an agreeable surprise to his intimates when the fine Boston girl for his bride instead of going to New York, as so many of our other clubmen have been doing. Mr. Gardiner's sisters are Mrs. Livingston Davis of Milton and Miss Anna Gardiner, who was a debutante two seasons ago.

Thayer-Warren.

The wedding of Miss Katherine Warren, daughter of Mrs. Samuel D. Warren and John Elliot Thayer, Jr., whose engagement was announced a couple of weeks ago is also. It is rumored, to be numbered among the Autumn weddings. Miss Warren was presented two years ago at the same time as was her sister, the [illegible] Miss Helen Bancroft, daughter of Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, with whom she later went abroad. Mrs. Sears taking them over to her villa in Paris. Miss Warren, who is of the blonde type, tall, slender and graceful, is of the Vincent Club set of younger girls, and is one of the social doings of the year. Her older sister is Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley of Harrisburg, Pa. Last Winter the Bradleys occupied a house on Fairfield street. Mrs. Warren's name is among the invitations issued to the dance to be given by the younger members of the Chilton Club. She is a daughter of the late Senator Bayard of Delaware. The eldest son, S. D. Warren, married Miss Helen Thomas last Summer at Pride's Crossing and they later went abroad for their honeymoon. The two younger sons are Bayard and Herbert Warren and Miss Sylvia is the youngest daughter.

John Elliot Thayer, Jr., is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Thayer (Evelyn Forbes) of Commonwealth avenue, and Lancaster. The two other daughters, Miss Evelyn and Miss Nora, were presented last Winter and any number of smart hospitalities were given for them. Miss Evelyn is the new president of the Vincent Club Nathaniel and Bayard Thayer are uncles of the prospective groom and Countess Moltke, Mrs. William Sullivan and Mrs. Bailey Thayer, Mrs. Mason Clark, who were the Andrew girls, Mrs. How [illegible] Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer are his cousins. The New York connection includes the Hampden Robbs, Goodhue Livingstons, the Van Rensselaers and the Bayards. Miss Evelyn and Miss Nora Thayer are among the younger members of the Chilton Club. Mr. Thayer was one of the best men at the Brooks spread given by Chase Day and also had charge of the Hasty Pudding Club dance earlier in the season.

Another important wedding of the Autumn will be that of Miss Ellen R. Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Rogers, who have an attractive country place at Hyde-Park-on-the-Hudson, and George H. Earle, 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Earle of Philadelphia, who are spending the Summer at their Adirondack camp on Upper St. Regis Lake. Miss Rogers's brother William Beverly Rogers, married Miss Grace Chapin several years ago.

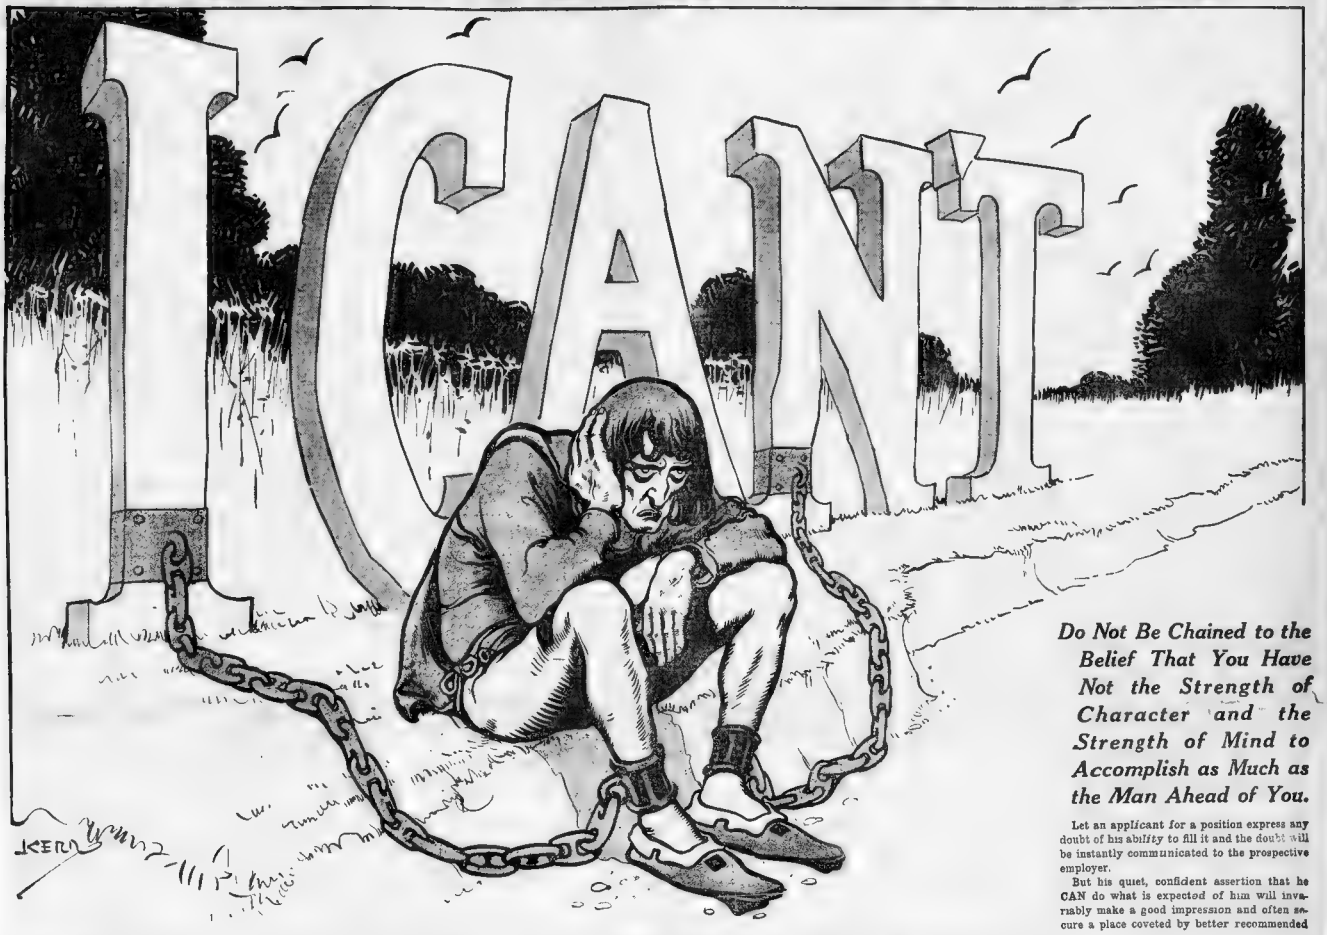
HAVE CONFIDENCE IN YOURSELF



Do Not Be Chained to the Belief That You Have Not the Strength of Character and the Strength of Mind to Accomplish as Much as the Man Ahead of You.

Let an applicant for a position express any doubt of his ability to fill it and the doubt will be instantly communicated to the prospective employer.

But his quiet, confident assertion that he CAN do what is expected of him will invariably make a good impression and often secure a place coveted by better recommended men.

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner

STUDY this cartoon. It is a portrait of a very large class of people, and a clear explanation of why they do not succeed.

You may not be chained to the "I Can't" idea, but if you are not you are exceptional. Most people are; and that is the reason that most people are just about what their luck and their environment make them, succeeding if they happen to catch a favoring tide, failing if they are left to depend upon their own resources.

While the man who says and thinks "I can't" is wondering why he doesn't amount to anything the man who says and thinks "I can" is going steadily ahead, and not worrying much about his future prospects.

The German word koenig, from which our word king is derived, signifies "the man who can." In the days when thrones were not hereditary, but the property of whoever was strong enough to take them, "the man who could" was the man who became king. And because he could fight and hunt and govern his rule was accepted by those who could not, and he even succeeded in passing along his throne to his son, laying the foundations for the hereditary monarchies that still exist in modern Europe and Asia.

To-day "the man who can" may become something a great deal better than a king. He may become a leader in thought, an uplifter of humanity, a man who leaves the world better than he found it, because of winning battles against poverty and vice and wretchedness, all conditions for which general human inefficiency, together with selfishness, is responsible.

Perhaps the easiest of all speeches is "I can't." It is the refuge of the lazy man and the excuse of the coward.

Nine times out of ten it means "I don't want to." The ability to do anything of importance is not born in a man. The baby cannot walk when he is born; the engineer cannot build bridges when he is in his first college year.

But the baby, instead of sitting sadly in his perambulator and wailing "I can't," crawls out of it as soon as he is strong enough and begins experiments to learn whether he can walk or not. Presently he finds that he can, and after that there is no "I can't" for him as long as he keeps his baby confidence.

There is a story of a man who was asked if he could play the violin. He said he never had tried, but he always thought he could. Overconfidence possibly, but better that than the constant fear of the average man that he cannot do anything of importance.

It is strange that human beings, inheriting a faith in their Creator, easily acquiring a faith in their friends, their leaders and even their political parties, should so universally lack confidence in themselves

The superintendent of a railroad, looking for a man to put in an executive position, will find no lack of men who CAN fill the job. His difficulty is in finding men who KNOW that they can fill it.

An electrical engineer of large experience, who as a boy of 21 had charge of one of the biggest power installations in the country, once said:

"Working under me are many older and more experienced men; many better men. They are superior to me in knowledge of this business and in the practice of it. Often when I get snarled up in my figures I have to go to them to set me straight, and they always do it readily and willingly. Any one of five men who are now my assistants could boss this job better than I can, if they only thought they could. But not one of them has any confidence in himself. If I went to any one of them and told him to run the job in my absence his answer would be 'I can't,' and every answer would be an unwitting falsehood."

No man knows his capabilities till he has really tested them. Before Mr. McAdoo, who finished the Hudson River tubes that connect New York City with New Jersey, came to New York several men had tackled the tube problem. Some of them had even got the work pretty well started, and then difficulties were encountered, and, exclaiming "We can't do it," they quit.

Mr. McAdoo was not an engineer, and he had slender knowledge of engineering matters. But he had formed a habit of saying "I can."

And so, without money, and without engineering experience, he went to work at the problem, and soon had capital interested in it. He finished the work, and is doing more work of the same kind, and the words "I can't" have not as yet escaped his lips.

Certainly no class of inventors ever had more apparent reason to think they were going beyond the limits of human possibility than the men who developed the aeroplane.

From the beginning of history men had tried to fly and failed. Human ingenuity had apparently been exhausted in trying to rival the flight of birds.

Yet the Wrights and other men, with no past successful experience to guide them, said to themselves "We can!" and they did. A miracle was accomplished when the first heavier-than-air machine left the ground, and a succession of miracles will follow until flying by men will be as much of a commonplace as flying by birds.

Hundreds and thousands of men had tried to fly and failed. Millions had merely said "We can't, and you can't, and nobody can," and sneered at any attempts at aviation. In spite of which there is hardly a child living near or in one of the larger cities in the East who has not seen an aeroplane in flight, and who does not expect to ride in one before many years have passed.

When Columbus told his fellow navigators that he was going to cross the Western ocean the whole world thought it couldn't be done. Columbus thought it could. The years that he spent in finding the money to fit out his expedition were fruitful years, for he grew in ability and determination as they passed.

As a young man, with only his great idea to inspire him, he might have given way to discouragement on that first voyage and failed to reach the other shore.

But when he set out he was seasoned by many disappointments, and his purpose was not to be changed by talk of mutiny or by the long, wearying days of the journey.

He had said "I can" when he started. He had confidence in his idea and confidence in himself, and while he never lived to know that he had discovered a new hemisphere he did know that he had crossed the Western Ocean, and justified his belief in himself.

Young men are often warned to beware of overconfidence—the fault which makes them impudent, foolishly vain and often intolerable to their elders. But a little experience with life will soon knock overconfidence out of any youth, and the more of it he has the readier are his kindly fellow citizens to cure him of it.

Lack of confidence, on the other hand, is not so easily cured. The world takes a man pretty much at his own valuation, and they will believe his "I can't" far more quickly than they will credit his "I can."

There is a wide difference between the self-confidence that is born of ability and conceit, which is a product of vanity and does as much to keep a man from success as self-confidence does to gain it for him.

The conceited man fancies he is as good as he needs to be, and therefore sneers at the idea of any further effort.

The self-confident man feels sure of his ability, but he knows that only by continued exertion can he make his ability count.

For a cadet just out of the military academy at West Point to fancy that he could immediately take command of an army corps in war time would be idiotic. But every West Point graduate ought to feel sure that some day, when he has learned more and seen more and studied more, he can command not only a corps, but the entire fighting forces of his country. And if he begins with that sort of self-confidence every experience will teach him to be a better soldier, and step by step he will fit himself for the great place to which he aspires, and, if war ever comes, he may become another Washington or Grant.

In this rushing modern life we often hear stories of overwork, of men being ground down by the fight for the dollar and of going to hospitals and nerve sanitariums in shoals.

But the fight for space in front of the bar results in far more cases of nervous prostration than the fight for business, and there is more danger that the young American will wear himself out trying to do too little than trying to do too much.

Chain yourself to the "I can't" idea, and you will stay where you are till your powers begin to wane; then you will gradually slide down into poverty, and the autumn of your life will be a dismal and wretched season.

Make up your mind that there is nothing within reason that you cannot do if you try, and you will find yourself trying, and trying hard, and the sound mind that you have been given at birth will develop beyond your hopes, and you will get your deserts from a world to which in turn you have given what it has a right to expect from you.

HERE ARE LATEST IDEAS FOR MAKING OF ICES

THERE are a hundred and one kinds to use and just as many ways of preparing them. Every progressive housewife is more than glad to learn any new wrinkle about housekeeping or cooking, and in the following notes prepared by an expert for the Alaska Freezer Company of Winchendon there may be several new ideas about teas and frozen desserts that the average housewife never even heard of.

First of all, see that the freezer can is sweet and clean. Shave or chop the ice very fine. With the ice mix thoroughly very coarse or Turks Island salt, in the proportion of three parts ice to one of salt, and pack closely around the can. Quicker results are thus obtained than by packing separate layers of the ice and salt around the can. When packed it is nearly the top of the can, remove the cover, pour into the can the mixture to be frozen, replace the cover and pack the ice and salt up around the can to the cover, covering the can completely. No brine or salt can get inside the freezer can—insuring prevents.

Allow Only Excess to Escape.

Be sure that the waste-hole in the side of the tub is always kept open, to allow the overflow from the melting ice to run off. It is the brine that does the freezing, and if the [illegible] brine cannot escape the [illegible] will not freeze. If the freezer is to be used at one time, the can with the frozen cream may be held under a cold water faucet for a few minutes, and the cream removed. It can be kept a week or two if packed in ice and salt as a block. Here are some recipes worth giving:

Caramel, Maple and Walnut.

CARAMEL ICE CREAM—Cook one quart of cream, one cup of milk, one-half cup of sugar, one cup of caramelized sugar and one tablespoon of flour together. When cooked flavor with milk and 1 teaspoon of vanilla, and freeze. The caramel is made by cooking one cup of white sugar in a granite saucepan until a dark brown, stirring constantly to prevent burning.

MAPLE ICE CREAM—Use any of the three recipes for foundation ice cream, substituting one-half pound of maple sugar for each cup of white sugar called for. Be sure that the sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Should the cream be too light in color, add a little butter sugar to give it a rich color. Freeze as usual.

WALNUT ICE CREAM—Cook together one quart of cream, one half cup of white sugar and one-half cup of maple sugar, stirring until dissolved. Add three-fourths of a cup of English walnuts pounded in a mortar. Strain, cool, and flavor with one teaspoon of vanilla, and freeze.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM—Cover one quart of sound, ripe strawberries with two cups of sugar, mash well and let them stand for an hour or so. Strain through fine cheese cloth. Mix the pulp with one cup of milk and strain again. Add one quart of cream, and more sugar if desired, and freeze. The strawberries may be put through a vegetable masher and left strained if all the fruit is desired in the cream.

Sweeten to Taste.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM NO. 2—To any of the three foundation ice creams, add one pint of mashed berries, well sweetened to taste, and freeze. Peaches, pineapple, raspberries, bananas, baked apples and other fruits may be used in the similar manner. The juice of one lemon added to the fruit brings out its flavor much better.

GRAPE ICE CREAM—To any of the three foundation ice creams, add two cups of sweetened grape juice, and freeze as usual.

MACAROON ICE CREAM—To any of the recipes for foundation ice creams, when cool, add one tablespoon of vanilla. When partially frozen add one cup of rolled macaroons, and a pinch of salt. The macaroons should be dried in an oven and then rolled or put through a meat chopper.

LEMON ICE CREAM—Use any of the foundation ice cream recipes. To the juice of one lemon and half the rind, grated, with one-fourth cup of sugar. Add one-fourth cup of water and boil for five minutes. When cooked, strain and add to the cream and freeze.

It is always good to use a good vanilla, white sugar, fresh eggs, the best flavoring extracts and sweet, ripe fruits in making up creams. Clean most in preparing the mixtures and in the care of the freezer is also most important.

Ice cream may be made from fresh uncooked cream, but cooking gives the cream greater body, makes it richer, smoother and of a finer grain. The cream should always be cooked in a double boiler. Scalding quantity milk is not important, never be boiled. Remove from fire and the sugar, stir until dissolved, strain, cool, flavor and freeze.

Foundation Creams.

FOUNDATION CREAM NO. 1—Put [illegible] cream in double boiler and heat. Add one cup of sugar, stirring until dissolved. Flavor when cool and freeze.

FOUNDATION CREAM NO. 2—Scald one quart of light cream and one cup of milk together. Add two well beaten eggs and one cup of sugar, cooking slightly until smooth, or make the custard with the yolks of the eggs and add the whites well beaten just before freezing. When cold flavor and freeze.

FOUNDATION CREAM NO. 3—Scald one quart of milk and one cup of cream together. Add three eggs, one cup of sugar and one tablespoon of flour beaten together, and cook twenty minutes. When cool, flavor and freeze.

VANILA ICE CREAM—Use any of the three recipes for foundation ice cream and flavor with one tablespoon of vanilla or two, or use part of a vanilla bean. Freeze as usual.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM No. 1—Make an custard of one quart of milk, six eggs, two cups of sugar and one and one-half tablespoons of flour. Melt two squares of chocolate and add to the custard. When cold, flavor with one tablespoon of vanilla and before freezing add one pint of cream beaten thoroughly. Freeze as usual.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM NO. 2—Melt two squares of chocolate with one-half cup of sugar, add one tablespoon of sugar and two tablespoons of milk or water. Stir and add to any of the three foundation ice cream while the custard is hot.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM—Melt together one quart of cream, one cup of milk, one-half cup of clear black coffee, two cups of sugar and one tablespoon of flour and boil like custard. Cool and freeze.

The Sultana Roll.

SULTANA ROLL—Use either recipe No. 1 or No. 2 for foundation ice creams and freeze. When partially frozen remove one-half of the mixture for the centre of the roll. Flavor the remainder with one cup of [illegible] cream, and one-fourth cup of [illegible] and add to the [illegible] Line the [illegible] with a pale green. Line pound [illegible] with the mixture. To the reserved plain cream add one-half cup [illegible] cooked in syrup until [illegible] centres of the rolls with [illegible] Cover over the top with heavy [illegible] paper, and put in salt and ice for several hours. Serve in slices with [illegible] sauce. See recipe for sauces.

ALASKA COMBINATION—Three quarts of ripe sound peaches, one cup of water, one can of peaches, three cups of sugar, three cups of water. Strain peaches and halves through sieve, squeeze the centers and juice through and strain; add sugar and water, and when dissolved, freeze. A pint of cream may be added before freezing, but is not delightful without.

FROZEN PEACHES—One quart of peaches mashed through a sieve, one pint [illegible] cup of water, [illegible] cups of sugar, juice of two lemons, one pint [illegible] Mix and freeze.

PINEAPPLE WATER ICE—Two [illegible] milk, sugar to taste. Put in freezer and freeze same as you would ice cream.

Frozen Strawberries.

FROZEN BANANAS—One dozen bananas, one pound of sugar, one pint of water, one pint cream, two oranges. Boil water and sugar together five minutes, strain, and when cold add the bananas (which should be mashed) and the orange juice. Freeze, turning slowly. Whip the cream and add to the frozen mixture.

FROZEN STRAWBERRIES—One quart strawberries, juice of two lemons, one pound of sugar, one quart water. Mix berries, lemon juice and sugar, and let it stand one hour. Mash the berries thoroughly, then add water and freeze. Freeze raspberries in the same way.

FRUITS OR WATER ICES—Ices are merely sweetened and diluted fruits frozen to a soft mush. They are usually served in the middle of a dinner. Almost any acidulous fruit or fruit juice may be used for the purpose. The fruit should be mashed and sugar added to the sugar and water together for five minutes improved the ices.

LEMON WATER ICE—One-half pint lemon juice, two cups of sugar and one quart of water. Mix and freeze. Add one or two lemons, mix with the juice, sugar and water, strain and freeze.

ORANGE WATER ICE—Three pint orange juice, one cup of sugar, one cup of water, and two cups of water. Mix all together and freeze.

STRAWBERRY WATER ICE — One quart strawberries, boiled and mashed, one or more cups of sugar to taste. Mash well. Add the juice of one lemon and three cups of water. Strain and freeze.

RASPBERRY WATER ICE—One quart raspberries, one or more cups of sugar, juice of two lemons and one quart of water. Add the sugar to the berries, mash well, add the lemon juice and water, strain and freeze.

CHERRY WATER ICE—Take out the stones of one quart of ripe cherries. Pound in a mortar with one pound of stones, add the juice of one lemon, two cups of sugar and three cups of water. Let stand for about an hour, strain and freeze. Apples and pears may be used in a similar manner instead of cherries.

PINEAPPLE WATER ICE—Two [illegible] yellow pineapples, one and one-half pounds of sugar, one quart of water, juice of two lemons. Pare the pineapples, grate them, and add the juice of the lemons. Boil the sugar and water together for five minutes. When cold, add the pineapple and strain through a fine sieve, and freeze.

ORANGE WATER ICE—One pint of sugar, one pint of orange juice, one teaspoon extract of orange, one quart of water, juice of two lemons. Boil sugar and water five minutes and cool. When cold, add orange and lemon juice and extract. Strain, and freeze as usual.

Almost any berries and fruits may be used, singly or in combination, in a similar manner to the preceding recipes. As all should be mashed before freezing, the fruit should be made a little sweeter than taste dictates.

How to Make Sherbets.

Sherbets are made from fruits, like water ices, with the addition of gelatin, meringue or the whites of eggs. They are frozen until smooth and stiff.

APPLE SHERBERT—One cup sugar, one cup water, three pints water, juice of one lemon, whites of two eggs, sugar and cinnamon to taste. Quarter and core the apples, slice them with the skins on in the water and lemon juice. Mash through a sieve, add the lemon juice, sugar, cinnamon, and the rest of the water. Beat the whites of eggs to a stiff froth, add to the lemon and orange juice and sugar and water. When it freezes, add the rum and sherry, and lastly the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Mix all thoroughly with a spoon and freeze. Good for two or three hours before serving.

Maple Mousse with Nuts.

MAPLE MOUSSE WITH NUTS—Two teaspoons gelatin, two tablespoons cold water, one pint cream, one cup maple syrup of thick cream, one teaspoon of powdered sugar, one-half cup of finely chopped nuts and one cup maple sugar. Soak the gelatin in the water and dissolve in the hot maple syrup. Remove from fire and beat until cool. Whip the cream and fold in with the powdered sugar and nuts, and mix with the syrup. Line a mold with lady fingers or sponge cake and fill the centre with the mousse mixture after chilling and bury in ice and salt for four hours.

COFFEE MOUSSE—One pint of thick cream, one cup of clear, strong coffee. Whip the cream, and the sugar and coffee. Put in the freezer without the beater or in a mold and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

RASPBERRY MOUSSE—One pint thick cream, two cups of powdered sugar, one quart of raspberries slightly crushed. Whip the cream, fold in the sugar and fruit and turn into a pudding mould with centre tube. Pack in ice and salt for four hours. Turn a small amount out of mould and fill the hollow centre with [illegible] sweetened berries mixed with cream. Strawberries may be used in a similar manner.

FROZEN NUT PUDDING WITH GINGER—One pint of milk, two eggs, one teaspoon sugar, one pint of cream whipped stiff, one-half cup of sugar, one-fourth cup of chopped walnut meats, one cup of thinly sliced Canton ginger. Make a custard of the milk, eggs and sugar. When cold, add the whipped cream and ginger syrup. When half frozen add the walnuts and sliced ginger. Freeze hard. Serve in sherbet glasses.

FROZEN PUDDING—One pint of milk, two eggs, two cups of sugar, one tablespoon cornstarch, one tablespoon of gelatin, one quart of cream, one-half cup of candied cherries and raisins mixed, enough rum to cover the fruit. Make a custard of the milk, eggs, flour and cornstarch and the sugar, soak the gelatin in two tablespoons of cold water and dissolve in the hot custard. When cold add the cream and the remainder of the sugar and freeze. When half frozen add the fruit and rum, to which the fruit should be soaked over night. Finish freezing. Ripe

APRICOT PUDDING—One quart cream, yolks of five eggs, one and one-half cups sugar, twelve apricots or peaches, one tablespoon gelatin soaked in sugar and one-half cup cold water. Make a custard of the cream, yolks of eggs and sugar, and when cold freeze. When nearly frozen add the fruit, which should be pared and cut in small pieces, and the gelatin. Freeze hard.

Sauces for Ice Cream.

FROZEN MILK PUNCH—Three cups of milk sweetened to taste, six tablespoons of best brandy, grate in nutmeg. Let thoroughly chill with ice beater. Freeze to a stiff mush and serve in glasses with a grating of nutmeg over the top.

[illegible] FRAPPE—Put [illegible] cups of sugar and one pint of water in a saucepan and boil for ten minutes. Cool and add the juice of six lemons and six oranges, and the pulp of one orange. Strain and freeze to a soft mush.

Here are some extra [illegible]

CHOCOLATE SAUCE—Two squares of chocolate, one and one-half cups of cold milk, one-half cup of sugar. Boil together until thickened. Serve hot or cold, each portion of ice cream.

MAPLE SAUCE—Cook a cup of maple syrup and a tablespoon of butter until it drops thick but does not quite form a soft ball in cold water. Serve hot over each portion of cream.

CLARET SAUCE—Make a syrup of one cup sugar and one-fourth cup of water. When cool add one-half cup of claret.

FRUIT SAUCES—Mash and sweeten to taste strawberries, raspberries, blueberries, peaches, or any desirable fruit. Strain and serve over each portion of cream.

Molding of Ices.

Ice creams and ices are more [illegible] if molded, but for that purpose [illegible] cream should not be [illegible] of [illegible] must be put into molds easily [illegible] to [illegible] Any [illegible] will do, but [illegible] molds thoroughly and with [illegible] put cover on. [illegible] and not [illegible] the [illegible] cover [illegible] a sort of [illegible] to [illegible] prevent the [illegible] from [illegible] Then [illegible] and [illegible] cup of [illegible] hours. [illegible] and salt for several hours. When it is to serve, remove from the mold and [illegible] on a serving platter. It left in a warm room for fifteen it will unmold easily, or may be turned by wrapping a cloth wrung out in hot water.

One of the faults of the [illegible] cook is the [illegible] of [illegible] sauces to be used with meat and fish. Certain sauces belong with certain meats and fish, and to serve the wrong sauce is a sad error, to say nothing of an insult to the taste.

Caper sauce is used on broiled mutton and fish, horseradish sauce goes with roast beef and white sauce is for lamb. Onion sauce is used on cold meats, particularly corned beef and ham. Royal sauce is served cold with fish. Apple sauce goes with pork and duck; currant jelly with roast mutton and chicken, aspic and game, and cranberry sauce with roast turkey.

Maitre d'Hotel Sauce.

To prepare a perfect maitre d'hotel sauce use the following recipe: To a teaspoonful of drawn butter add two tablespoons of cream, the juice of half a lemon and a little of the finely grated rind, a teaspoonful of powdered thyme [illegible] a teaspoonful of salt and a little [illegible] pepper. Stir well together and place over the fire to simmer for five or ten minutes, stirring steadily the while.

BECHAMEL SAUCE—Beat into a cup full of drawn butter that has [illegible] by the [illegible] flour that has been well kneaded in the oven till it is faintly brown. Add to this the [illegible] of a cup of cream, the juice of a [illegible] spoonful of nutmeg, 10 peppercorns and a teaspoonful of salt. Heat the whole together vigorously and then add half an onion sliced very fine, a slice of thin [illegible] of carrot, some chopped parsley, a little thyme, a bay leaf and seven or eight mushrooms. Pour in a pint of rich meat stock and half a cupful of thick cream. Cook the whole in a double broiler for half an hour, strain through fine sieve and you will have one of the most delicious of [illegible]

ROYAL SAUCE—[illegible] two tablespoonfuls of [illegible] over the fire and stir into it the yolks of two eggs. As soon as the yolks commence to thicken remove from the fire and stir into the mixture very slowly [illegible] two tablespoonfuls of wine vinegar, one finely chopped green [illegible] a dash of red pepper and a teaspoonful of salt. Let boil [illegible] and serve.

To Make Mint Sauce.

MINT SAUCE—Wash the mint well and [illegible] Put into a bowl and [illegible] the moisture from them in a towel and chop very fine. To each tablespoonful of mint leaves add a tablespoonful of granulated sugar. Let the mint and sugar stand for 10 or 15 minutes to blend and then add enough vinegar to make the required amount of sauce. These set aside in a cup for two or three hours before serving, that the flavor may pour out of the mint.

PARSLEY SAUCE—Melt a quarter of a cup of butter in a saucepan and add to it the same amount of sifted flour. Pour into this a pint of rich meat stock and stir constantly. When it thickens add two tablespoonfuls of butter and two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped parsley. Also add half a table spoonful of salt, a dash of red pepper and a very little mustard.

ONION SAUCE—Mix well into a hot [illegible] tablespoonful of butter a heaping tablespoonful of flour and add a pint of milk very gradually, two cupfuls of boiling water, stirring all the time. Place [illegible] the fire and let come to the boiling point, a small [illegible] powdered sugar should be added to be added. When the [illegible] is done. Season with [illegible] pepper and salt and [illegible] of mustard.

SAUCE FOR ROASTS—Chop very fine a medium sized [illegible] with a heaping teaspoonful of [illegible] a teaspoonful well browned. Then add half a cupful of vinegar and boil until the vinegar has nearly evaporated. Stir into this a tablespoonful of flour and add a large cup of stock which has been heated. Season well with salt and pepper and a teaspoonful of mustard.

CUCUMBER POTATO SALAD—Cook quarts of boiled sliced potatoes, two sliced cucumbers, three small onions sliced one cupful of [illegible] pecans, one half cupful of browned bacon, one tablespoonful of sugar; add salt, pepper and vinegar to taste. Good.

WHEN SCIENCE TAKES THE PLACE OF THE COURTS—

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

PARDONED OUT

I'm pardoned out. Again the stars
Shine on me with their myriad eyes.
So long I've peered twixt iron bars,
I'm awed by this expanse of skies.
The world is wider than I thought,
And yet 'tis not so wide I know
But into its remotest spot
My tale of shame can go.

I'm pardoned out. Old Father Time,
Who seemed to halt in horror when
I stained my manhood by a crime,
With steady step moves on again.
And thro' the black, appalling night,
That walled me in a gloom accurst,
The wonder of the morning light
In sudden glory burst.

I'm pardoned out. I shall be known
No more by number, but by name.
And yet each whispering wind has blown
Abroad the story of my shame.
I dread to see men shrink away
With startled looks of scorn or fear,
When in life's crowded marts some day
That name falls on their ear.

I'm pardoned out, ah, God! to roam
Like some whipped dog among my kind;
I have no friends; I have no home
Save those bleak walls I leave behind.
How can I face the world of men—
My comrades in the days of yore?
Oh! hide me in my cell again,
And, warden, lock the door.

ACCORDING to statistical reports, fifty seven-tens per cent. of the men who are pardoned from prison in the United States, or who are freed after serving terms, become good, law-abiding citizens. This speaks well for the race; but with all the faults of our present system and our methods of punishment, it proves that more good than evil under lies them.

One who has read history and is familiar with the horrors of prison life in the 18th century can only wonder that we visited our awful dungeons and the [illegible] human beings rotted in darkness after being tortured by fiends who called themselves dispensers of justice, can but thank God that we are in a vast improvement upon the past. When one of the London came into power in France he [illegible] by sending a package to his old [illegible] confined in a miserable dungeon for thirty-seven years; and neither the unfortunate man nor any one living knew for what [illegible] had been confined there in the appalling fate. The incredibly devilish construction of cells in the old Spanish forts of Morro Castle, where the prisoners were crammed, six or [illegible] cramped into a crouching space and fed through a small aperture to prolong his agony, render our prisons of this day Edens by comparison.

Not long ago I saw a letter a very philosophical inmate of an American prison had written to a friend, saying that "I have no fault to find with my work or my associations. My work is congenial, and I doubt if in any shop or office I here similar work is performed in the world more agreeable companionship could be met with." The same man wrote later: "The public owes me nothing, but I owe it the point an atonement which I mean to pay to the best of my ability."

This [illegible] man was serving A SECOND TERM.

The cause of this second term was the desperate state of mind in which he found himself after being pardoned out the first time, and meeting such difficulties everywhere. Even a [illegible] for honorable employment. Everybody knows the [illegible] of any degree of sympathy will say how deeply he feels for a man who comes out of prison, and meets everywhere distrust and aversion. Yet ninety and nine of these escape sympathetic helping, when confronted with the man who has finished his term and asks for work. But that they, too, are filled with doubt and fear of the pedagogue.

Something like sixteen years ago a New York clergyman sought among his church members for a man who would give employment, with respect to a man, loved by a large circle of friends and trusted by everybody who knows him.

Yet before he reached this successful position he encountered every phase of discouragement. After he began trying to live honestly, and to be industrious, disaster after disaster fell upon him. It seemed as if even the elements leagued against him, and flood, and fire, as well as human foes, robbed him of peace and prosperity.

Still he worked on, hoped on, prayed on, though, alas, he very often cried in the fortunes, and thrice rented, he came forth pure gold. He is to-day a man any woman might be proud to call son or brother and a credit to reform, and live. Independent and self-supporting lives, could be helped back to virtue by the hard heartedness of the world or by fate. But when any man This young man, however, was so deeply, earnestly, and unswervingly desirous of living an honest life, that he found a way opened. He was able to begin a small business in a very small way, and to-day he is a well-to-do, respected man, loved by a large circle of friends and trusted by everybody who knows him.

Yet before he reached this successful position he encountered every phase of discouragement. After he began trying to live honestly, and to be industrious, disaster after disaster fell upon him. It seemed as if even the elements leagued against him, and flood, and fire, as well as human foes, robbed him of peace and prosperity.

Still he worked on, hoped on, prayed on, though, alas, very often cried in the fortunes, and thrice rented, he came forth pure gold. He is to-day a man any woman might be proud to call son or brother and a credit to reform, and live. Independent and self-supporting lives, could be helped back to virtue by the hard heartedness of the world or by fate. But when any man

The seeker after work wants to rid himself of a combative and defiant feeling. Instead of regarding himself as one who has been wronged by [illegible] but law, he needs to [illegible] the [illegible] world: "I have made a [illegible] mistake. I have been punished for it. I want to be given a chance to live a new life. I want you to trust me, to believe in me, and to help me to do the right thing now. I cannot do it alone. Give me a chance."

At the same time he should endeavor to put himself in the other man's place and to realize that it is only human nature to feel an impulse of mingled doubt and fear in the [illegible] encounter with one who has broken laws which were formed to protect the race. Instead of resenting [illegible] social [illegible] he should [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] The free man, who has never known the experience of being [illegible] of counting [illegible] and locks, wants to use his imagination and try and put himself in the place mentally of the one who is asking his help.

And he wants to avoid the "clam-boiler-handshout" attitude. He wants to meet this brother who has fallen by the wayside as Christ met Mary and Magdalen—to mentally forgive him his sins, and to help him to rise above them no more.

Besides this individual attitude, there should be a more practical organization to assist men to find positions after they have been released from prison. And every church should have committees whose work is to be a social uplift and an environment of [illegible] home to such men.

In every village and every city and every country place such committees ought to be formed, and no matter into what community a man came after serving his terms in prison, he would find the Christ spirit existing, and the helping hand and helpful gift, the helping heart waiting for him. In another century prisons will be [illegible] abolished. Men who err will be sent to scientific schools and treated and trained, not punished.

Children will be born of better seed and will grow up in a better world from infancy up to maturity, and unfortunate, weak or criminal tendencies will be trained out and [illegible] The [illegible] work of sterilizing the criminal and degenerate has begun, so that the percentage of births [illegible] of [illegible] the next generation.

Science will take the place of courts, and the [illegible] will [illegible] of justice will [illegible] and improve [illegible]

We [illegible] while we wait for these improvements, let us make the way easier for those who have served and seek to live honestly, for those, who have fallen and are [illegible]

BROWN BREAD BETTER THAN WHITE AND PROLONGS LIFE

By CHARLES HYATT-WOOLF, F. R. S. L.

AT the recent Pure Food Congress a consensus of opinion prevailed that "there is no article of food or drink which is not regularly adulterated."

This is only true, it should be remembered, for as every class of food is recognised for in every class there are full and manufacturers of sterling worth and purity. In justice let it be noted that there are manufacturers who bring to bear on their work the highest intelligence that the science of to-day can furnish. In this connection it is important to note that such adulteration can arise equally from ignorance or carelessness and deliberate intention. Either is culpable.

In the case of bread, where adulteration exists, it is frequently due to the lack of care and training, to the use of bad water and false ferments; and this is not surprising, seeing the dimensions of the industry and the varied classes comprising it. But, as in many other matters, the poorer people are probably better served than the richer classes.

In fact, cheap flours often possess more nutrient value than expensive samples. This is the outcome of the modern craving for appearances. The whiteness that appeals to the eye is of doubtful wholesomeness, and millers would be the last persons to encourage it were it not for the insistent public demand. "Processing" flour is particularly objectionable, but it provides the beautiful white loaf that, starving little children and produces rickets. Our race was the outcome of bread made from the natural product of wheat, and soon we may have white bread made from bleached flour.

The craving probably originated in the [illegible] desire to appear genteel. Cheap bread in the old days was made from rye flour and badly milled wheat flour. The color of that, ultimately [illegible] the story of the consumer's [illegible] pocket. The result was a demand for cheap flour that would make a white loaf, and bleached flour appeared on the scene.

This flour is bleached by chemicals—electricity, the manufacturers tell us. But [illegible] process involves the developing of [illegible] nitrous and nitric acid fumes as well as oxides of nitrogen. An authority has recently demonstrated that these have a powerful antiseptic action, and actually retard digestion for a longer or shorter time, dependent on the strength, the action of ferments existing in saliva, in the gastric and in the pancreatic fluids.

The Lancet recently stated: "The favorite bleaching agent appears to be nitrous oxid fumes, and it is doubtful whether the [illegible] of this process has been [illegible] shows such an intense action on the circulation as does this class of drugs. The extreme probability, as in fact, is that [illegible] acid would affect the most important dietetic constituent of the flour—viz., the gluten—in such a way as to make it less digestible.

Some experiments made this year demonstrate, however, better than any argument, the [illegible] danger in [illegible] made from unbleached flour and given to rabbits did not affect them unfavorably [illegible] but [illegible] or caused their death within a few hours.

Quite lately an ozone bleaching process has been introduced which, it is claimed, does not adversely affect the bread.

Other forms of food adulterations do not prevail to their former extent, but there is still occasional sophistication with sawdust, rice flour, potatoes, bean and pea flour, borax, and even chalk, carbonate of magnesia, alum, sp plaste of copper and sulphate of zinc. A more general adulterant seems to be maize cones. These are finely ground and mixed with genuine flour. It will surprise many millers who employ this adulterant to learn that it is adulterated in its turn by means of [illegible]

People who deem it unaristocratic to eat dark white bread will find safety in brown bread. This is [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that was so popular many years ago. This is too much of an irritant for ordinary consumption. Its action when eaten is often such that [illegible] right through the digestive tract without leaving any nutriment behind. It acts as a laxative. But [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] as are made [illegible] are almost invariably delightful to eat, and exceedingly nourishing. The germ, or embryo, of wheat is never included in [illegible] white flour.

The grain of wheat [illegible] more complex organism than is generally supposed. It is not a solid bean of homogenous flour, but is a layer of cells containing gluten, a flesh-forming albuminoid. Then comes the cellular tissue, with large hexagonal cells containing granules of starch. And at the bottom of this wonderful wheat grain will be found its germ—the portion that will [illegible] develope into the future plant—a germ of nourishment which the white-flour miller is compelled to reject.

It is high time that a bread standard was agreed on. It should be a standard which every consumer should demand without a declaration. Bread is too serious an element in the food of the people to be trifled with. We may expect a healthy, contented, prosperous and progressive population if the staff of life on which they lean be rotten at the core? It is useless to blink the fact that bread is a staple food—sometimes the staple food.

Good bread contains all the food elements in digestible form. There is nitrogenous matter, for which we are in the habit of looking to meat, but some of which we can certainly derive from pure bread. There is starch, the carbonaceous principle which supplies us with physical energy. And there are phosphates, so important in the case of growing children, since they are responsible for bone formation. No human body can be healthy and really vital without [illegible] which [illegible] has been heated. Season well with salt and pepper and a teaspoonful of mustard.

CUCUMBER POTATO SALAD—One quarts of boiled sliced potatoes, two sliced cucumbers, three small onions sliced one cupful of [illegible] pecans, one half cupful of browned bacon, one tablespoonful of sugar; add salt, pepper and vinegar to taste. Good.

DOINGS IN LABOR CIRCLES OF BOSTON

WITH seven of the fourteen shops affected by the original strike order, issued by their local four weeks ago, resolved on a straight union basis, while only four others remain open, all out of the 225 who first struck, the officers of Photo Engravers' Union No. 3 assert that their strike virtually is won. In fact, so firm is this belief that, while the union to-day is paying strike benefits of $7 a week to all apprentices on strike, with $9 to sing men and $12 to married men, an advance of $2 over the regular allowance, the advisability of making that allowance still larger is under consideration. The new wage scale calls for a weekly minimum of $21 and a straight eight hour day, with extra for overtime and for night work. It also carries with it an apprentice regulation and calls for the elimination of the "jack leg" element to have been maintained by the employers in the past.

Preparations already are under way for the biennial convention of the National Woman's Trade Union League, to be held in this city next June, a representative of the Boston branch of the league being in Chicago on business connected with the coming event.

Final action on the enforcement of the new wage scale adopted by Upholsterers' Union No. 53, calling for a minimum of $21 and a 50-hour week will not be taken until September 15. The men now get $19.50, and have 300 members in their union.

David Goldstein of Cigarmakers' Union No. 97, one of the most widely quoted labor men in this city, has accepted an invitation to deliver the Labor Day address at Rutland, Vt.

Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Boston Central Labor Union, is in receipt of a communication from men prominent in the labor movements of Great Britain in which it is stated that they are about to inaugurate a movement to give a special tax on land owners in that country to help pay an unemployed and accident insurance to needy workingmen. The reason given for seeking to levy this special tax is based on the fact that the increased values of land should be shared with the poor and needy workers, who, by numbers in any given community make that land more valuable.

Following the big mass meeting held by the Steam Engineers' Union in Gloucester Thursday night, at which Business Agent Mansfield of the city, international vice-president of the general union, declared that the men of that calling on the the Cape are completely organized

Typographical Union No. 13 meets at Faneuil Hall at 2 o'clock this afternoon, at which time the question of establishing a new wage scale will come up as a special order of business, and other important questions passed upon. The local is said to be in a very prosperous condition and becoming stronger every day

Only two candidates remain in the contest being waged for several weeks past for the office of Cigarmakers' International Union. Ed Brunell of Hartford, Conn., and William Strauss of Brooklyn, N. Y., are scoring to the latest advices received by local union officers of the Boston union. The vote must be in by general headquarters not later than September 20.

W. B. Austin, an architect connected with the Boston Building Congress, is billed to speak at Lexington night's meeting of the Middlesex County Labor Union, "Plan" of the 1915 people. The meeting will be held at No 380 Harrison avenue.

"Jerry" Donovan of the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' Union and John T. Cashman of the Iron Workers Union are among those most prominently mentioned as candidates for the vice-presidency of the Boston Central Labor Union at the coming election of officers.

An extensive organizing campaign is being made in Lawrence and its immediate vicinity by the Metal Trades Council in an attempt to unionize the entire district so far as the men employed are concerned in either of its nine affiliated trade unions are concerned.

John Golden of Fall River, general president of the United Textile Workers, and Mrs. Golden, are in the city to-day as the guests of Mrs. Mary A. Donlon, of No. 7 Sanuit street, local business agent for the Boston union of that calling.

Fred J. Kneeland of Painters' Union No 11 will be the speaker at the Labor Day address to be given at "The Hazel" by the Haverhill Central Labor Union.

Calls are out for a special meeting of Mosaic Tilelayers and Plasterers' Union No. 95, Saturday, September 3, at Wells Memorial Building, such district regular to its members for the coming Labor Day parade.

Coal Teamsters' Union No. 68 holds a special meeting at Wells Memorial this afternoon to select delegates to the State Branch, A. F. of L., convention at Worcester.

Hundreds of red umbrellas, white coats and blue caps, the colors adopted by that organization for Labor Day, have been distributed to its members by Boston Barbers' Union No. 37 during the last week at its Court-street headquarters. The local holds a special meeting at No 2nd Harrison avenue to-day to complete plans for the parade.

Boston Central Labor Union Political Activity Committee, made up of three delegates from 124 local trade unions, met at Wells Memorial Building at 2 o'clock this afternoon. All unions that are not represented to date are invited to send their decrees to this meeting

Twenty-four local unions have signified their intention to participate in the Labor Day parade to be led by the Quincy Central Labor Union, and it is estimated that 1,000 men will be in line. The line of march selected is four miles long, ending at New Dowers's Landing, with sports and free dancing in the afternoon.

But twenty-four of the 2,000 men involved in the strike order issued by Machinists' Union No. 264, A. F. of L., on July 1, have deserted the cause, although the strike still is unsettled in a number of shops and 200 men are idle because of that fact. This number, however, is being reduced with the passing of each day, and the officers of the union declare they hope to find work for the remaining strikers this week. Meeting in Allerton Hall, Dorchester, to-night, the union will take up the matter of the final settlement of the strike.

SUMMER SNAPSHOTS AT SOME OF STATE'S PROMINENT POLITICIANS AND STATESMEN

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

TWO conventions on the same day at the same hour is rather new for both of the leading parties of the State, but that's just what's what for October! But there'd be a difference in the conventions, now but there will, and a "mutual" difference, as a canny Scot would say, on the "night before." The Republican "night before" will be a big feast, with the snare Lodge and the noble Crane having as easy time of it. Both boys had for time many years' service in the state convention

Then on next day, when the band plays and the flags are waved in the convention hall Lodge and Crane will beam on the gathering, a half dozen favored sons will have been placed in nomination, the first to be hooted over by the two Senatorial Dogs and then greeted with the usual Donnybrook fair, adopted, and then every man's son a delegate will strike the trail for the polls and swear that one of their best boys had not touched a drop of poison since the cars ran out over him.

But there'd be a different story when the unionized Democracy meet in Faneuil Hall. The "night before" at the Democratic promises to bring fond memories of those bumper conventions held in old Springfield. There'd be all sorts of disputes and mere things to make a mighty chance during the next few weeks, if any-one were to write the night and morning prizes of Donnybrook fair. Everybody would be invited to get a vetted ten in politics ought to see, at the friendly get-together meeting, his brain with a club, that Congressman is a big thing when it comes to the Democratic nomination for Governor, and that Major Fitzgerald hasn't found out Long Fox is pain also.

The May'r's name is all-the-time candidate manager of last January visits Foss and Fitzgerald Water for conference, soon as Hollister boys off the trains Foss and Joe shoot up to Parkman House and get down to business. The discussion will be on the Foss boom, and more things have been done in less time. Woe-some to meet all the officers, Democratic, John D. Mc-Nutt, who besides meeting Foss and Fitzgerald, will be in touch with Boss organizing through "Jack" Mahoney, chairman of the City Committee? McDonald.

Mayor Fitzgerald has gone so far as to declare that "if he were a stranger now on the day of the election, he would get down to the polls in the morning." Yahey has been studying the situation ever since he got back from Old Orchard and the more he sees of the more pointed he sees it, the more he feels sure that this man who has been growing in popularity every day is gracefully offer a chance to become one of the two nearly insurmountable obstacles that stand in the way of the Democratic nomination for Governor. And with Yahey to possibly cause a hitch will be allowed to get by.

Joe Walker Got Off the In Bad Free List.

"JOE" WALKER is on the Republican Committee on Resolutions. "Joe" became infected a little while ago with the "insurgent" fever, but it was a low fever and passed away quickly "Joe" thrilled the State with his advocacy of the direct nominations bill, but when it came time to do something and help circulate petitions so that the proposition might reach the legislature again in proper form, the Speaker was strangely silent and inactive. "Joe" is like Prince, Speaker Nason, can seen a new light, the place upon the Committee on Resolutions can only be considered a sop to him for the appointment of the Republican party, that is having its own platform except it is an echo, which in reality, Walker will be on the job and make the platform fit. It's too wide to fall out with the powers that be in his party.

* * *

Easy For Pelletier.

IT appears to be smooth sailing for District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier to secure the Democratic nomination to succeed himself. While the majority of the Boston delegates to the State Convention are going unpledged, the word that has been passed around to the ward leaders by the city committee has been, "Pledge your District Attorney delegation to Pelletier." That means he will get the Democratic nomination again without a contest.

There has been some talk of pulling the strings so that the county prosecutor would also get the Republican nomination, but reporting to what was customary in the old days of Democratic rule, it would not be generally satisfactory.

Some of the influential Democratic leaders are strong opposed to any such course, however, and the District Attorney will possibly have a hard fight for his election.

Ex. K. H. Kelley, who was an aspirant for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, is charged to be a friend of Pelletier's campaign for the office

That Tenth Fight and Boston's Mayor.

ALL kinds of rumors are rife as to where Mayor Fitzgerald will centre his support in the Congressional fight in the Tenth district. On one corner some enthusiast is likely to buttonhole you and tell you positively that Don O'Connell and Mike Gidney met Fitz at the Hotel Touraine and that the last city campaign and everything connected in the process of harmony to support Joe O'Connell for Congress if Joe would take the stump for him. No less some stick on him and O'Connell is now nailing to do with the present high cost of living. Love is rewarded to being enfolded in the ranks of the regulars and will be depended upon to help in a smooth running of the State convention. Nothing something that he wanted and Curley threw it into him and one near cracking him. Fitzy is with O'Connell."

There are a number of others of the same brand which is the best indication to be had that the leaders of the City Hall influence in the Tenth is problematical. The Mayor himself has said without qualification that he will let the candidates fight it out themselves without any interference on his part.

* * *

Chance For Democrats.

WITH a little support from the leaders it may be possible to swing the Eighth Suffolk Senatorial district into the Democratic column. Last year Robert P. Clark, who is a four-bell, fight against Wilfred Parker, whose legislative record was enough to defeat any candidate, and succeeded in coming within 300 votes of getting a seat. These, again, somewhat elastic figures. It was a creditable showing on limited resources and without a mite of help from the party organization. The year on the ticket is a three Democratic candidates for it has been done before and perhaps Could Operate on Others.

After the Aborns have instilled virility into "The Bohemian Girl," I would recommend to their attentions "Martha," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Barber of Seville."

It may be carriage to say it, but "Tristan und Isolde" wouldn't suffer at the Aborns even at it and caused a new thing to happen during the four hours of its leisurely progress, and "Pelleas and Melisande" would benefit by a mild stimulant.

Shakespeare used to take moth-eaten and mouldy plays and breath the breath of life into them. The Aborns are musical Shakespeares and there is very much for them to do.

Constantino is in Chili.

Constantino, the Boston Opera tenor, refused $2,000 a night to sing in Mexico at the Centennial Celebration Opera season, which begins in September. Constantino is now in Santiago, Chili, where he is engaged at the $15,000,000 opera house of that city and from which he writes enthusiastically.

Caruso, the Belgian controllo of the Boston Opera was engaged for the Mexican season and left Boston a few days ago to begin rehearsals. Mme Claessens has become an American woman and intends to make her home here. She has been spending the Summer in Massachusetts and declares it a lovely Summer resort

SUNDAY CONCERTS IN BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

BY FREDERICK JOHNS.

SUNDAY night concerts will be given at the Boston Opera House during the coming season, but they will be arranged a little differently from those of last season and should be more successful.

The opera concert did not enjoy the patronage of the vaudeville concerts that were being offered Sunday nights, at half a dozen different theatres. It seemed that the opera subscribers were satisfied with their regular performances, the general public preferred the popular operatic performances in the concerts and those who didn't attend the opera at all did not go Sunday nights to hear operatic concerts.

The oratorio, cantata and church music is likely to be tried this season and thus an appeal will be made to an element not now represented, which has not hitherto been catered to

DEPARTMENT STORE SNAP SHOTS

Changed His Brand.

A FORGETFUL floor walker got his handed him in rather a smooth manner the other day. He had been accustomed to yelling, "Hey!" down the counters when a certain girl was wanted. So a little note he got read thusly.

"My dear Mr. J——: Miss Hey has changed her name to Foulder. Don't you think you had better change your stall?

"Better do that. ANON."

Mr. J—— has quit chewing out hay in that department store.

Too Obliging.

ONE of the younger saleswomen in a big Boston department store had learned her lesson of "politeness at any cost" by heart. But she was puzzled what to do when this was handed out to her by a customer of whom she asked:

"Can I do anything for you today, madam?"

Customer—Yes, you can help me take these bundles over to Park square.

He Found Out.

A SALESWOMAN with a businesslike way about her was accosted on Summer street the other day by a youth with a hopeless look on his face.

"Can you tell me when Miss B—— gets through?" he asked the saleswoman.

"Yes, she went through the side door a moment ago and walked off with a man about your age."

The saleswoman is wondering if the two swains had it out in Miss B——'s presence.

Likes Mail Man.

ONE little blonde in a Boston department store is giving her friends something to gossip about. The blonde is keen on a letter carrier, who promptly makes his appearance in the store every forenoon.

"M—— must be after the mail strong," said one gossipy girl.

"Just learning the letters in love's alphabet," gossiped another.

"No, she's just trying to combine 'I' and 'U' into 'U. S.' And as it's going to be," gossiped a third.

Merely a Favor.

AN elderly woman entered the misses' suit department of one of the big department stores in Boston. Miss B——, one of the saleswomen, approached and displayed some suits on the chairs.

Elderly woman—Those are very nice suits. Would you kindly have them as they are, as I am going down to the South Station to meet a friend and I want her to see them?

Miss B—— (flabbergasted).

Misunderstood.

IN the basement of one of the big department stores there is a sign hung over the counter, reading, "Nobody can stay here longer than five weeks."

Friend—Why so?

Customer—Look (pointing to the sign), they are going out of business. Knockdown sales, of course, dearie.

Seeking Knowledge.

THE "head woman" in the fourth main back has a few she likes to tell. Here they are:

"Customer—a woman—approached me the other day with 'Lady, are the children's shoes on this flat?'

Second customer—Lady, is the basement up stairs?

Third customer—Miss, have you got any birdseye cloth suitable for napkins?"

Weighty Reading

A SALESGIRL in one of the department stores has just returned from her vacation. She explained a lameness of the left ankle by saying she fell from a tree in the country, while she was aloft reading a book. The branch broke and she struck the ground on her left side.

One of her friends suggested:

"Glad to note you have cut out reading the Laura Jean Libby stuff. That vacation book must have been a weighty one to break a limb."

MEGAPHONE MAN IN COPLEY SQUARE

Scene—Copley Square in mid-afternoon. Rubberneck Wagon rolls up Boylston street from the Public Garden and slows up at the junction of Huntington avenue. There is a job lot of passengers.

MEGAPHONE MAN—We are now in Copley Square, the finest public quar. in the world. I don't mean in the world.

MEGAPHONE MAN—The party from New York that has been making remarks about everything we pass will kindly be quiet or get no tip car. This is the finest square in America.

MEGAPHONE MAN—You can have your dollar back any time.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—Oh, all right! Go ahead with your spiel.

PRETTY GIRL (from Augusta, Me.)—I think it's perfectly lovely and I don't believe it can be beat anywhere (glances indignantly at the New Yorker)

MAN FROM NEW YORK—Baby, for you, kiddo! How're things down East?

MEGAPHONE MAN—On our left we have Trinity Church. This is considered the finest specimen of Gothic church architecture in America, and that includes New York (glares at the disturber, but discovers that he and the pretty girl are whispering to each other). This church is the leading Episcopal edifice in New England. The beauty of its interior is surpassed by the interior. On our return we shall inspect the interior.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yes, marm.

OLD LADY—What's that statue over there?

MEGAPHONE MAN (with impressiveness)—That is the last and greatest work of the sculptor, St Gaudens. It is a heroic statue of Phillips Brooks, the famous Episcopal bishop. The sculptor has evolved the beautiful allegorical idea of expressing in stone the preacher's inspiration.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—Say, you're all right, but you wouldn't do for a New York rubberneck cart. Can the high brow stuff.

PRETTY GIRL—Was you ever in Augusta? (Conversation a deux is resumed.)

SCHOOL TEACHER (from Holyoke)—Oh, I know. That was the headquarters of the N. E. A.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yes: I believe there was a school teachers' convention here a few years ago.

SCHOOL TEACHER (indignantly)—You know very well there was.

MEGAPHONE MAN—To tell the truth, lady, I didn't like those school teachers. They know more about Boston than I do. It was embarrassing.

AGRICULTURAL LOOKING PERSON (from Squash Centre, Vt.)—Is that Art Museum where they stable them Venuses and Dianas?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yep.

AGRICULTURAL ETC.—Guess we better make a special trip up there, sa-manthy.

THE BIGGEST FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY IN THE WORLD
LADIES AND GENTS YOU'RE BEING CONNED WHY YOU COULD SET THIS SHACK IN ONE CORNER OF THE NEW YORK LIBRARY AND YOU WOULDN'T KNOW IT WAS THERE

MRS. SQUASH CENTRE—We don't do nothing of the kind: the hussies! Drive on, mister!

MEGAPHONE MAN (with a grin)—Don't be alarmed, madam. The Art Museum has moved over to the Back Bay Fens.

SAMANTHY—Well, I'll bet it had to move just as soon as the authorities found out about it.

(Chorus rubbers and says, "Yes."

MEGAPHONE MAN—That's Moses Williams. He is one of the most prominent men in Boston, and he is going to build a $3,000,000 hotel where the museum now stands.

SQUASH CENTRE—He must be a pretty rich man, by heck!

MEGAPHONE MAN—That gentleman on the other side of the street is a syndicate that is going to widen St. James avenue and improve this district generally.

OLD LADY—I know. He is the Boston Public Library.

MEGAPHONE MAN—You are right, lady. That is the Boston Public Library. The biggest free public library in the world, a monument to the enterprise of our citizens.

NEW YORKER (jumping up on a seat)—I hate to butt in here, but it's my duty to tell you ladies and gents that you're being conned. Why, you could see this shack in one corner of the New York Public Library and you wouldn't know it was there.

MEGAPHONE MAN—The party wouldn't be likely to know it if there are no books in the big barracks he was just talking about. There are a million books in the Boston Library, among the finest collections in existence.

PRETTY GIRL (to New Yorker)—I bet you felt that.

NEW YORKER (stubbornly)—Well, we got the building, and I guess we can get the books all right. Anyway, books are no good.

MEGAPHONE MAN—We shall leave the cars here and enter the library. (Business of climbing down from the sight-seeing car. Party enters the Library.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—On our left is a statue of Sir Henry Vane, one of the colonial governors of Massachusetts.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Directly in front is the grand staircase, which is similar to many of the most famous that adorn the palaces. It is built entirely of Italian marble. We have here the great carved lions of St. Gaudens; they guard the staircase and serve as monuments to two Massachusetts regiments which did good service in the Civil War. These panel paintings are the work of Paul de Chavannes, the great French painter. Boston paid him $50,000 for this work.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—Well, you got stung! I know a fellow that would have done a better job for $50 a picture. He'd have put a little color into them. This guy was shy of his paint.

PRETTY GIRL (sympathetically)—You don't know much about art, do you?

NEW YORKER (proudly)—You bet I don't.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Glance through this doorway and you will see Bates Hall, a magnificent reading room which bears the name of one of the benefactors of the library. Now follow me into the delivery room. Here we have one of the most famous series of paintings done by a living artist. It is the "Search for the Holy Grail" by Edwin Abbey.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—There is a lot of class to this. This fellow was not afraid to slap on the color. That's a pretty good fight over there, and those twenty-four captive princesses are a bunch of beauts.

MEGAPHONE MAN (sarcastically)—I'm glad to have found something that meets your approval.

MAN FROM NEW YORK (aside to pretty girl)—He found something else that meets my approval, and that's you.

PRETTY GIRL—Now, you stop! MR. SQUASH CORNER—This is all right, but I don't see many books.

MEGAPHONE MAN—The books are kept on the other side of the building. That section across the courtyard is entirely filled with books from roof to cellar, and when you want to get a book you present a slip at that desk. We shall now visit the "History of Religion," by Sargent, which is located on the Special Libraries floor.

The party moves on, but the New Yorker and the girl from Augusta do not follow.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—Say, kiddo, what do you say to having dinner with me?

PRETTY GIRL—I don't think I ought to.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—Sure, it's all right. I may not know about art, but I can order the finest dinner you ever sank your fang into.

PRETTY GIRL—Well, perhaps, if you don't fight with the Megaphone Man any more.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—He can say anything he wants to and I'll fall for it.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—I didn't, because I never had it.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, we still have to visit the New Old South, the headquarters of the Woman Suffrage Association and the Museum of Natural History.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—On your way. This lady feels faint, and I got to lead her to a beefsteak.

Best Jokes AT THE Summer Shows

SOME of our troupe stopped in a small town where accommodations were rather limited, and after inquiring around they were told that there was no room at the hotel, but that if they cared to they could sleep in the church. As all the pews had nice soft cushions, they decided to bunk in the church.

"Well, see that it stays in the family," groans Tillie.

* * *

"POOR ole ma!" says Tillie sympathetically; "she has been in that kitchen for long years, and never left it to go to bed—except once, and that was to a funeral!"

* * *

TILLIE suddenly conceives the idea that the stage is calling her, and she confides her theatrical ambitions to Frost and Snow, the song and dance team, who are staying at her mother's boarding house.

"I think I'll go on the stage," says Tillie, as she passes the basins to Harry Frost. "I know it ain't respectable, but it is a darn sight better than washing dishes."

"Why don't you?" says Frost.

"I think I will," says Tillie. "The manager of the 'Peroxide Blondes' told me I had the loudest voice he ever heard. What do you think I would be best at—vaudeville or opera? I love opera."

"Why don't you take an ingenue part?" suggests Frost.

"Will it hurt me?" asks Tillie

GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE YOU KNOW IN AND AROUND BOSTON

THE choice of Charles D. Daly as the Harvard quarterback of the old days back into the limelight. There were a host of Harvard grads who looked upon it to a certainty that "Charlie" was still in the army—a lieutenant of infantry in the West—and it caused some surprise when his appointment brought forth the fact that for some time he had been engaged in the brokerage business on State street. Now the men who watched his brilliant play in football games are holding the hope that the Civil Service Commissioners will certify his appointment so that his regime at Bristol street may begin.

* * *

JAMES A (JERRY) WATSON, who has been getting appointed, too, but the former leader of Ward 18 doesn't pass to stand for the O K of the service board in the vacation place that Sheriff Scavey has given him at the Charles street jail. There are numerous politicians in this town who know that if "Jerry" got the chance he would be glad to lock them up. In the old days the Cabot street bath house rallies used to at tract throngs when it became known that Watson was to speak. The man who interrupted him always got the worst of things. One evening Jerry was in the midst of an oration when an intoxicated individual had something to say. The man was standing near a stove in the hall and Jerry noticed that the stove was red hot and the throng was sweltering. When a jumbled, unintelligent stretch of mumbling came from the disturber again, Jerry brought the house down by exclaiming; "My friend, either you or the stove will have to go out."

* * *

DISTRICT ATTORNEY JOHN J. HIGGINS of Middlesex, who is as much a Bostonian as he is a Somervillean, for he has an office on State street, caught a breath of salt sea air the other day. He was down to Nantasket with the Cambridge Elks wearing a straw hat of immense size. It looks as though Mr. Higgins will establish a record in the future of securing convictions in murder trials hereabouts. And speaking of his appearance at Nantasket, it calls one that the district attorney was the most frequently greeted, apparently best known parader in the pageant given in Somerville on July Fourth, when President Taft visited that city.

* * *

NONESUCH LAKE, a beautiful body of water between Wellesley and Natick has proven an attractive camping site for several well-known Boston attorneys. George H. Shields has a fine cottage on its banks and another camp is occupied by Cornelius Keating, who has entertained lavishly there. There are some good fish in the lake and of course the stories as to their size and catches made will be prolific later on.

* * *

JOHN J. DOUGLASS, who was once clerk of the Board of Health, bah!, a master of arts degree from Boston College, and is a leader of the first magnitude. He has staged many plays. He and "Billie" Hess son now member of a local stock company, were notable in college days for the arts they undertook in the annual productions of the institution. While the Mayor can sing "Sweet Adeline" with eclat, Douglass can recite "Over the Hills from the Poorhouse," one of Will Carleton's best poems, with fervor that always brings applause.

* * *

THE baseball team of the Boston Firemen is a fast one and no small portion of the credit for this fact goes to "Jim" Maloney, the manager, who is chief stenographer at the headquarters. Jim is a personal friend of Walter Conroy of the Washington team of the American League and has got the big leaguer interested enough in his team to have him come out on the recent visit of the Washington team and give the boys a little coaching. Conroy's advice and Maloney's management are two things that have helped to make the fire laddies team a hard one for the fast amateurs to beat.

* * *

ACTING FIRE COMMISSIONER FRANCIS M. CARROLL was discussing the Boston Fire Department with a friend in the Commissioner's law office in the Kimball Building.

"So far," quoth the Commissioner, "I've been lucky. There have been no big fires."

"Hit wood, hit wood" admonished the other.

"That's so," said Mr. Carroll, "I don't wish to invite disaster."

Whereupon he knuckled his desk for three good raps.

An even week later came the big fire in the South End lumber district. Now the Commissioner doesn't know whether to rap his desk again or "stand pat."

THAT notable organization of East Bostonians, the "Oogah Wahhha," seems to have passed out of existence. Time was when their annual banquet during the Winter season attracted attention all over the State and time was, too, when their rumpus outing made and unmade political candidates. Death has taken few of the original members. The club was limited to twenty-five and was made up of such well known Noddle Islanders as George Hood, John McCrystal, W. H. Ellis P. J. Kennedy, Frank Lally, Charles Belden, and W. J. Donovan. The organization knew how to entertain and the banquet was a distinct novelty, for it began at midnight and ended some hours after the sun had risen. Notable actors were numbered among the guests.

The Summer outings were usually held at Charles Heldon's farm at Dover, and the sports of the day, the dinner on the lawn under the big tent and the tally-ho ride were particular features. Now the gatherings are given no more.

WHAT I DID YESTERDAY

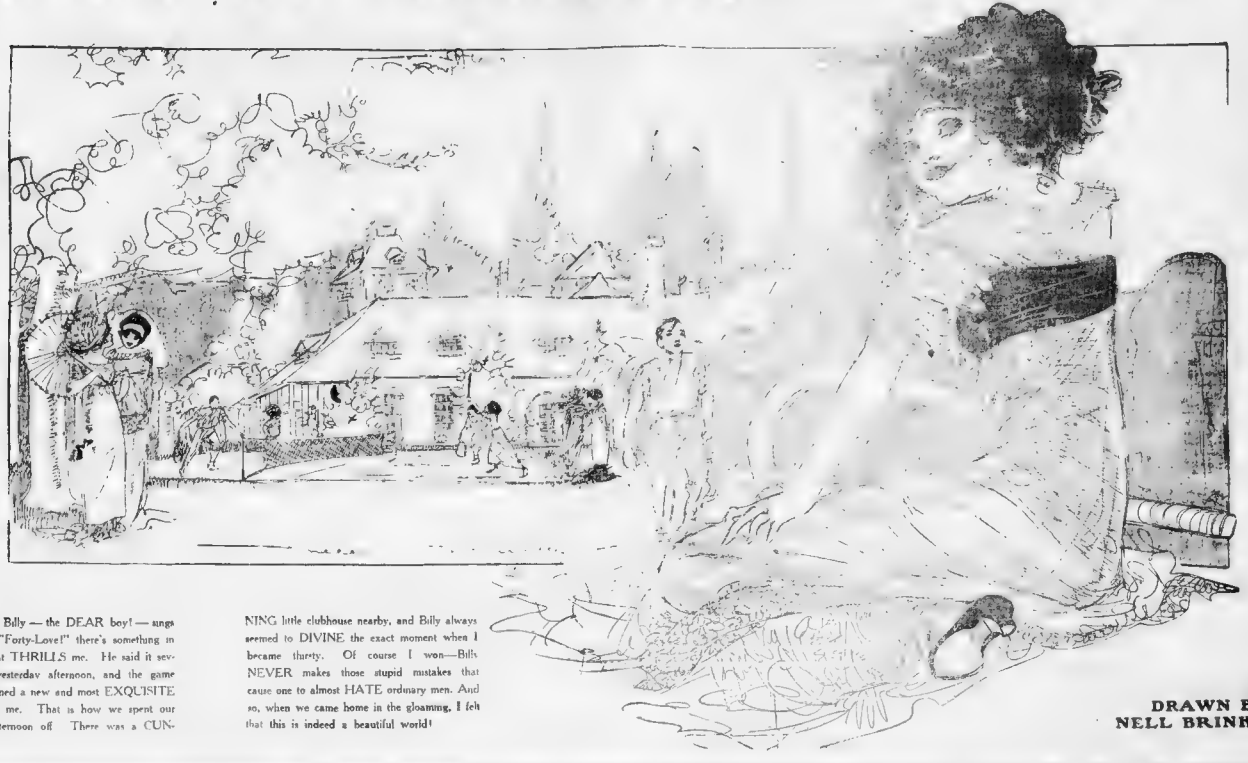
ON MY SATURDAY AFTERNOON OFF



WHEN Billy — the DEAR boy! — sings out "Forty-Love!" there's something in his voice that THRILLS me. He said it several times yesterday afternoon, and the game of tennis gained a new and most EXQUISITE meaning for me. That is how we spent our Saturday afternoon off. There was a CUNNING little clubhouse nearby, and Billy always seemed to DIVINE the exact moment when I became thirsty. Of course I won—Bills NEVER makes those stupid mistakes that cause one to almost HATE ordinary men. And so, when we came home in the gloaming, I felt that this is indeed a beautiful world!

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY.

SOME OF THE FUNNY THINGS THE LITTLE CHILDREN SAY

DICK knelt by his mother's side to and, putting his little hand together, said with great assurance:

"Now I lay me down to sleep.

I pray the Lord my soul to keep—

And then he paused, forgetting what to say next.

His mother prompted him, saying, "If"—

"If he hollers let him go.

* * *

ETHEL, on her first visit to a farm, was served with a bantam egg.

"I guess the hen that laid this egg was chased off the nest before she was finished," she remarked.

* * *

"OH mamma," exclaimed Willie as he rushed breathlessly into the house, "a great big brown bear chased me all the way home from school."

"Oh, Willie," said mamma reproachfully, "You mustn't tell mamma a story like that."

"But it isn't a story," said Willie vigorously, "and I was mos' scared to def', fear it would eat me up 'fore I got here."

Mrs. Brown walked to the window and caught a glimpse of the ferocious animal in question.

"Willie Brown," she said sternly, "go into the bedroom and kneel down and ask God to forgive you for telling your mother such an untruth."

Willie obeyed, and a few moments later came out smiling.

"Did you ask God to forgive you?" asked his mother.

"Yes, mamma, I did," and Willie bravely raised his truthful eye to her face, "and God said: 'Well, never you mind about that, Willie, I thought that big dog was a bear myself till I got another look at him.'"

* * *

BILLY, who had several small brothers, had been praying for a sister. At last the stork brought a little girl. He seemed delighted at first then he became thoughtful.

"Why, Willy," said his grandmother, "aren't you pleased with your baby sister?"

"No," replied the child, "because I know she'll run around in dresses for a while and then she'll turn into a boy anyway. All the others did."

* * *

DELBERT, after having searched in vain for the nickel he had given it up in despair and began to cry. Thereupon his brother Lloyd said:

"Don't cry, Delbert; you'll find it when you're not looking for it."

"Well, I ain't looking for it now, am I?" wailed Delbert in response.

* * *

EDWIN, aged four, owns a book in which is a picture of a fierce-looking cow chasing a boy. He looked long at it, then closed the book and put it away. A few days later he got it out and looked at the picture again. Bringing his chubby fist down on the cow, he exclaimed triumphantly:

"She ain't caught him yet!"

* * *

MY little neighbor proudly announced that she was studying fractions at school.

"Tell me, then, how much is one-half and one-quarter?" I asked, to puzzle him.

"Why, seventy-five cents, of course," he replied.

* * *

MRS. L. had often told Mamie, her four-year-old daughter, that she was never alone, because God was always with her. One day Mamie's mother was called from the room and left her for a longer time than she expected. When she came back she said, pityingly:

"Why, Mamie, have you been alone all this time? I thought some one would come in."

"Oh, I haven't been alone, mamma," answered Mamie, "because God has been with me; but," she added, "He's dreadful poor company."

* * *

"PLEASE, mamma," begged the youngster, can't I eat an awful lot so I can grow a long boy and wear tall pants?"

* * *

ONE evening as Willie was saying his prayers his sister Loretta began teasing him.

This made Willie angry, and he said:

"Please, Lord, excuse me while I whip Loretta."

* * *

"MAMMA," said little Marion, "do all the angles dress in white?"

"Yes, dear—in pure white," replied the mother.

"Then Mrs. God must have an awful big wash," said Marion.

* * *

WILLIE was the only child of rigid Scotch Presbyterians, and he had always been taught that the Presbyterian was the only church. One Summer, when they were staying at a seaside cottage, a lady was introducing at the table as Mrs. Church, of Pittsburg. Willie gazed at her as if fascinated, and then, no longer able to keep silent, he leaned excitedly across the table, and said.

"Say, are you the Presbyterian Church?"

* * *

HILDA, aged three, had never seen water with ice in it served until she happened to dine at a hotel one day.

"Oh, mamma," she exclaimed eagerly, as the waiter placed a glass upon the table, "I want the man to give me some of that water with bones in it."

* * *

A Sunday dinner a little fellow was picking the drumsticks of a chicken and swallowed one of the tendons. When, after much difficulty, it was removed from his throat, he looked up and said:

"Oh, mamma, it wasn't the chicken's fault; it was because the cook forgot to take the garters off.

* * *

JIMMY BLAKE has a stepfather, but the two are so fond of each other that few persons realize that they are not own father and son. A few days ago a new acquaintance of the youngster's, name, said to him:

"Why, I thought you were Mr Smith's little boy?"

"So I am," said Jimmy, stoutly.

"Then how does it happen that your name is Jimmy Blake?"

"Well, you see," explained Jimmy, "it's this way: My mother got married again before I did."

* * *

A LITTLE boy, while visiting his aunt in the country, was taking a walk around a small lake where there were cat tails growing.

"Aunt Kit," he said, "is dem frankfurters growing over there?"

* * *

INEZ and her mother were feeding out of the window when the letter-carrier came along, riding a bicycle.

"Why does that letter man ride a bicycle?" asked Inez.

"Because he is carrying a letter with a special delivery stamp, which must be delivered soon as possible," replied her mother.

"Well, if he had a telegram he would have to ride a motorcycle, wouldn't he?" said Inez.

* * *

FIVE-YEAR-OLD BETTY hates an apron worse than anything else on earth. The other day, as she was being buttoned into one of the hated garments her anger burst forth.

"Oh, mother," she cried, "I hate an apron for, anyway—to have a clean dress or hide a dirty one?"

* * *

A LITTLE GIRL was overheard talking to her doll, whose arm had come off, exposing the sawdust stuffing.

"You dear, good, obedient dolly; I know I have told you to chew your food fine, but I didn't think you would chew it as fine as that."

* * *

CHARLES was playing with a cat the other day an dhad been teasing and shaking it, when I said to him:

It you shake the cat so much you will kill it."

So he began to roll the cat over and pet it. When the cat commenced to purr, he ran to me and said:

"Ma, listen! I shook the cat so hard that its works are moving."

* * *

MY little daughter was staring at a window pouting over a whipping she had received for being naughty. Her eyes were fast on a bed of pansies which were drooping after a heavy shower. Suddenly she turned her head and said.

"Mamma, those pansies must have gotten a whipping, too; they are hiding their faces."

* * *

"JOHNNIE," said mamma, "if I were you I would not say the things that Willie tells you. He is not very bright."

"Oh, yes he is, mamma. He knows enough, but he can't think of it."

* * *

"THE baby's awful bald," said Mabel.

"Yes, they come bald on purpose, if they had hair they'd pull it all out and then all that hair would be wasted," said Tommy.

* * *

"If I wasn't a little gentleman I'd slap your face," he exclaimed.

* * *

"MAMMA, does potato's catch cold when they are cooked?" asked my little girl.

"Why, no, dear, why?"

"Then why did you tell Nellie to serve them with their jackets on?"

* * *

LAST Monday there was a cartoon in the paper of an old man sitting on a bench in the park. Overhead in the clouds there was a tableau of two soldiers going to war. Lloyd, aged five, looked at the picture a few minutes and then exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, look here! There was a parade up in heaven."

* * *

LITTLE RUTH was busily occupied with her slate and pencil. Presently she ran to her father, whose face at the time required the services of a barber, climbed upon his knee and rubbing her chubby little hand over his chin, said:

"Papa, can you sharpen slate pencils on that?"

* * *

"HOW would you like to be a minister when you grow up, Tommy?" asked an Episcopal clergyman of one of the little boys in his parish.

"Not for me," was the reply. "I'm tired of wearin' things that button up the back."

* * *

LITTLE GEORGE was out in the yard playing one day when a little baby sister arrived at his house. His aunt ran out into the yard and said:

"George, God has blessed you with a little sister."

"Wait till I tell mamma," said George.

* * *

BESSIE discovered a hole in her stocking. Later she was noticed looking around the floor. When asked why, she replied:

"I'm looking for the piece that fell out of my stocking."

* * *

"Ma, what is an Indian woman called?" he asked.

"Why, a squaw, my son," was the reply.

After some deliberation George startled us by saying

"Then an Indian baby must be a squawker."

* * *

"PAPA, you say Congress is in session when it is sitting, don't you?"

"Certainly, my boy."

"Well, then, would it be wrong for me to say that our old Plymouth Rock hen is now in session in the barn?"

* * *

MY little brother was bad one day, and mother said: "Bobby, my father used to whip me when I behaved like that."

"Well," said brother thoughtfully, "I hope I'll not have to tell my little boy that."

"EVER HEAR THIS ONE?" By Ada Lewis

TWO little terriers playing about a stage door stop frolicking when a large bloodhound strolls out. The white terrier says to the spotted one:

"Clarence won't notice me since he has been playing in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'"

MR. FLY comes home intoxicated. Mrs. Fly indignantly upbraids him.

"How dare you come home to me in this condition? I'm going to fly right back through the window to mother."

"I couldn't help it, dear. I fell into a glass of beer."

A MAN-ABOUT-TOWN dropped into a cheap restaurant.

"Bring me some bird's nest soup," he said.

"I'm sorry," answered the waiter, "but we haven't any bird's nest soup. But I can heat up the water them gold fish are swimming in in a jiffy."

A DELANCEY street mother sent one of her sons to court to hear the verdict against the other one. The lad rushed home, crying:

"He did, did he?" replied the mother. "Well, he had very little to do."

"Well, what do you expect, anyway?" said the manager. "Didn't I pay twenty cents for your laundry last week?"

"I know, but you have announced 'Romeo and Juliet' for this week, and I can't play Romeo with this beard."

MISS LEWIS.

A FRIEND of mine asked her colored maid if she had had an enjoyable time at her sister's wedding.

"Oh, yes, Miss! It was a perfect wedding—just like a white wedding. And the bridegroom gave the bride two of the loveliest cuspidors!"

SAID a minister to a roguish-eyed Irishman:

"My son, do you know what there is between me and heaven?"

"If you'd take off that high hat," the Irishman replied, "I could see."

A MAN, who owed six weeks' board to his landlady, looked seriously about her well furnished drawing room.

"I'd like to have all you've got," he sighed.

"Well, then, sir," she answered, waspishly, "you'd have relation."

A MAN rushed out of his hotel, crying:

"I've nothing left to live for. I'm going to commit suicide."

The hotel proprietor went for a friend of the man and told him of the threat.

"Oh," said the friend, "he won't do it—you never could depend upon him."

"BEAUTY ALL AROUND US; ONCE A DAY IT BLOOMS IN A PARADE THAT DISCOUNTS EASTER ON BOYLSTON STREET."

See the Daily Lunch Hour Beauty Parade That Is Making the Footlight "Flossies" Sit Up!

FLOSSY and I have had words. There's a coolness between us. I've ceased speaking to my chauffeur to wait for her with the car at the stage door. Perhaps she takes a trolley home to her apartment after the show—I'm sure I don't know.

The fact is, Flossy flew into a rage at my enthusiasm when I told her of my wonderful discovery—my amazing discovery that you don't have to go to a burlesque show, or a big musical comedy, to regale yourself with a feast of beauty. No, indeed not. During the business lunch hour Boston provides a free beauty show—youth, charming faces, dainty costumes, kay spirits and gentle manners—that stretches from Copley Square clear to the North Station.

Why, my dear," I said to Flossy, "on any day of the week, between the hours of noon and 1 p. m., I could pick out fifty of these delightful, fresh and blooming young creatures that would make any musical comedy chorus look li-e"——

And then Flossy broke loose! She called me a "front row codger with an electric knob!" A doddering Johnny with a wad of yellow-backs for his only recommendation!" Me! G Algernon Wynkoop, of the Westchester Wynaoops—and then she flounced out of the restaurant, and I suppose I shall never see her again.

It serves me right for having been so blind. You see, my increasing weight keeps me mostly on the golf links. For a year or two I've seldom come into town except to dine at the club and take in a show afterward.

My awakening was due to the simple fact that, my secretary being ill, I had to run in personally on my bankers to clip some coupons.

My chauffeur waited with the car at the door. But when I came out of the bank it was quite useless for Alphonse to hold up his inquiring finger. My spellbound gaze was on something quite different—a trio of charmers the mere sight of whom was enough to blot out the whole porspective of Boylston street.

They had emerged from the next entrance—a tall office building—and were chatting lightly in perfectly wellbred tones. Yet I knew at once that they were no young women in my own social set, down in that section on some errand of business like that which had brought me so far out of my customary surroundings.

Their manner was too quiet and reserved for that of "show girls" on a visit to their stock broker. Besides, there was no motor car or taxicab waiting at the curb. I had heard that girls are now much employed as stenographers and so forth in business offices. But it never occurred to me, as I followed them with admiring eyes, that these three daintily dressed, gentle-mannered, genuine beauties could be working girls!

Can you wonder at my falnty when I tell you that the one in the centre wore a bubble gown of the most correct design, which showed three inches of harmoniously-tinted silk hose above the dainty suede ties?

Presently the trio turned into a neat-looking dairy lunch room a few doors from where Alphonse waited with my car. Just as naturally as though I had done that sort of thing every day of my life. I followed—walked into a dairy lunch room, seated myself at a table and inspected the menu card!

Over the cards top I made sure that my trio of beauties were safely seated only one table distant.

THE MANICURE GIRL.

THE TYPEWRITER GIRL.

There was a rustle of feminine draperies, and something brushed my arm. I knew it was a waitress, and without withdrawing my disc et gaze from my beauty trio I said curtly:

"Bring whatever you've got—anything at all."

"I beg your pardon, sir?"

The voice was so low, and the accent so cultivated, that I looked up with a muttered apology.

Well! Believe me or not, my waitress, for general feminine loveliness, was a match for any one of my prize trio!

"I beg your pardon," I said.

She merely nodded slightly, gave me a serene glance from her clear, brown eyes, and waited for my order.

"If it is not too much trouble," I hesitated, "I would like remembering that I was in a dairy lunch room for the first time in my life) peaches and cream and a glass of milk."

What on earth would I do with that milk when it came! It was her own delicious complexion that gave me the idea of peaches and cream.

In the meantime my beauty trio, one table away, were chatting animatedly. The tones were low but their enunciation so perfect that I could catch every word. ("What a loss to the stage!" I exclaimed to my thoughts.) They were discussing the hobble gown, and the wearer's name seemed to be Emily.

"Ordinarly," she was saying, "of course I wouldn't wear it to the office, but John and I are to dine at Nantasket to-night, and I knew it would take me all day to type copies of the contract he dictated yesterday afternoon."

You could have bowled me over with a feather! Emily, chief beauty of the trio, hobble gown and all, was only a stenographer! Now she was adding, a bit anxiously:

"Do you, Edna or Madge, think it bad taste for me to show myself this way in the office?"

"Not when you're engaged to marry the junior partner," laughed Edna. "Besides, I can reassure you, I had hardly sat down at my switchboard this morning when your John called up the Palm Garden and ordered a dinner for a royal princess. I wondered why he was so particular about it, but the minute I saw you in that sweet creation I knew just how John felt."

What! And this delicious creature Edna, was merely the girl at the office switchboard! But a bigger surprise was coming. Madge was laughing quietly to herself.

"Don't keep it to yourself, Madge," said Emily. "Do you mean that John found time this morning to pay you a professional call?"

"Yes, dear," smiled Madge. "And all the time I was doing his nails he was raving about you. He said you had the most exquisite taste in dress of any girl in Boston."

Well, really! This Madge was also a charming, sedate working girl — and a manicurist!

I was so amazed—yes, and pleased, too—that I absentmindedly drank the whole of the glass of milk the pretty waitress had brought. Funny—it didn't seem to leave a bad taste, either!

The pretty waitress gave me most respectful and unobtrusive attention to my wants. But her attitude was most delicately, yet emphatically, impersonal. I was one out of many men who had to be fed. In spite of her apron she was not a maid, to be ordered about, or chaffed, or cajoled, but an extraordinary pretty young business woman attending strictly to business.

I noticed that neither she nor my beauty trio—nor any young woman in the restaurant, waitress or customer—was subjected to the slightest familiarity in the speech or manner of the men patrons, among whom were lawyers, brokers and financiers whose names appear daily in the newspapers. Besides a bow and a smile, serenely acknowledged, there was no evidence of persoal relations of any kind, business or social, but a sort of frank acknowledgment of perfect equality and independence.

My beauty trio finished their luncheon and departed. The bill which my waitress placed beside my plate contained a request to "please pay the cashier." The thought of "tipping" the charming and lady-like creature who had served me brought afluah of heat to my face. But my bump of common sense prevailed. I laid a silver quarter on the table.

"Thank you," she said simply, but with a smile of frank good-will—and she handed me my hat and stick!

"VENUS," THE BOSTON SALES GIRL.

The business lunch hour was not yet over. When I emerged from the restaurant the [illegible] was a bloom with pretty girls, nearly all of them daintily dressed and not one but would have added lustre to the chorus of any musical show in Boston. Yes, I even picked out a superb prima donna, and a dainty soubrette, who, if a bit [illegible] would take Flossie's eye!

"Alphonse," I remarked to my chauffeur, who seemed doubtful regarding my sanity, "Alphonse, up Tremont street, but slowly."

My anticipations were more than realized. Not one break in the lunch hour beauty show. Occasional glimpses of Washington street through the cross streets furnished the same cheering assurance here in Boston there is beauty all around us, regularly once a day it blooms in a parade that discounts Easter on Boylston street, and really beauty-bankrupts the poor, blind, "front row electric knobs," as Flossy calls us!

The charming units of this free beauty spectacle are of all conceivable types: stately brunette, petite blonde, and vice versa; Titian-tressed with dark eyebrows, and terra cotta with complexions like cream; delicious round faces with tilted noses; oval faces with noses that are pure Greek; olive tinted faces with little, pointed chins, with large eyes and lips of deep carmine; strong faces with large, round chins and indomitable noses, that are yet strikingly handsome. After their luncheon they stroll along by twos and threes; they treat each other at the soda fountains; they drop into candy shops for boxes of chocolates; they congregate in front of hat emporiums' shops and discuss the window displays of shirts, collar and cravat, with side remarks about the preferences of "Tom" or "George" or "Arthur." Thus they amuse themselves frankly, but without loud laughter or with manners that are in the slightest degree obtrusive. They do nothing that distracts you from the joy of discreetly analyzing their charms.

Even that extremely commercial stretch of Washington street from Boylston to School street provides constant glimpses of the Boston Beauty Show. Here the saleslady type predominates and "beauty is still abundantly evident. Speaking of saleslady—

My chauffeur sets me down well along Washington street—Beauty Show still on! I go in. I am directed to the hosiery counter. And I find myself face to face with the Venus di Milo.

She is behind the counter, and quite properly attired—yet her identity is unmistakable. I ask for six pairs—for Flossy (you see we haven't had those words yet)—and Venus puts them up, takes the name and address, gets my change—and then is released by Diana (evidently countermate), who says:

So the Beauty Show outside is not yet over. I request Alphonse to drive slowly, along up Washington.

Ah, the influence of the theatre district! Upper Washington street shows a well-defined variation in the free beauty parade. Here you can hardly distinguish the Flossies of burlesque and musical comedy from the Emilies, Madges and Ednas of business life. The smell of the stage is in the air of upper Washington, and its spirit dominates the aspect of all the beauty paraders.

How blind I have been!

Yes, assuredly. But I am blind no longer. Hereafter I shall not neglect Boston's free Beauty Show. I shall respect my long-closed office down town—where I shall be found daily from noon until 2 p. m—except during the business lunch hour!

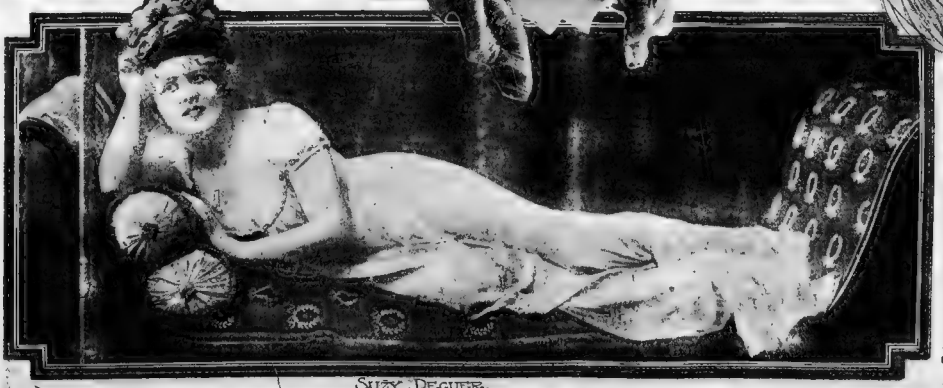
MDLLE MEYAN



SUZY DEGUER

THE principal industry of Paris is the production of professional beauties.

Incidentally they are actresses. All Paris watches them, admires them and criticises them as they make their appearance on the stage, on the boulevards or in the Bois de Boulogne.

Every year sees a new crop. Almost every month sees one conspicuous new beauty. The latest additions to the ranks of the great beauties are Suzy Deguer, Yvette de Beaumont, Marguerite Bresil and Miles. Meyan and Robinne, who prefer not to use their Christian names.

Suzy Deguer is not only a fascinating beauty and a very clever dancer, but also a very earnest Christian Scientist. She attends readings regularly in Paris, and says that her new faith helps her wonderfully to triumph over the difficulties of her calling.

Mlle. Meyan, who is a very youthful beauty, is especially admired by the artists and students of Paris, for she was once a foundling in the Latin Quarter.

Would You Want to be Married Like This?

Here Are Miss Baker and Mr. Morse Being Married on Horseback, and on the Right Their First Rapturous Nuptial Kiss

But some girls are constituted otherwise. They like to be "different," and would no more think of going into matrimony via the altar than they would consent to wear the latest modes ordained by arbitrary fashion.

Of such a type is Evelyn Baker, the beautiful Los Angeles girl who, a few weeks ago, was the central figure in the most unusual wedding ceremony ever performed on the Western coast. Bride, bridegroom, minister, maid of honor, flower girls, best man and three hundred guests were all on horseback, attired in cowboy or cowgirl garb, and the wedding took place in the beautiful canyon north of Griffith Park, with the blue Western sky serving as the cathedral dome. The Golden West in its early days saw many a picturesque nuptial ceremony, but the Baker-Morse affair will long be remembered as the most novel wedding ever witnessed there.

Miss Baker and her groom, George R. Morse, were both enthusiastic equestrians, and belonged to the exclusive Out West Riding Club. From the moment their engagement was announced the horsy set of southern California had lived in a state of suspense, wondering what Miss Baker's fertile brain would conceive in the way of a novel wedding, for every one who knew anything at all about her was convinced that she would never be satisfied to be married in the conventional way. They were not disappointed.

The bride and groom rode with an escort of cowboys, the groom on a velvet black horse, the bride on a pinto, a calico, with two great blue eyes. The horses were gayly caparisoned. Three hundred horsemen and horsewomen, members of the Out West Riding Club, attended the wedding. The men were attired in soft gray shirts, with corn-colored neckerchiefs, buckskin riding breeches, silver spurs and plaited quirts.

The riders formed in a great half circle, which was fully a quarter of a mile from end to end. A. P. Richardson, president of the club, rode his horse to the centre, accompanied by the minister, the Rev. John Munro, who was attired in regulation cowboy rig.

The Race for the Bride Who Married on a Boat

When it was over, the bride and bridegroom remounted and started on their horseback honeymoon at breakneck pace, followed closely by the happy guests. When the time for parting came, the happy couple were nearly buried under an avalanche of rice which the riders hurled at them. It was dusk when they finally got away, and a glorious sunset made a most picturesque setting for the invigorating ocean as the pair cantered away.

Even more unusual, perhaps, were the courtship, marriage and honeymoon of Miss Ada Delmore, of Pittsfield, Mass. They were all literally "up in the air." Some months ago Miss Delmore, young and pretty, was out motoring in the Berkshires, when she observed a huge balloon descending so rapidly about a mile away that she was positive a catastrophe was about to occur. There wasn't a soul within five miles, as far as she knew, and she realized at once that if the falling aeronaut should require help she alone could give it.

She let out her machine and covered the distance between her and the falling balloon in record-breaking time, and was only fifty feet away when the collapsed bag fell with a crash to the earth. Getting out of her auto, she ran up to the basket, from which the aeronaut, Mr. James G. Perlett, a handsome young fellow, was endeavoring to extricate himself. The young woman saw that he was injured. His left arm hung limp and blood was streaming from his head. Although the unfortunate aeronaut declared that he wasn't hurt very much, Miss Delmore insisted upon his entering her car, and she drove him as fast as the machine could go to the nearest doctor.

This chance meeting ripened into a very close friendship, in the course of which Miss Delmore frequently made ascents in young Perlett's balloon. Needless to say, the young man's attention was not entirely confined to the valve ropes in these ascensions, and within three months the engagement of the young couple was announced.

Miss Delmore was one of those girls who care very little what others do, and, although (perhaps, even because) her relatives and friends were shocked when she announced her intention of being married in young Perlett's balloon, she determined to carry out her purpose.

"I met Jimmy in his balloon, he courted and won me in his balloon and we'll be married in his balloon," she declared, and she was. Not only did the ceremony take place in the air, but the honeymoon which followed was likewise "in the balloon."

The only trouble about it," he said, sorrowfully, will be that we'll have to descend again to let the minister out." The idea of having to "come to earth" after the marriage, even for a few moments, didn't appeal to either of the ardent lovers, and it was finally decided to obviate any such necessity by providing a separate balloon for the minister from which he could read the marriage lines by megaphone and get the bridal pair's responses in the same manner.

And that is how the marriage was celebrated. No sooner was the service over than the obliging minister opened his valve and descended rapidly to the earth, while the proud and happy groom threw over ballast and soaring merrily into the skies." The service was performed at an elevation of about 2,000 feet over the beautiful Berkshire Hills. The balloon honeymoon lasted ten days, during which the balloonists covered over 600 miles, descending every day or so for provisions and such other things as they found necessary. "A honeymoon on a yacht or in a motor car may be all right, but in the clouds for mine," declared the plucky bride when she finally came down, and any one who has experienced a trip in a balloon will be ready to admit that, in many respects, at any rate, it cannot be excelled.

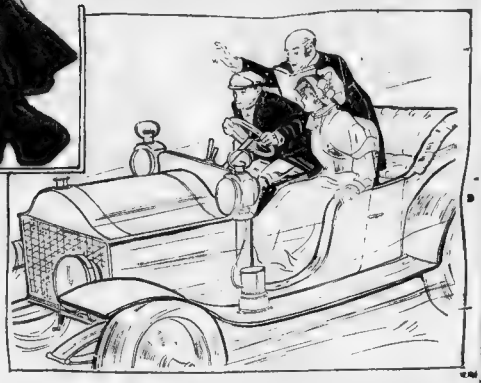
Sometimes, however, out-of-the-way weddings are practically forced on girls even where the more conventional mode would be preferred. Parental objection sometimes forces love to "find a way," and the way that is discovered is not always of an easy description.

When Miss Constance Wildwood married Edward Jameson, of Detroit, Mich., a few weeks ago, the circumstances were such that an altar and orange blossoms were entirely out of the question. It was a case of "catch-as-catch-can" marrying, and it was very exciting while it lasted.

For reasons which it is unnecessary to enlarge upon, Mr. Wildwood objected to his daughter's proposed marriage to young Jameson. "They will never marry, if I can prevent it," he declared, and those who knew his determined nature began to pity young Jameson. Constance was well watched and, as an extra precaution, all of the ministers within the vicinity were notified by the father that he was most emphatically opposed to his daughter's marriage to Ned Jameson.

One evening Ned called at the Wildwood home in an auto and gave a prearranged signal. The front door suddenly opened and out of it came Constance, dashing at full speed, with a suit case in one hand and a prayer book in the other.' Behind came her father, who had had a premonition that something was coming off and had kept a pretty strict watch on his daughter's room. Ned opened his car door, leaned over, seized his ideal and started off at top speed, without even stopping to close the door or to say good-by to his prospective father-in-law, who stood on the curb shaking his fist in the air in silent rage.

"He read the marriage lines while the car was going sixty miles an hour'



Before they had been gone half an hour they heard the "ching-ching" of a powerful machine in the distance, and they knew that they were pursued. Jameson had a fifty horse-power car, and he wasn't very much afraid of being overtaken, but he was wondering whether he would be able to get a big enough lead to enable him to stop off at a rectory and get married. Fortune seemed to favor him, however, for while turning a corner in a village through which he was passing at somewhat reduced speed, he caught sight of a man dressed in clerical garb walking slowly toward him. On the spur of the moment he decided to make a bold move; he would kidnap the minister. Bringing his car almost to a stop as he reached the minister, he called to him, and as the unsuspecting reverend approached he yanked him into the car and started off again at top speed. In the meantime, Wildwood had been making rapid progress, and was now only a quarter of a mile behind. Rapidly explaining to the minister as much of the situation as he thought prudent, without alluding to the father in pursuit, Ned requested the minister to perform the marriage ceremony in the car, and pretty Miss Constance added her tearful entreaties, too. The united appeal was too strong to resist, and the confused clergyman somewhat reluctantly read the marriage lines, while the car continued at a speed varying from forty-five to sixty miles an hour.

The ceremony concluded, young Jameson put the minister down, and again hit up the pace. Although he was now no longer afraid to allow his father-in-law to overtake him, he determined to keep up the pursuit race as long as he could. Whether the father had witnessed the peculiar marriage ceremony taking place in the car he was pursuing is not known, but shortly after it had taken place, he suddenly gave up the chase, and the young couple were no longer molested. That night, they called up the father's house on the long distance 'phone and received the parental blessing.

A somewhat similar experience was reported a few months ago when young Bernard Sholes eloped with Miss Fanny Blighton, of Gloucester, Mass., by means of a schooner yacht and was pursued by the bride's disgruntled father. Young Sholes had the foresight to take a minister along with him before he weighed anchor, and he was therefore not very much concerned when he realized that he was being pursued by his prospective father-in-law in another vessel.

When the ceremony was over, young Sholes had the effrontery to announce the fact to his pursuer by means of the flag signal system, and he was happy, indeed, when his bride's father bestowed his blessing on the young couple in similar fashion.

Little Victims of Society's Divorce Habit Who Never Can Tell Over Night Who Their New Papa and Mamma May Be.

A New Photograph of Little Helen Gould, Who Has Had Two New Fathers and Mothers in a Half Year.

Mrs. Reginald Ronalds, the Famous Society Beauty, Who Has Just Sued for Divorce.

Poor Baby Ronalds, Who Has Lost a Father.

FASHIONABLE society is the graveyard of domestic happiness. Not in any other class of the community, as Nearly every divorce deprives some child of either or mother, or confuses its ideas of parental duties to a painful point.

The child is adjudged to the mother, and goes to live with her. Then the father goes to see his father once a month or so, as if he were a natural curiosity. What kind of little thing would be that father and mother begot?

The court listens to every complaint of dissatisfied husbands and wives, but never to the innocent children.

Given the child in society whose parents are not divorced is sure to know several children whose parents are in that state. So even the more fortunate child grows up with a curiously warped and sophisticated idea of parenthood, quite different from the normal.

The little waif of the divorce courts never sees father and mother bending over his pillow, united in loving thought for his future.

The American struggle for money and social position, attended with tragedies of childhood sadder than the death of the little princes in the Tower of London, and of the poor young Dauphin of France in the eighteenth century. They are long drawn out, agonizing tragedies of loveless and neglected youth.

The list of these ill-starred children is a very, very long one. By actual count there are more girls than boys on the roster; more girls who will be their parents' judges. Are these children of to-day predestined to provide unhappiness for their offspring?

The three sons of Anna Gould Castellane and Count Boni Castellane—Boni, George and Jay—were known to their mother when her divorce was granted. This divorce and the spectacular courtship of the Prince de Sagan—now Duke de Talleyrand-Perigord—is known the world over. They were more than a nine days' wonder. There is a third child of tragedy in that family now, the son born to the Duchess about a year ago. This child could not be born in the famous ancestral halls of the de Sagan family, because the creditors who were in possession of the duchy refused admittance to the Princess.

Since the divorce was granted, and more especially since the Prince de Sagan married the former Countess, the three Castellane boys have been the center of many law suits. Anna Gould lamented a short time ago that she dreaded the coming of the next boy, because she so feared annoyment of a new suit against her.

These grandsons of old Jay Gould have seen much of life. They accompanied their mother and the Prince de Sagan on that historic flight from America, and through Europe, which ended in the marriage ceremony.

There is little of the American boy in their make-up. They already fence with marvelous dexterity; they ride in the Bois de Boulogne as becomes gentlemen of France; they dance exquisitely and their manners would put a Lord Chesterfield to shame.

Perhaps no children of to-day have called forth greater interest and sympathy than the little daughters, Helen and Dorothy, of the former Frank Gould.

When the parents, young, heedless, children of fortune themselves, reached the final parting of the ways, the little girls were four and five years of age tiny blonde replicas of their pretty mother. The day the divorce was granted, the mother with her two "jewels" was the cynosure of all eyes at the garden fete held on the Lenox library field for the benefit of unfortunate orphan boys. The children brought wonderful baskets of flowers and many children toys to help the cause along, and then they were spirited away. Probably not in the records of any divorce suit will be found such minute directions for the care of any children as were given in this instance. Every minute of the children's life is planned for. The parents divide the care exactly half and half.

The mental state of small children, not old enough to reason, whose lives are disrupted every few months must stagger a professional alienist.

A phase of this tragedy occurred last Winter under the public eye, and oh, the sadness it brought to parents who watched the scene. Mrs. Gould, with the children and governess, occupied a box at one of the theatres. She took the children there early in the first act. They all chatted happily together until the curtain fell, then the mother hurriedly clasped the girlies to her, kissed them many times and literally ran from the box.

In a minute's time, a slender, dark-eyed man hurried in. The children cast themselves upon him crying, "Oh, papa, I'd you meet mamma!" Jay hugged and kissed him many times and Mr. Gould seemed so happy to renew the ties of those in the audience. The pity is the boy was far more interesting than that on the stage. The children and their father had a happy visit together and then he, too, went out, leaving them to the governess who was commissioned to take them after the play to begin their prescribed visit with the father.

Miss Helen Gould, "Aunt Helen" herself a daughter of tragedy, has offered to assume the care of the children after the marriages. The former Mrs. Frank Gould, the present Mrs. Ralph Thomas, has not consented to this, as she proves that she loves her children very much. And so the future of little Helen and Dorothy is uncertain.

Young Willie Vanderbilt is the son of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Elsie French Vanderbilt. He was very young when his mother secured her divorce and ten millions to boot. The money is for the boy. He was christened William Henry Vanderbilt in honor of his grandfather. Since the divorce Mrs. Vanderbilt registers herself as Mrs. French Vanderbilt, and young Willie as Master French Vanderbilt. No special provisions were laid down by the judge for Willie's visits to his father. Last year he spent a month at Oak and Farms, and it is quite generally understood that the beautiful farm, planned by the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, will go to Willie, no matter whatever the future may bring forth.

Dame Rumor insists that it is but a question of time when Alfred Gwynne will marry Mrs. Smith McKim, who obtained a Reno divorce recently.

That Mrs. French Vanderbilt will marry again is a foregone conclusion. Society is still betting on the winner. Young Willie will have a strictly American up-bringing. He is to go to Groton and then to Yale. He already shows a bent for mechanics, and when he was five years old had a most complete railroad equipment, the tracks being laid on the tan bark in his father's famous riding ring at the Farms.

Another set of William H. Vanderbilt's great grandchildren are on the tragic list. It is a matter of common knowledge that Willie K. Vanderbilt and his handsome wife have been separated for more than a year. A divorce is not imminent, but if the young people do become reconciled it will be because of the two little girls, one eight and the other seven years of age. Mrs. Vanderbilt is at present abroad with her daughters.

More than one case seems to show that the divorce habit becomes hereditary in a family. One of the most famous cases that ever stirred New York's highest society was that in which Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton, daughter of the great Mrs. Astor, was the central figure.

Mrs. Coleman Drayton obtained a divorce from her husband because he delayed so long seeking it, but the court would not give her the custody of her two children. Afterward she married G. Ogilvie Haig, an Englishman, and went to live in England permanently.

A few years ago her young son, Henry Coleman Drayton, married a New York girl, Miss Constance Knower. Within two years she obtained a divorce from him.

The children of Lawrence C. Phipps, of the great Pittsburg steel family, and his wife, Mrs. Annie Chandler Phipps, have been an oft-told tale of parental rancor. To them the first duty of parents appears to be keeping up a lively warfare over the scrap.

For four years, both before and after Mr. Phipps secured a divorce, he and his wife kept up fierce struggle for the children. After they first separated she took them. Then he obtained a temporary order of court for their custody.

Then came the divorce and an order that the children should spend six months with each parent. While Mrs. Phipps was staying at the Hotel Netherland in New York, her ex-husband kidnaped the children and carried them off in an automobile. All the authorities ordered him to return them. He offered Mrs. Phipps $50,000 for the permanent society of the children. She haughtily spurned the offer. A crazy woman named Mrs. Read became so excited by the contest that she threatened to dynamite Mrs. Phipps.

It is years since Mrs. Perry Belmont was separated from her children. She was formerly Mrs. Henry Sloane, and after the divorce the children remained with their father. They have grown up in New York society practically strangers to their mother. She lives in Washington.

Four years ago fashionable New York and Washington flocked to Erie, Pennsylvania, to see Thora Strong, the only daughter of the Charles Strongs become the bride of Reginald Lothrop Ronalds. Miss Strong was heiress to the many millions left by her grandfather. Her cousin, Mathilde Townsend, who married Percy Goelet Clarry last June, was bridesmaid of honor. It was a gorgeously bright day, and all signs pointed to happiness.

Henry Ronalds's mother and father had not lived together for many years—at least twenty; another sign that this evil is inherited. A year after the wedding ceremony a baby girl was born. When she was christened Thora Strong Ronalds a large and splendid reception was held. Mrs. Ronalds mere came from England for the first time in twenty years to attend the function, and sweet bells were never more in tune. Shortly after the second birthday of this little heiress Mr. Ronalds left his home and installed himself at the Brook Club. Mrs. Ronalds closed her house and went to the Plaza, where her baby had been born, and where her own first happy year had been spent.

Efforts to reconcile the two failed. A month ago Mrs. Ronalds returned to her girlhood home with her little three-year-old girl, and Reggie went to London to stay with Mrs. Ronalds senior. So little Thora is now without a father.

There are other little waifs of the "400" and wealthy society besides those who have been made so by divorce. Death has bereaved an unusually large number of children of the rich, so that although they are heirs to millions they must pass their childhood without that blessing, which most tenement-house children enjoy—the love of parents.

Seven years ago a notable wedding occurred in Philadelphia. It was a violet wedding, defying the world-old superstition that violets for weddings were sure to bring misfortunes. Violet Whelen, the only daughter of the Charles Whelens of Philadelphia, married Charles Greenough of Boston. Mrs. Whelen had been Miss Violett, of New Orleans, a sister of Atwood Violett, now of New York. The violet wedding was a charming event. The bridesmaids—who insisted on being the bride's cousin, Miss Violet [illegible] afterward became Mrs. Robert Winsor Child—wore violet gowns and carried big bouquets of the lovely flowers.

They started on their wedding trip to the Pacific coast in great happiness. Six weeks later Mrs. Greenough returned to Philadelphia a widow. Mr. Greenough had contracted appendicitis and had died under the operation.

A few months later the broken-hearted widow, less than twenty years old, died leaving a baby girl who bears the name of Violet.

Philadelphia adds another name to this list of tragedies. A very well known young financier and clubman, Edward Moore Robinson, Jr., married some fifteen years ago, a notably beautiful girl from the South West. The girl, Miss Allene Ivers, had been introduced to New York and Philadelphia by Mrs. Claus Spreckels. The lovely Westerner made a great hit and when she became engaged to "Teddy" Robinson every one envied him. They were very happy together. They had a lovely country place just out of Philadelphia and spent their Summers in Newport. They had one son, Teddy, Junior.

Early in the Spring, Mrs. Robinson died suddenly and within a week Mr. Robinson, who had been ill for some weeks, died. He did not recover from the shock of his wife's death. Thus the boy Teddy is left an orphan. He recently celebrated his twelfth birthday.

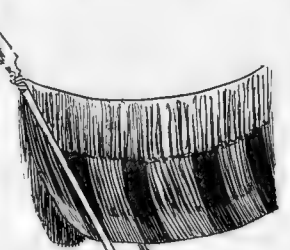
WON SHEBA'S THRONE ON HER HUSBANDS' HEADS

How the Barbaric Empress Taitou of Abyssinia—Born a Slave—Murdered Ten Mates Progressively to Rule as Menelik's Wife Over the People of Solomon's Dusky Queen.

The Empress Taitou of Abyssinia—"Her forehead is broad and well formed, her lips full and sensual, her eyes brilliant and imperious."



"From being a soldier's slave, beaten like a dog, running after the army in bare feet, Taitou mounted by a stairway of ten successive husbands' skulls to the throne of Abyssinia."

By Gaston Taillefer.

THE most masterful rulers of mankind have been women. Semiramis, the greatest queen of the ancient East, was an example. Theodora, who shared the government with Justinian, the wisest emperor of Byzantium, was another. Then there was Elizabeth of England, and Catherine the Great, of Russia, not to mention many others. In more recent times the Dowager Empress, Tsi-An of China was a brilliant illustration of the rule.

At this moment the Empress Taitou, of Abyssinia holds the foremost position in this class. She rules over a semi-savage land noted for the fierce masculine virtue of its men, the only African land that has decisively beaten a European army.

It is curious, to say, that these women, who have risen to supreme power and fame, have risen from the gutter and the hardest of lives. The Empress Theodora was an actress and courtesan and had been treated like a dog before she married Justinian. Catherine the Great was a common soldier's mate before she married Peter the Great, and the Empress Taitou had also been a common soldier's wife before she married the ruler of Abyssinia.

What distinguishes Taitou, actually, is that she has had eleven husbands and that, as she rose in greatness and capacity, she removed ten of them successively from a world where they had become superfluous.

From being a soldier's slave, beaten like a dog running after the army in bare feet, Taitou has mounted on a stairway of ten successive husbands' skulls to the throne of Abyssinia.

She has breathed an atmosphere of blood and intrigue since her infancy. Not content with her husbands' heads it is rumored that she has bathed in children's blood to preserve her youth and beauty.

When Taitou was a girl of sixteen she was married to an Abyssinian chief named Ilmo and came to enter into a conspiracy against Emperor Theodore of Abyssinia, who was very justly hated. She was his favorite. The conspirators planned to put poison in his wine. The conspiracy was discovered. Her husband and the rest of the conspirators were fed to the lions, a time-honored way of disposing of political prisoners in Abyssinia.

The Emperor ordered not to shed the blood of a beautiful girl. He ordered Taitou to be married by force to a common soldier with instructions to this man to keep her proud spirit in subjection.

The soldier flogged her thoroughly about every other day and gave her plenty of kicks between times. She had to run along with the other wives in the rear of the army. It is their duty to attend to the feeding of the army. She ran with bare feet behind the soldiers, carrying on her back a pitcher of hydromel, called "tedj," or beer (tella) held by a thong passed over the forehead and round the bust. She climbed over the mountains at a trot, scratched herself with mimosa thorns, pounded the doura flour, baked the bread and the berberi sauce with which the Abyssinians season their raw meat, and slept on the ground.

This treatment made her hard and strong and taught her to appreciate men at their true value.

Taitou was then a slender, splendidly built young woman. She had hardly a drop of negro blood. Her forehead was broad and well formed, her lips full and sensual, her eyes brilliant and imperious. She presents a very similar appearance to-day, except that she has greatly increased in weight.

The Abyssinians were constantly fighting among themselves at that time. The country is divided into minor kingdoms, the Emperor being the "Negus Negust," or King of Kings."

War assisted Taitou's ambition. Her husband was killed in battle. Report had it that Taitou assisted him on his last journey by a knife in the back during the confusion of battle, when everybody was looking out for himself.

She found herself a prisoner of war without a husband. She yearned for one. The commanding general of the victorious side rolls his eye over the female prisoners to decide what he should do with them. Some for the men. Some for the lions. A beautiful girl broke from the prisoners and fell at his feet in a telling attitude.

Soon afterward he married her. He tried to tame her spirit by severe floggings, but he succumbed with a knife in his heart. That was husband No. 2.

She heard that the Ras Mogolo was a generous chief, who appreciated beauty. One day his slaves told him that a beautiful beggar girl was at his palace gate. He ordered her brought in and a month later married her.

A neighboring chief, the Ras Mentara, desired his land and wealth. Mentara entered into communication with Taitou. His soldiers entered Mogolo's house at night with the assistance of Taitou and killed him in his bed. Taitou married Mentara and ruled over the joint possessions of her last and present husband.

This pair were well mated, but their happiness was marred when the King of Tigre invaded the lands of Mentara and got the best of him. Mentara held out desperately in his mountain stronghold. Tackel Gheorghis, the general of the King of Tigre, who was besieging him, urged him to surrender. Taitou offered to assist the besieging general on the promise of freedom and wealth for herself.

While the obstinate Mentara was saying his prayers, Taitou removed his head with his own sword and then surrendered to the enemy.

General Tackel Gheorghis could not resist the impulse to marry the beautiful and fascinating Taitou. During their brief married life she urged him to seize the kingdom of his master. His plotting was discovered and he was executed. His widow laid her plans to marry the King, but he discovered her share in her husband's plot and turned against her.

She fled to the province of Ectou, and when the Governor had seen her upon a beautifully caparisoned white mule, he could do no less than marry her. As usual, she led her husband into a plot, and for this he was arrested and beheaded by the Emperor John. So passed No. 7.

By this time her matrimonial misfortunes were so well known that even the most ardent chiefs hesitated to marry her. She was now very wealthy, possessed many hundred of thousands of dollars in gold and jewels, which she kept with her, guarded by giant slaves. The thought occurred to her that a rest from matrimony might be pleasant. She became a nun in the Convent of Debra Meni.

The world of war and politics soon called to her again. She obtained a dispensation from her vows from the Patriarch or Alcounah, of Abyssinia, in order to marry a money lender from Gondar, who soon died with symptoms of poisoning.

She built herself a beautiful palace in the province of Shoe then ruled by Menelik. She acquired her ninth husband in the person of a general of King Menelik named Abeba. She encouraged him to instigate against the King, but Menelik was too clever to be fooled. He discovered the husband's plot and beheaded him.

Royal money then appeared desirable to Taitou. She married a man named Zaccaraggian, whose great merit was his wealth. They disagreed severely. Taitou left him on the time-honored pretext that she wished to pay a visit to her mother. She carried with her a considerable portion of her husband's wealth.

He did not live long to enjoy the remainder of his ill-gotten fortune. So passed husband No. 10.

It was in 1883 that she met again the Emperor Menelik, whom she had known in youth. He was then struggling for the establishment of his kingdom. His domestic life was unhappy. He did not care for his wife and he spent most of his time with a pretty favorite named Bejana.

He contemplated marrying Bejana. Taitou heard this and brought herself to the Emperor's notice by taming a wild horse under his eye. Bejana was sent to a convent and Taitou took her place. A year later she was crowned Empress of Abyssinia.

It is a picturesque dignity to which she succeeded. Abyssinia is the oldest Christian country in the world. It was converted by the apostle Philip, who sent a missionary to Candace, Queen of Ethiopia, another name for Abyssinia. The church has been established there ever since. Its services are performed with ceremonies of great interest to the archæologist and but little understood.

Of equal interest is the fact that Abyssinia represents the ancient biblical kingdom of Sheba and the well-founded tradition that Menelik is descended from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. The portion of Abyssinia known as Shoe remains the old name Sheba.

An old manuscript has recently been discovered by M. Hugues Lereux, which tells the story of the queen of Sheba's visit to King Solomon from the Abyssinian point of view. Magda, Queen of Sheba, it appears, visited King Solomon and found him exceedingly witty and pleasant.

The King wished her to make a longer stay in his palace and she consented on condition that he should treat her respectfully. Solomon agreed to this on condition that she should take nothing that belonged to him in the palace. The King then gave her food at supper that made her exceedingly thirsty. Later, when she needed water, she went to the King's room and took it, and thus released him from his pledge.

After returning to Sheba the Queen had a son, who was named Menelik. According to tradition he went to Jerusalem in the time of David and was there crowned King of Ethiopia.

The modern descendant or this ancient Menelik has been universally regarded as the ablest of African native rulers. Since she married Taitou in 1883 she has been his constant adviser. He wisely resisted all attempts of Europeans to gain a foothold in his country, but it is said that he would have made some concessions to the Italians after they had invaded his country if it had not been for Taitou.

She was always for fighting to the bitter end. "Kill! Kill! Kill!" was the advice she gave to Menelik. He was guided by her. The Italians, weakened by the tropical climate and surprised at the strength of the savage enemy, gave way everywhere. At Adowa 10,000 of them were killed or taken prisoner, and they lost every foothold in Abyssinia.

Menelik and Taitou then enjoyed a long period of prosperity. A year ago the old Emperor fell dangerously ill. It was reported that Taitou had poisoned him, a report strengthened by her previous matrimonial experience.

The Abyssinian chiefs combined to deprive her of power. Little Lidj Tassou (Prince Jesus), Menelik's grandson through his only daughter, was made emperor.

To-day Menelik, paralyzed, lives in retirement with Taitou, but she is still the power behind the throne. The position of Lidj Yassou is an uneasy one.

"WHY I CAN COME BACK"

Listen to May Yohe, Who, Stripped of Two Husbands and the "Hope Diamond Curse," Tells How Her "Sufferings" and Her "Ripened Mind" Will Redeem Her as an Actress.

By May Yohe.

May Yohe in a Phase of Her Oregon "Simple Life."

MAY YOHE coming back!

Is she restored to the bosom of Father Abraham?

But—perhaps. In her own statement printed on this page, she says that, stripped of the fortune in jewels that remained to her after she eloped with Captain Bradlee Strong and was divorced by her husband, Lord Francis Hope a year or two of leading the "simple life" in her cottage home near Portland, Oregon, including reflection and study, have developed her mental powers to the point where a healthy ambition will restore her to her rightful place in the profession of acting.

It is true, as she relates, that May Yohe did earn a worthy position in that profession. It is also true that she sacrificed it to an unworthy ambition to play the great lady in real life. Truest of all, that she invited the censure of all decent people by her wanton treatment of the English nobleman who had married her, and from which her later marriage to the man she eloped with did not redeem her at all.

She alleged that Captain Bradlee Strong robbed her of $250,000 worth of jewels. At that time, through his association with her, this son of an old and respected New York family was abandoned by his people, socially discredited. It is to her discredit that he is now an exile, living by his wits in the Orient.

Suppose it is admitted that now, Captain Strong released from her thrall, her own poverty and this period of "simple life," reflection and study have purged May Yohe or her discreditable past. Suppose, agreed that it is her right to begin her career anew, without prejudice, to be accepted or rejected according to the merits, or demerits, of her fresh endeavors. What are her chances?

She remarks that in her profession great eminence is not to be gained without suffering—and she has suffered.

A more interesting argument in her favor is the fact that she is stripped of all her worldly advantages she gained through lack of fidelity to her art. Prior to her knowledge that she could become the wife of Lord Francis Hope she was worthily a popular actress favorite. Almost as soon as that honor was enabled her to wear the famous "Hope diamond" later sold at auction for the benefit of the Hope estate, her ability and popularity as an actress began to decline.

Coming to this country, with her then husband, she appeared in a New York music hall, dazzling the eyes of her audience with a display of jewels worth probably three-quarters of a million dollars. From the professional acting standpoint her appearance was a flat failure.

Her subsequent appearances as an actress were in the cheapest theatres and without credit or profit to herself or anybody else.

But now she is in poverty. She has reflected and grown strong. All the evils that bound her to her mistress have been severed. The historic, baleful influence of the "Hope Diamond" no longer menaces her.

Is she ready to come back?

FOR more than twenty years I have been lied about. I have been hounded and harassed nearly all my life. No one ever told the truth about me. Now I am going to tell the American public the truth about myself—things never before published.

I suppose the world laughs at the idea of a woman of my age returning to the stage. I suppose it sneers at ambition in a woman of thirty-seven. Before I retire for good and all I will cause those sneers to change to expressions of admiration.

Ambition should be encouraged in every human being. Only the depraved and degenerate are without it. Ambition is the essence of hope, and without hope we are beasts. Ambition is forcing me back to the stage just as love forced me from it. I dare to think that I was one of the most popular women on the stage when I fell in love with Lord Francis Hope, and married him. I dare to think I can make myself just as popular again.

Why not? A woman is not old until she is dead. We are in our mental prime at forty years of age. We have just begun to live as God wants us to live. We have just begun to realize what is life and that it does not mean mere living. But at forty we have lived and we have suffered. And suffering makes the stage plave.

Her Mind Will Bring Her Back.

Some people may figure it out that I deteriorated in my art because the historic baleful influence of the "Hope Diamond" had me in its awful grip.

Well, that's at last is all over.

I am going to try to "come back," but, unlike James J. Jeffries, I will "come back" I will come back because I depend upon my strengthened mentality, not my physical being, to bring me back.

We cannot hope to regain our physical strength, but an unimpaired mentality grows stronger and more acute with age. And so I will show this American people I am a better actress than I was twenty years ago.

First I am going into vaudeville. Not only does vaudeville open a way to the legitimate, where I will go at the first opportunity, but it offers rather excellent remuneration. It may surprise you when I tell you I'm a poor woman and must work for a living. But if I had millions I would return to the stage. My ambition forces me to go back. I can't help myself.

I'd like to tell you the truth about myself. I'd like for you to understand I'm not "the woman you have been told I am. This may sound to you like the last cry of a creature banished from society, still trying to explain. But for myself, I detest explanations. I have made none before. This is my first, and I am making it because I know I deserve a hearing.

I went on the stage when a child. I was born in Philadelphia, and my mother sent me to school in Dresden, Germany, when I was ten years old. I first attended Frauleiu Leonhardi's school, and, by the way, some of my girl chums there were Edita Patton, General Corbin's wife, Louise Corbin, now Countess of Warwick, and a number of others. I stayed two years and a half in Dresden and then entered a convent in Paris. I was sixteen years old when I went home, and, kid-like, I immediately engaged myself to the second officer of the ship. Of course, my mother soon saw to it that that engagement was broken off.

My voice was low and rich, and some news of its quality had travelled to Philadelphia. There, as a girl of not more than sixteen, I was engaged to sing a contralto solo in St. Andrew's church. On my first appearance I created a sensation I'll never forget. It seemed as if thousands of persons had turned and were staring at me. I was frightened half to death, but it was pleased withal.

The hit I made in little, old St. Andrew's caused me to go on the stage. It turned my head. I saw no reason why, if church folks liked my singing, should not those who went to the theatre like it, too. I went to Mrs. John Drew, whom I knew, and told her of my aspirations. She told me to learn some poem and then come to her and recite for her. I learned the "Painter of Saville." I know it yet by heart. I'll never forget it.

I remember now that I was seventeen when I went one day to Mrs. Drew and recited the "Painter of Saville." She advised me to go to some theatrical manager and recite for him. So I went to New York. I decided I would call on Augustin Daly and A. M. Palmer, who was well known at the time. I went to Daly first, recited my "Painter of Saville" and he straightway offered me $7.50 a week. I was to play the part of a serving maid, hold a tray, say "yes" and "no" with great dramatic effect, and wear a little black dress and white apron.

She Scorned Daly's Offer.

Not so for the great contralto who had stirred the congregation at St. Andrew's—nay! In great disgust this seventeen-year-old miss went to see Mr. Palmer. And to him I recited the "Painter of Saville." He offered me $15 a week—me, the great contralto—huh! Again, nay!

I went back to Philadelpha and was quite content to stay at home and sing in St. Andrew's. But it so happened that good, old John Russell was playing his company at one of the theatres. I heard that Jennie Yeamans, who played the leading role, was ill, and I speeded myself down to see Mr. Russell. He said he would try my voice, but had no one to play for me. I remember now how I bounced to the piano and told him I would play for myself.

I don't remember what I sang for him, but it was some selection with which I was familiar. And I knew that when I reached a certain note well along in the piece, my voice would crack. I had never been able to take that note. So I bravely played and sang until just before I reached the note. Then I turned around to Mr. Russell and calmly announced:

"Well, sir, you've heard enough of my voice. You can engage me now or I'll sing no more."

He said he would give me $60 a week. Bargained with him, but, of course, I took the place. During the years that followed I played with Charley Reed, Willie Collier, Henry Donnelly, Georgie Girard, Jimmy Johnson, Helen Reimer, Sadie Kirby, Katherine B. Howe and a score of others. In fact, I played with almost every well-known actor of the present day.

While playing in New York I met Lord Francis Hope. We first saw each other at a luncheon party in the Hoffman House. He sailed for England the next day, and mother and I sailed in about two weeks. I opened in "The Magic Opal" in London, and enjoyed a great success. Then Ivan Caryl, [illegible] K. Sims and Cecil Raleigh Girard organized on a new play called "Christopher Columbus," and I played that for months. It was while playing Columbus that I grew to know Lord Francis Hope better. He dazzled me, and I immediately fell in love with him. But I did not forsake the stage for him. During the Summer months we lived at his estate in Ireland, on which is Blarney Castle. We were supremely happy.

Lord Francis Hope is all that a man should be. If I thought to-day that there was a man such as he 10,000 miles away and would marry me I would go to him. I loved Lord Hope dearly, but I awoke too late. He's married again and has children. I wish him all the joy and happiness in the world, for he deserves it.

Eloped with Captain Strong.

For many nights I scored a great triumph in "Christopher Columbus." Then I played for three months in a translation of "Mlle. Nitouche" and incidentally gave the gala performance of that piece, attended by the Duke of York and Mary, now King and Queen of England, the night before they were married. Then I played in "Dandy Dick Wittington," "The Lady Slavey," a revival of "Christopher Columbus," in my own theatre, The Lyric, in London again; and in a revival of "Mlle. Nitouche" and in "The Belle of Cairo," in the Court Theatre.

Then Lord Hope and I took a trip around the world, consuming more than a year. We visited the crowned heads of half of the countries of the world and I spent one of the most enjoyable periods of my life at the home of Edna Wallace Hopper's mother in San Leandro, California. We went East by rail to New York, and in 1900 eight years after I married Lord Hope, while we were going back to England on the Oceanic I met Captain Bradley Putnam Strong, son of William L. Strong, who was Mayor of New York City for two terms.

Captain Strong was big, and really strong and handsome. He was an aide to President McKinley and veteran of the war in the Philippines—but about my elopement with Strong I would rather say nothing.

We were married in the Orient, and there we lived together—in Manila, in Yokohama, in Hong Kong, in Singapore and in half a dozen other places.

Why did I leave Strong and get a divorce from him in Oregon a month or so ago? I left him because I wouldn't support him. When I married him I found him the most dissolute being alive. I'm not a prude about him. It makes me nervous. He will not work, although he is practically penniless. I left him because I had tolerated him and provided for him as long as I could. He is still in the Orient.

Yet I would marry again. If I could find a good man with clean habits, who would attract me I would marry him in a minute. Even though two of my matrimonial ventures have proved failures, I'm still a firm believer in marriage. I don't think any one should live a lonely life.

May Yohe—from a Recent Photograph.

Most of us do, but I believe married people sin less than others.

Oscar Wilde, Lily Langtry and I were sitting one day in a cafe in London chatting. We were talking of sin. Those of you who have seen Wilde during his lifetime will remember that he had bad teeth, and, knowing it, kept his mouth closed over which was presumably between Langtry and myself. But I can remember now, with his elbow on the table and one hand over his mouth, mumbling in his dry, sarcastic voice:

"Eve created sin; Cleopatra kept it up, and, I am sure, my dear Lily, that sin in the future will be safe in your hands."

We had happy times in England then. Every one was lovely to me. Such good times and folly did we have at Sir Arthur Sullivan's birthday parties. It seemed funny to me at first that such an old man should give a party on every birthday. There was Josie Sadler, Marie Tempest, Francis Leighton, and a thousand others. I don't know where all of them are now, but I would dearly love to see them once more.

Would it bore you to hear about my little camp out here in the wilderness, and of my dogs and cats and horses, and Joe, who is my cook?

Metzger, where I live, is an interurban station about twenty minutes' ride from Portland, Oregon. Last Summer I bought two acres of ground, blocks away from neighbors, right in the midst of a wilderness of giant trees. I've built up my little tent home, and when at night the cougars scream and the wildcats moan I really live with old Mother Nature.

I have my dogs, Jock and Cinders and Peaches and Billy; and my horses—and for them I had a teat stable built—and my cats—just like an old crane—and when I show you Americans once again that I am a real actress, I am coming back here to live out my life.

I am here all alone, with only two servants, Joe, my cook—a dear, old German who worships me—and my Japanese boy, whom I've had for eight years. My twins have been raised under the trees with the giant trunks of several shooting up through the enclosures.

So endeth the first chapter in the life of May Yohe. Soon will be May Yohe, and not Lady Francis Hope, who may bow to you over the footlights ere long.

"Too Big Hats; Too Little—and Just Right Hats"

The New Angle for the Picture Hat

An Exaggeration of the Turban Toque.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London and the foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion page for this newspaper.

"Lucile's" New York establishment is at 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

I SHALL have not the slightest sympathy with any woman who does not look her best and most bewitching during the next few months. For she will only have herself to blame for any failure in fascination seeing that she can have a choice of models so wonderfully and accommodatingly varied that, assuredly, she and every one else can be suited to perfection by one or the other. For that "extremes meet" in reality, and in the fashions as well as in the proverb is here more practically proved by the startling contrasts in styles, while moreover, much favor is also—and fortunately—promised for the "happy medium" effects which are often overlooked.

This is particularly notable in the case of the new millinery whose first phase is represented by the closely smoothed turban toque, whose aspect is distinctly Oriental, and whose correct pose—set well down on the head and practically hiding the hair completely—is suggested to you by a sketch. This fancy is lovely when filmy folds of chiffon bring together two or three cleverly contrasted colors—vivid blues, softened by deep purple, being in evidence in this particular model. Where there are further suggestions of rose and gold and black in the Oriental broidering wrought on a background of blue, which shows between the pale folds just at the right side, where, too, a narrow edging of sable is in decorative evidence. These turbans are, in my opinion, supremely becoming to the woman whose features are fairly regular as a further necessity for their successful wear being the closely coiled "Parisian" coiffure. There is a somewhat too marked tendency at the moment to crowd the head with clusters of curls in reaction, I suppose, after the straitened style which has been in vogue for the past few seasons—but the wise and smart woman will still be mindful to the small head effect, on the largest hats must be drawn down over the face, any curls or coils being disastrous effects.

These large hats, let me now, so that the contrast may be duly and fully impressed upon you, introduce you to the other extreme of modish millinery, as represented by that mode of smoothly stretched gray satin whose wide curve of brim is all underlined with powder blue and edged with sable. Introduced midway between the crown and the brim is a wide band of blue and black striped satin, through which is threaded at one side a broad ribbon of softest vieux rose satin, the subsequent passing of one end against the blue of the brim lining being distinctly pleasing in effect, while the other end is drawn over the outward softness of gray satin, and both are eventually looped together far down at the back.

Their length rather than width is the chief characteristic of this hat of black satin, against whose lining of beautiful sapphire blue velvet the hair and face will be silhouetted most satisfactorily. Blue is enabled outwardly, too about the crown. Those upstanding and graceful Lancer plumes being in delightful "dead" tones of gray and mauve and pink.

Still another change—and contrast—now, and next you see an example of the definitely and demurely small hat, modelled in blue-green satin with little brown broidered branches bearing a light and lovely burden of roses whose folded silken petals show severe deepening but always delicate shades of pink. Only some tiny pink tipped, green guarded, buds are permitted to put in an appearance on the slight upturning of the brim at the left side, where they have a background of pale mauve satin matching the ribbon with is looped around the crown and passed under the brim at either side, just a few lightly scattered roses being wrought on its lengthy ends, while a circlet of diminutive flowers shows higher up.

The last hat I am making at the moment, in satin, of old blue shading, with a brighter blue banded round the crown and lining the quaintly curved brim, the edging of sable softening its ends most becomingly. Roses of graduated sizes and shadings, all wrought in folded silk, are festooned across the front, their tiniest buds meeting at the back of the crown. Later, however, I shall substitute soft beaver felt for the satin without making any alteration in the trimming, these silken flowers, whose primly folded petals do not profess to follow Nature's guidance, either in the way of color or contour, being the predestined adornment for fur and felt headgear throughout the Winter.

However, to go back to our hat and its ribbon trimming. This is generally completed by an upstanding bow, set rather toward the left side, its many loops showing a trimming of an entirely different color. Nothing could well be simpler and some misguided man and husband might be tempted in consequence to observe that this lack of elaboration must mean a corresponding drop in expense. Whereas—as they will discover in due course—a success of simplicity can only be achieved by the expert, and is therefore likely to be somewhat costly. Simplicity is the keynote too in most of the gowns I have designed for the coming theatrical season. It is well illustrated in the dress of white embroidered net which I made for Miss Pauline Chase to wear in "Our Miss Gibbs." But to return to the hats.

A "Lucile" Dress of White Embroidered Net, Worn by Miss Pauline Chase in "Our Miss Gibbs."

Similar shapes are also being made on beaver felt, with an apparently colorless drapery of velvet for their one adornment, beige or black, being one contrast which I can cordially recommend, while then, again, the blending of blue and black—if so be the blue is carefully chosen—is altogether admirable in its results.

Of all the fabrics which are being used for millinerial purposes, satin is perhaps the most prominent, and it certainly has this in its favor, that it looks equally seasonable at any time of the year.

A new shape which combines the best qualities of hat and bonnet and is more generally becoming than the actual bonnet, which only suits the obviously youthful or admittedly elderly, being modelled in black satin, its slightly curved brim being sufficiently supple to be adaptable, while, then, the sweeping softness of a veil of white chiffon is held in place at either side by tiny sets of white cameries. This particular and pretty fruit is, in fact, the only rival just now of the aforementioned roses, and as its shining surface does not easily retain the dust, it is a sensible as well as a smart addition to any motoring model. A wreath of cherries set round a closely fitting felt hat serves both to decorate and to divide the enveloping veil, and there are many other effective variations which can be arranged for the would-be possessor of some motor millinery which shall be both pretty and practical.

Soft satin caps of Turkish tendencies are also being offered for this particular purpose, but though when well adjusted they have a certain piquancy of effect, the appearance of the hair when once they have been removed is not such as to induce their wear on a second occasion. The soft and supple bonnet of gauged and corded silk or satin is, of course, calculated to do its protective work quite well without disarranging the hair, so those who are suited by this form of headgear should be specially thankful, and may make note of softly-colored feathers as a new substitute for the silk.

It might also be well to warn you against the black and white stripes of silk linings, which are being added to some of the latest and largest hats, as, though they are certainly striking in effect, they are too assertive.

One word also to those of you who would like to wear the aforementioned Oriental turban toque, but who may find their flatness somewhat trying. You can always give them—and yourself—an added importance by adjusting a big brush aigrette at the correct angle at ends and front and fastening it in position by a jewelled ornament; while then again you can be equally fashionable—and possibly more fascinating—in one of the bigger toques, whose full crown of velvet or tulle is caught in with a twist of vividly-colored satin, a bordering of fur coming finally against the hair.

Truly, you see, there is an infinite variety of style, and, consequently of choice, and you can take advantage of this even if you are only at the moment wanting a new hat for immediate wear and are not desirous of deciding between the rival merits of the forthcoming Autumn models.

"Why I Keep On Wearing 'Em"

By Pauline Chase.

("Polly, The Pink Pajama Girl")

Miss Chase Says This Odd Costume Is Not So Comfortable.

"Why They're Comfortable. I Like Comfort."

MY pink pajamas are now nine years old—I mean my famous ones—my pink pajamas that the newspapers won't let me forget, and which I don't want to forget, anyway.

Why do I keep on wearing 'em? Why, they're comfortable. I like comfort—always did. But it was a sheer accident that I took to wearing those particular pink ones.

I was sixteen then, and I blessed that accident. Now I am twenty-four, with the desire for comfort even more firmly fixed in me, and those pink ones, accordingly, are more precious than ever.

When I'm sixty it is quite probable that I would not part with 'em at any price.

At sixteen, you know, one is just emerging from childhood—that state of semi-savagery wherein you think mostly of eating and sleeping and being generally miserable. From a [illegible] age pajamas had contributed to my comfort.

And so when I was engaged for "The Liberty Belles," and found there was to be a bedroom scene, "Huh," said I to myself, "this is so bad; here's where my pajamas come in."

In the scene [illegible] several girls were to tumble about and have a pillow fight in their nightgowns.

"Pshaw!" I thought, with my natural and acquired scorn for that garb, [illegible] for that scene.

And I hadn't to wear pink pajamas.

[illegible] asked him to let me be enchanted in shocked surprise. And then inquired the reason of my [illegible] request.

"Why, Polly's range [illegible] more comfortable in them," I answered. "I am used to pajamas and [illegible] about better in them."

"Because I [illegible] pajamas," he answered, doubtfully.

"You [illegible] rehearsal, and got permission to wear them on the opening night.

I wore them on that opening night not with [illegible] audience would pay the least attention to them [illegible] which was what Polly Chase wanted.

I was astonished, the next morning, I awoke and found that I had become a "[illegible] on."

"What a lucky accident," I said to my mother. "I want to buy those pajamas."

As the pair I wore [illegible] other pair, it was not quite plain how I could [illegible] mother, tossing a third pair out of a bureau drawer, said.

"There, you silly child," [illegible] were tears in her eyes. But I could see it [illegible] the kind of smiling tears. They were rainbow tears.

From that time [illegible] lucky color. I have worn pink pajamas and [illegible] pink rose. I have never had a hat in which there was [illegible] plenty of pink frocks in my wardrobe [illegible] my wardrobe and pink ribbons and flowers [illegible] of my wearing pink pajamas on the stage I began [illegible] a sound argument for it. Mamma was always [illegible] psychologist. She said:

"Polly, if you play in the pink [illegible] pajamas you will associate them with the [illegible] of rest. I am going downtown tonight to have a contrast for you—[illegible] you some nightgowns."

So, accepting her judgment, I [illegible] in public. I always wore a pair of pink pajamas when I played Peter [illegible] for six years.

Have you seen "Peter Pan"? [illegible] when the dance was half over I ground across. I danced in them, [illegible] in the pillows, slipped my feet into pillow cases and [illegible] when I played in the dormitory scene.

It was great fun. I felt just as I did [illegible] ago, as though I was having a scene in "The Liberty Belles" nine years [illegible] practical matter of earning great romp. It seemed a frolic, not a [illegible] money.

[illegible] living in the way that brought the [illegible] nes in "Peter Pan" alone. And I have worn pink pajamas a thousand [illegible] in "The Liberty Belles" I must have worn them about three hundred times. I am wearing them again in "Miss Gibbs" because I wished to, and at my own request. I have come back, as I went away, a pink pajama girl, and I hope they will like me as well now as they did then.

It has hurt me very much that some of the papers have said that I was tired of the pink pajamas and wanted to forget them. That is not a mere mistake; it is absolutely and unqualifiedly untrue. Pink pajamas are my mascot. In a few days in which I did not wear them on the stage I always had a pair of them hanging in my dressing room. When I travel I have always a pair of pink pajamas in my trunk. If I were to stop playing in them I should return to wearing them in private.

When I forsake pink pajamas and my humble gratitude to them for my first hit may my good fortune desert me!

A good many of my pink pajamas I have made myself. I always liked to sew, and it was a habit of mine to slip into as few clothes as possible—usually into another pair of pajamas, and work on the pink ones after I got home from the theatre at night. It was always my habit to sit on the bed, cross-legged, as tailors sit, and stitch away at ease. The result was so flagrantly and so instinctive that I have accused myself of having been a tailor in some other existence.

The pink pajamas have been even more popular on the other side than on this. Little children who saw me play "Peter Pan," and even some women and some rude men, used to write me for the pattern. Children bought picture post cards, and, coloring the pajamas in the most remarkable variations of pink, would write me for my autograph.

There was a pink pajama party, a very secret one, in Mayfair, where none but children, myself excepted, wore those garments. I came from a matinee performance of "Peter Pan" in the pajamas and danced the pillow dance for them.

I think one reason that people liked the pink pajamas was that I seemed as I felt, unconscious of them. Once, when I danced before King Edward and Queen Alexandra, I may have wished that I was wearing more seemly garments, but it was only for an instant. The spirit of "Peter Pan" entered into me, and I was indifferent to clothes.

One of my little friends wrote me a misspelled letter, saying she wanted to know why the painters at the National Gallery made all the wheels wear white clothes, when they were any. She said she thought the pink pajamas much prettier. She said she had written Santa Claus, asking him to bring her a pair of pink pajamas for Christmas.

She got them. I made them for her myself and carried them to her, saying that Santa Claus had made me his messenger. She she said she was glad he had, for she had always been afraid of Santa Claus and was afraid of me.

That little girl and I have become great friends. She is nearly as tall as I am, and if her parents had not such a stubborn intention of keeping her there I certainly should adopt her.

There isn't much to tell about me prior to the pink pajama phase. I had been a chorus girl in short skirts, beginning when I came to New York in "The Rounders," being a chorus girl still in "My Lady," and in "The Cadet Girl." Then followed "The Liberty Belles," and opportunity came in the form of a pair of pink pajames, child size.

There isn't much to prophecy about what will succeed my pink pajama phase, for my pink pajama phase will never end. I shall always, in public or private, be the pink pajama girl, even when I become a white-haired pajama girl.

Here now, and for all time to come, I proclaim that I am proud and glad to be Polly, the Pink Pajama Girl. They were, I say it without irreverence, providential pajamas. For I used no praiseworthy foresight in asking to be permitted to wear them. As I said at the beginning, my success grew out of the childish desire to be comfortable.

"Why I Collect Kings and Dukes"

By Mlle Anne Perrey

(Newest Parisian 'Rage')

REALLY, it is most embarrassing. If I am to tell you, as you request, why I collect personally signed photographs of kings and nobility, I must first explain my good fortune in being able to attract their notice.

You can't collect royal personages as you collect paintings, jewels and antiquities. The consent of the collected is necessary—you have to catch your king before you can add him to your collection. You have to attract him, and make him willing to be thus collected.

Well, the newspapers of Paris and London have been a great help. I never realized before that kings read the newspapers. Now I haven't the slightest doubt about it. For it was only a little while after the papers began to print my photographs, and to declare that I was "the daintiest little actress on the London or Paris stage"; that I was "petite" that I was "gay," that I was "pretty" and "accomplished" and "arty" and "full of mischief"—that royalty and nobility began to patronize the theatres where I acted, and to seek my acquaintance.

Now, what is the use of being a collector of anything unless you are able to secure the finest specimens? A real collector scorns duplicates; he will grant room in his collection only to the one genuine and original object, whatever it may be.

Whenever I get this personally signed photograph I put it in my gallery and I always speak of its original as one of my collection.

It is that way with kings, even with dukes and other noblemen. The particular country, estate, castle or palace identifies each of these high personages, making him and his position unique. Therefore, he is worth collecting.

Upon the occasions of his two visits to Paris King Edward honored me with marked attentions.

He invited me to dine with him informally—with him and his dog, for his beloved Caesar, sitting on a chair at the table, made one of the party. Of course I had a chaperone.

A year ago this Summer, when I visited a celebrated German watering place for my vacation, I had no intention of attempting the capture of the Kaiser for my royal collection. I am told that the German Emperor was charmed by the way I lighted a cigarette, and smoked it, while conversing with some friends.

Certainly, those Emperors and Kings know how to do things. Though I was simply an actress the Kaiser knew how to overwhelm me with a sense of his congenial graciousness, while preserving his own imperial dignity to the last bit. Five minutes after we met I was at my ease, fully and laughing as naturally as though among my fellow professionals. The Kaiser seemed delighted—even when I reached the summit of my daring.

"King Alfonso Liked My Spanish Costume."

"This Was the Pose That Made the Kaiser Agree to Add Himself to My Collection of Pa[illegible]."

"Your Imperial Majesty," I said, "are you aware that the Paris newspapers will be saying that I have added you to my collection of royalties?"

"I am delighted with your assurance of that fact," the Kaiser answered, with a laugh. "And if I am interviewed on the subject you may rest assured that I shall not deny the soft impeachment. Here is the signed portrait you ask."

As for King George of Greece, I owe to the frank plaudits of that gracious monarch much of my vogue among royal theatre-goers. His friendly attentions in Paris will always remain among my most agreeable memories.

King Manuel of Portugal is a most engaging royal youth. Besides, his nature is so frankly benevolent that no one with any sense of decency could ever presume on his amiability. Nevertheless I am told that his royal mamma did not quite approve of our camaraderie, and, at that time, was responsible for his rather hurried departure from Paris.

Naturally King Alfonso of Spain is one of the jewels of my royal collection. I am sure he will not object to occupying a place in the catalogue. Of course Alfonso now has grave domestic responsibilities, and one sees little of him. You will remember, however, the time when that throat trouble kept him for several weeks within call of celebrated Paris specialists.

Well, Alfonso did have trouble with his throat, but not grave enough to keep him away from the theatre when I was playing, nor from little informal occasions at which I and my stage friends were guests.

Those little affairs, I am sure, assisted in his cure, for when his queen grew so urgent in her demands that he return to Madrid that he could no longer delay his departure, all his good humor and gaiety [illegible].

Particularly, I shall always cherish the memory of those occasions which enabled me to collect King Haakon of Norway. His Majesty made me many charming gifts which are souvenirs attesting my right to place him in the catalogue. As for the Norwegian, Swedish and Danish princes, who actually refused to be left out of my collection, I can only refer to them collectively, in passing.

I shall have to discuss of the Russian Grand Dukes in the same summary fashion—remember, I am not now writing a big, capacious volume of memoirs. It will have to be the same way with my collection of Italian, Servian, Bulgarian potentates, actual and potential.

Of course, an exception is naturally made in the case of the Duke Abruzzi. I must not phrase it too strongly, however, for that was the period when the American heiress, Miss Elkins, bore a frigid demeanor toward the poor fellow. It is not [illegible], as malicious rascals have had it, that I was responsible for that period of estrangement. I simply added him to my collection, [illegible] that is all.

One disparagement was remark in closing—of collecting [illegible] of mere millionaires, is that royalty shows infinitely better taste in its selection of those jewelled souvenirs which ratify the placing of their names in the catalogue.

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 87—"PACKING THE TEETH"—

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

MME. CAVALIERI'S special investigation of the newest methods of beauty culture made in the beauty ateliers and in the special clinics of Europe resulted last week in a most interesting article on the three-part face mask. She continues the series to-day, handling instructively the topic "Packing the Teeth."

Mme. Cavalieri says that science has discovered that night is the menace time of the teeth, and that the safeguard against the overflow of acid secretions at that unprotected time is packing the teeth. How this is done she tells interestingly and authoritatively on this page.

This foremost authority on beauty gives much attention in this article to the many kinds of toothbrushes, and offers the excellent advice to suit the brush to the mouth. She discusses the value of wood fibre, so long and effectively used by the Egyptians, to cleanse the teeth. Perhaps most valuable of all is the collection of formulae for tooth pastes, powders and lotions with which she concludes her article.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

SCIENCE has discovered that night is the menace time of the teeth, and at the safeguard against the overflow of acid secretions at that unprotected time is packing them. At night the fingbrs are let down and secretions of acid secretion overflow into the mouth [illegible] discovering the enamel. [illegible] secretions are absorbed [illegible] tired by the exercise of eating [illegible] ta king. At night the teeth are at their mercy.

Dental physicians have concluded that the acid condition that forms in the mouth at night can only be [illegible] and the [illegible] has just been solved. The new and successful process is to pack the teeth before retiring.

The teeth are first thoroughly cleaned with any good tooth paste. The paste I personally prefer to others because fewer of them contain the grit that wears away the enamel. After the teeth have been brushed and the mouth rinsed with any of the mouth washes, for which I will later give the formula, the teeth are ready for their packing.

[illegible] powder of several [illegible] recipes which I will [illegible] If the interstices between the teeth are small no floss is needed. If large [illegible] cotton will be used in connection with the tooth powder or charcoal.

The acid secretions [illegible] mean an [illegible] a tendency [illegible] every silly [illegible] the spaces between the teeth a soda [illegible] percent. If the teeth [illegible] all night or [illegible] the morning [illegible] hours and so almost [illegible] if then are large [illegible] the [illegible] filled with cotton dipped [illegible] the [illegible] powder or bicarbonate of soda. The cotton will be needed to keep the powder in place.

Packing neutralizes the acids and preserves the teeth. It is one of the most recent and successful devices yet invented for the care and preservation of the teeth.

Dentistry, too, is a new discovery, and the application of [illegible] wood fibre is one of the most useful [illegible] for cleaning the teeth. Cleopatra, who charmed two emperors and wedded a king, never used a tooth brush, but regarded the teeth [illegible] as [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] into the [illegible] of [illegible] between the teeth [illegible] The brush part is used for brushing the teeth. The flat part, dipped in powder, is used for cleaning [illegible] between the teeth. Powder may be used with these wooden brushes, although the [illegible] bristle brush gives a beautiful, shining white with a wooden brush and warm water.

A dentist, acting upon this suggestion, invented the [illegible] of Pyrozone, a [illegible] which is known that the Pyrozone [illegible] of tooth brushes have during the [illegible] for the [illegible] of these teeth brushes made of shredded wood. The [illegible] part, as large as a five-cent piece, is fastened into a vertical handle of nickel. This cleansing part of the brush can be removed from the handle after each cleansing if desired and can be replaced by another consignment of wood, though this is a rather expensive process.

Science, applied to the problem of the teeth, has found the tooth brush as we have been using it most of our lives, inadequate. The straight brush reaches only a comparatively small number of the teeth. A brush to effectively reach every part of the teeth must be curved.

Mme Lina Cavalieri.

Powdered chalk	½ oz.
Essence of pi ka	½ dram
Tincture of [illegible]	1 dram
Pulverized rock alum	10 grains
Pulverized myrrh	4 scruples
Pulverized juniper gum	2 scruples

Rectified spirits	3 drams
Liquid honey	1 oz.
Oil of cloves	½ dram

Any powder or paste containing myrrh or quinine is tonic for the gums. This lotion is an excellent mouth wash, besides being tonic for teeth and gums:

Spirits of camphor,	½ teaspoonful
Tincture of myrrh,	½ teaspoonful
Borax	1 oz.
Alcohol, 95 per cent.	3 quarts
Anise seed	100 grams
Cinnamon	15 grams
Cloves	12 grams
Quinquina	10 grams
Essence of mint	30 grams
Cochineal	10 grams

"I have a great lot of superfluous hair," continues the Oneida correspondent. "My arms are just covered. It is easy, but on my face and neck. As I cannot [illegible] with any of these I rate the substance on for a few seconds. Then wash it off. Unless the hair is stiff and obstinate, an application of fine wood ashes mixed to a paste with water removes the hair for a time.

[illegible] as to me what to do [illegible] has not grown under the [illegible] pay. [illegible] general debility [illegible] the [illegible] rather [illegible] have good [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

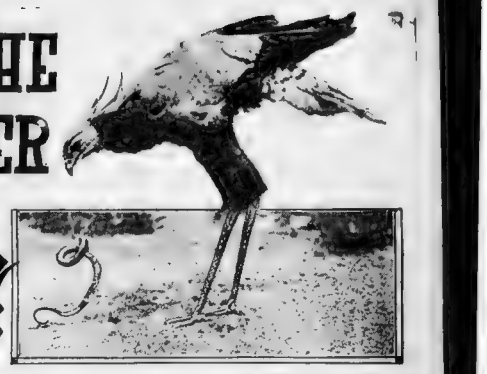
The Mystery Of The Gila Monster

Is It Poisonous or Is It Not? Odd Experiments Upon One of the Ugliest and Oddest of American Lizards.

Testing the Monster's Bite on a Rabbit.



The Secretary Bird Killing a Snake. The Introduction of This Bird Into America Has Been Suggested as a means of Killing Off the Gila Monsters.

THE Gila monster is the most famous lizard of North America, but whether it is also the most dangerous or the most harmless is still a matter of controversy among naturalists and scientists. In fact, as well-known men as Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, the physician and novelist; Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles in the New York Zoological Park, Dr Gustav Langenhorst, Dr. Edward D. Cope, professor of vertebrate zoology in the University of Pennsylvania; Dr. George S. Huntington, professor of anatomy, Columbia's University and Dr. Gunther, of the British Museum, are arrayed on one side of the question against such men as Dr William T. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological Park; Dr. R. W. Shufelt, curator of reptiles in the National Museum at Washington; Saul N Stephan, superintendent of the Cincinnati Zoological Gardens, and Mr. Darwin L. Platt, the well-known osteologist, of Rochester, N. Y., on the other.

To settle the question once for all a series of experiments have just been conducted at Detroit, Mich., and the results would seem to indicate that the Gila monster is a very much maligned creature.

The Gila monster is a lizard inhabiting the sandy deserts of Arizona, getting its name from the Gila River, which flows through its home country. A large specimen is about a foot and a half long, and three inches thick. This lizard is one of the most showy reptiles found in this country, its body being covered with small glassy beads of jet black and bright orange yellow arranged in the most picturesque patterns, like some Navajo design.

The Bitten Rabbit, Chicken and Guinea Pig—All Well Three Hours After the Bite.

The Gila Monster, the Most Famous Reptile of North America

His has wicked little beady eyes square building jaws, warty skin and a tail like a bologna sausage. He has been likened to a handful of gunpowder split on a plate of scrambled eggs. His habit of hissing when disturbed and of biting and snapping angrily like a mad dog has earned for him a very bad reputation. In fact, among the western Indians and the Mexicans he is regarded as a veritable messenger of death from the lower world.

It was the Indians who first said that his bite was poisonous. The Mexicans added a little to the tradition and declared that no man bitten by a "monster" had ever recovered, and that death occurred very soon after the bite. These ideas were enlarged upon, and the belief soon became general that even the breath of the monster was fatal to any living creature upon which it fell. These traditions were more or less corroborated by the fact that a number of cowpunchers at different times having been bitten by the reptile, who, or death was caused by the venom supposed to be emitted by the Gila monster or, as has frequently been asserted, by the great quantities of vile whiskey which the victim imbibed in an effort to ward off the effects of the snake poison has never been satisfactorily determined.

At different times experiments have been tried by professors in Eastern universities, but with varied results. Chickens and rabbits bitten by the monster itself have recovered, while animals inoculated with the saliva of the lizard, either fresh from the mouth or after having been dried and then dissolved, have succumbed.

On behalf of those who have always held out for the harmlessness of the reptile, it is pointed out that in nature there is a reason for everything, and that is why the bite of the Gila monster should be poisonous. Venomous serpents employ their venom to subdue and kill their prey, but the Gila feeds Tucson, Ariz. He permitted several different kinds of horned frogs to bite several of his lizards and has no possible use for ferent chickens. The chickens survived. frogs or poison-bearing glands.

It is true that the Gila has enlarged sub-maxillary glands and grooved teeth, which certainly "look suspicious," but these may be for some other and it subcutaneously into the circulation of [illegible] experimenters to bite the subjects. None of the subjects died. This scientist, Dr. H. C. Yarrow in 1888, then connected with the United States National Museum, made further experiments with the saliva or "venom" of this lizard, injecting it subcutaneously into the circulation of mammals or birds without producing harmful results.

The latest experiments, at Detroit, Mich., were under the charge of Dr. Edward Kime of the local clinical laboratory; Mr E. F. Watson, an animal dealer of Detroit, Mr. D. S. Sullivan, of the Edwards Animal Show, and Mr. W. H. Sheak. A rabbit and a half dozen guinea pigs were used as subjects.

The lizards had been in captivity for some time, and were rather sluggish. They were carried some distance on a hot day in a street car in a leather handbag, but were put by a warm stove and soon became so active that one of them began snapping at the feet of the experimenters.

"Dr. Raker suggested," declared Mr. Sheak, "that the wing of the young Plymouth-rock chicken which was had taken with us, would be the spot most accessible to the circulation. So the feathers were removed and the "monster" permitted to take hold. The vise-like grip of the jaws held the wing for six minutes. When the fowl was released, there was considerable dilation and darkening of the veins and arteries in the region of the wound, but nothing more than might have been produced by any ordinary [illegible]

Another [illegible] was permitted to take a bite, and [illegible] one held on for four minutes, the ear was torn and bleeding freely, but there were no other results. A [illegible] was made to bite upon a piece of glass. There remained upon the glass a few possibly a scant [illegible] and transparent [illegible], so far as the [illegible] from pure water.

[illegible] was then permitted to [illegible] a three pig. The [illegible] did [illegible] screaming, as if [illegible] from great pain. The reptile [illegible] Gila. But no pathological [illegible] followed.

A [illegible] of rats, all three subjects [illegible] were placed upon a scale and photographed. At the end of [illegible] hours there was no [illegible] that a particle of venom had [illegible] the [illegible] bites.

Dr. Eric Marshall describes a remarkable [illegible] which he had witnessed. The party, under Mr. [illegible] and a pig sacrificed. [illegible] grown lizard, on each of which an [illegible] ostrich, were led to the altar, while the women, plastered in wet mud from head to foot, kept up a tremendous wailing. They don [illegible] about except to [illegible] themselves on the dead bodies, wailing loudly in ecstasies of grief.

Afterwards there was [illegible] the women and girls, many of them [illegible] quite prettily, chasing the men up to [illegible] riverside and into the water. "This is one of the few ceremonies," Dr. Marshall said, "when the women are allowed to beat the men, the latter not being permitted to retaliate. The dance is finally begun in so bold that they stormed the camp.

Of the natives at Wakatimi, where a base camp was formed, one of the explorers writes: "They are [illegible] in thousands, and at present all are friendly and all hideously ugly. Dress they don't bother about, except a tiny strip of cloth. With the exception of one or two of the young girls, the women, too, are hideous, but a few of the children look quite nice."

Within a week of landing, Mr. Winfred Stalker, one of the explorers, lost his life. He left camp alone to go shooting, and losing himself, either became delirious with fever or went mad. His body was found in a creek, the great [illegible] face and body indicating that he had been running through the undergrowth.

A Race of Dwarfs Who Are Handsome.

DETAILS of the discovery by British explorers in New Guinea of a [illegible] are contained in reports which have reached London from the native festival, including a war to experiment. The party, under Mr. [illegible] Walter [illegible] ornithologist, is exploring the largest unknown area on the world's surface.

The men of the new race were first seen by Captain C. G. Rawling. The meeting is described as [illegible]

Captain Rawling was making a short trip into the mountains. While proceeding with his Papuans the leading man gave a yell and dashed ahead. There were visions of pig, but the quarry turned out to be two hillmen who, after a long chase through the jungle, were caught. They were dreadfully frightened, but their faces assumed a mask of less calm expression when their bags and spears had been returned to them and they were presented with some beads.

Captain Rawling then offered them a cigarette, but nothing would induce them to smoke. Doubtless they thought it was poisoned. They were naked except for a grass kilt and a big ant, a thing strung round the waist. They were four feet three inches and four feet six inches in height respectively.

"A few days after, when entering the [illegible] Rawling spotted two more [illegible] forming the river below and a quarter of a mile away. The men accompanying the explorer crouched like cats and, taking to the torrent, gave chase. The river made too much noise for the hillmen to hear their pursuers until they were cut off. The dwarfs fought valiantly nevertheless, but were at last dragged to the shore. On being measured they were found to be 4 feet 2 inches and 4 feet 4 inches, so it looks as if all these people actually belong to a tribe of dwarfs similar to those of Central Africa, but good-looking and well proportioned."

One of the explorers says that it is difficult to make out whether the Papuans are cannibals or not. Heads of the enemy slain in battle are kept strung from the ceiling of their houses, but it is impossible to say whether the bodies have been eaten.

Replenish with "Holeproof"

Get a Box of Six Pairs to Tide You Over the Fall And They Are Guaranteed to Last Till Spring.

AND You will get the greatest hosiery satisfaction you ever received, unless you have worn Holeproof before.

Then you will have known what it means to enjoy Holeproof luxury—that complete satisfaction of wearing soft, light, stylish, unmended hose.

Holeproof are the original guaranteed hose—and have been made by one concern continuously for 32 years. Holeproof have been selling under a six months' guarantee for 12 years.

Their popularity has resulted in a score of imitators trying to follow the trail that Holeproof has blazed They imitated our guarantee—but without our 32 years' experience, our fine yarns and our unequalled skill, they couldn't duplicate the real Holeproof quality—style and fit

So for your own sake we ask you to be careful. The genuine Holeproof costs the same as the imitation. Don't just ask for "guaranteed" hose—say "Holeproof." Then look on the toe for our mark.

FAMOUS

MISSES' SAILOR DRESS.

NO. 8768.

The long blouse fits smoothly over the shoulders, and is finished with a flat collar trimming and a standing collar that may be omitted.

The knickerbockers are of the type provided for suits of this character. Galatea, chambrey, gingham, percale, serge or flannel may be used

The pattern is cut in three sizes—2, 4 and 6 years. It requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch material for the 4-year size

NO. 8771.

FOR linen, galatea, gingham, chambrey or cashmere this model is equally appropriate. The plait at the sides adds to the skirt fulness. The shield may be omitted

The pattern is cut in five sizes—4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 4½ yards of 27-inch material for the 8-year size.

To obtain either of these two desirable patterns, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail it, with 10 cents for each in silver or stamps, to

RESOLVED THAT

RAIN IS ONE OF THOSE BLESSINGS THAT WE DONT APPRECIATE—HUH. WE DONT APPRECIATE ANY BLESSINGS UNLESS THEY COME. JUST WHEN WE WANT THEM. WE PRAY FOR A THING THAT WE DONT NEED THEN WHEN IT DOES COME WE CURSE IT BECAUSE IT COMES ON A DAY WHEN WE WANT TO GO TO A PICNIC. YOU MAY PRAY TO GOD TO SPADE YOUR GARDEN BUT HE WONT DO IT. HE WILL DO SOMETHING THATS MORE IMPORTANT, HE WILL BRING RAIN & SUNSHINE AND MAKE THINGS GROW FOR YOU. WORK IS THE PRAYER THATS ANSWERED EVERY TIME. RAIN MAKES US APPRECIATE THE SUNSHINE AND VICE VERSA. AND EACH ONE IS AS NECESSARY AS THE OTHER. "INTO EACH LIFE SOME RAIN MUST FALL" "SOME DAYS MUST BE DARK AND DREARY" THATS WHAT MAKES US THINK. MONOTONY KILLS ANYTHING. TRY TO BE REAL GOOD & KIND FOR A CHANGE, BROTHER. YOU WILL FIND THATS ONE THING YOU CAN STAND A GOOD DEAL OF - LIKE HEALTH
